

This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Overseers—Poor-rate, Defence of—Costs.

A poor-rate was made by the overseers, and appealed against at the Special Sessions, when several objections were sustained, and alterations consequently made by the Justices. The overseers defended the rate, and charged in their accounts, 85l. 8s. 8d. for the expenses of two surveyors and the attorney, upon that occasion. These items were allowed by the auditor of the union, and subsequently by a majority of the parishioners at a vestry. At the annual presentment of overseers' accounts to the Justices in Special Sessions, these items were objected to and disallowed; and the Court of Quarter Sessions, on appeal, confirmed that decision:—Held, that this was a question of discretion for the Court of Quarter Sessions, with the exercise of which, generally, this Court would not interfere; and, secondly, that although after allowance a rate could not be abandoned, so as to destroy its existence, by parish officers, yet they might so far abandon it as not to incur expenses at the sessions, in support of it.

The defendants in this rule were the overseers of the parish of Warfield, in the county of Berks, and had appealed to the Quarter Sessions against an order made in Special Sessions, whereby the sum of 85l. 8s. 8d.

was disallowed, and ordered to be struck out of their accounts. That order was confirmed by the Court of Quarter Sessions, who stated the following, amongst other facts, in a case sent to this court.

The parish of Warfield was included in the East Hampstead Union, and in consequence of a representation from the guardians of the union, a new valuation of the parish was ordered by the Poor Law Commissioners, under sect. 3. of the Poor Law Amendment Act. A surveyor was appointed, and a new valuation made by him, and delivered to the guardians of the union, who forwarded it to the parish of Warfield. Several objections were made to the valuation, principally on the ground of inequality, and it was twice returned to the surveyor, and by him to the parish, with some few alterations; but the parish of Warfield was still dissatisfied with and refused to adopt it. In consequence of this, the defendants proceeded to make a new valuation upon their own responsibility, with a view to the assessment of the rateable property, in compliance with the statute 6 & 7 Will. 4. c. 96. Notice was given that this new assessment was made, and it was inspected by a good many persons without objection. The defendants subsequently made a rate upon this assessment, against which certain persons appealed to the Justices in Special Sessions, on the ground of inequality, unfairness, and incorrectness of the valuation. At the hearing, an amendment was made by the Justices, in the assessment of ten persons, some of them being raised, and the others lowered to a trifling amount. The defendants attended and supported their rate by evidence, and afterwards inserted in their accounts the following items, for expenses of witnesses, then incurred:—

To Mr. Trumper, land surveyor	32	11	10
To Francis Hawkes, land surveyor ..	31	0	0
To Charles Cowe, solicitor	21	16	10

The auditors of the union allowed these items in the accounts of the overseers; and at a vestry meeting holden afterwards, upon an objection made, a majority of the parishioners then present resolved, that the expenses should be allowed. The defendants afterwards attended with their accounts, before the Justices in special sessions, under the 50 Geo. 3. c. 49, when an objection being made to the above items, they were ordered to be struck out. The Quarter Sessions confirmed that order upon appeal. The question stated for the opinion of this Court was, whether the said sum of 85*l.* 8*s.* 8*d.* ought to have been allowed to the then appellants, in their accounts as overseers, under the circumstances above stated: if it ought, the said order should be quashed; if it ought not, the same to be confirmed.

Carrington and Bros., appeared to support the order of Sessions, but in consequence of an intimation from the Court, that by the questions proposed, the discretion exercised by the court below, (which it was not denied belonged to it,) was submitted to the consideration of this Court, that being a matter with which they ought not to interfere,—

Tyrwhitt, contra, was called upon.—The Court of Quarter Sessions having stated all the facts upon the face of the case sent up, and having in effect asked for the assistance of this Court upon it, and suspended their own judgment, this Court will review and decide upon the circumstances—The King v. Ardington (1).

[LORD DENMAN, C.J.—Where by their statement they have wished us to review the circumstances, and it has clearly appeared they were wrong, we have done so.]

spect of which appeal the disallowed items of expense were incurred, was against a poor-rate, which the overseers are bound to make—The Queen v. the Earl of Yarborough (2). These were items of charge necessarily incurred by the overseers in their official capacity, and should, therefore, be allowed in their accounts—The King v. Gwyer (3). No misconduct is imputed, but on the contrary, both the auditor and the vestry allowed these items.

[COLERIDGE, J.—Must not a question, as to whether overseers are to have their costs in defending a rate, depend upon the circumstances of each case? Who can decide that so well, as those who have the matter before them?]

The overseers are thus placed in a very difficult position, as, whatever errors may be discovered in a rate, (though in this case they were very trifling,) it cannot be abandoned—The King v. the Justices of Cambridge (4), and yet the officers are to pay out of their own pockets the costs of making it as correct as possible. The only charges are those of the attorney, and for the attendance of the surveyor, and they ought to be defrayed out of the parish purse—The King v. the Justices of Essex (5).

LORD DENMAN, C.J.—This is a case in which; I think, the Sessions have exercised a wise discretion, the question before them being, whether the costs of the parish officers were to be visited upon the parish. I think the officers are not justified in endeavouring to cast upon the parish a useless expense. The meaning of the decision in The King v. the Justices of Cambridge is, that an abandonment of a rate, after allowance, will not prevent it from being still an existing rate; and although, therefore, overseers cannot so far abandon a rate, as to make it void, yet they are bound to do so, under certain circumstances, so far as they can—namely, to the extent of not bringing witnesses to support it. The only point of law upon which our opinion can be supposed to be asked in this case is, whether the Quarter Sessions were bound to pass and allow these Mandamus—Appeal, Grounds of—Sessions.

Where the Sessions have decided that grounds of appeal, against an order of removal, are insufficiently stated, and consequently confirmed the order without going into the case, this is a decision on a preliminary point, and not on the merits; and this Court will therefore compel them to hear by mandamus, if their decision is wrong.

A ground of appeal, stating that "the respondent parish have acknowledged the pauper's husband to be an inhabitant of and legally settled in their parish, by relieving the said husband and the said pauper, as part of his family, from time to time, during the last six years, whilst the said husband and pauper were resident in other places out of the respondent parish; and particularly by giving relief to the said husband and the said pauper, as part of his family, several times in the years 1839 and 1840, during which he and his family were residing in the town of Liverpool:"—Held sufficient.

A rule had been obtained, calling on these Justices to shew cause why a mandamus should not issue, directing them to enter continuances, and hear an appeal of the churchwardens and overseers of the parish of Gyffyn, in the said county, against an order for the removal of Ellen Roberts, wife of David Roberts, and Richard, Anne, Thomas, Hugh, and John, their children, from the parish of Conway, in the said county, to the parish of Gyffyn aforesaid.

The following were the grounds of appeal:—That the said David Roberts, the pauper's husband, is not legally settled in the appellat parish: that the said David Roberts is legally settled in the respondent parish: that the respondent parish have acknowledged the said David Roberts to be an inhabitant of and legally settled in their parish, by relieving the said David Roberts and the said pauper, as part of his family, from time to time, during the last six years, whilst the said David Roberts and the said paupers were resident in other places, out of the respondent parish, and particularly by giving relief to the said David Roberts and the said paupers, as part of his family, several times in the years 1839 and 1840, during which time he and his family were residing in the town of Liverpool, in the county of Lancaster: that the said David Roberts is settled in the respondents' parish by apprenticeship and service with Robert Hughes, then of the town of Conway, shoemaker, deceased, and referred to in the examination in this case, under a legal indenture of apprenticeship, made and executed between the several parties therein named.

The appeal came on for trial at the Epiphany Sessions for the county of Caernarvon, 1841. The appellants put in their notice and grounds of appeal. The respondents objected, that the latter were insufficiently stated, and that the appellants could not be heard. The Court of Quarter Sessions were of that opinion, and refused to admit evidence in support of the appeal; and confirmed the order of removal.

Jervis and Welsby shewed cause, and contended, first, that the decision of the Sessions was right; the grounds not being stated with sufficient explicitness—The Queen v. the Justices of Sussex (1), The Queen v. the Inhabitants of Bridgewater (2), especially the language of Lord Denman, C.J. and the words of Coleridge, J., that "in many cases the Sessions would do well to constitute themselves the Judges of the requisite particularity;" and several other cases. Secondly, that this was not a decision on a preliminary question, but on the merits, and this Court would not consequently grant a mandamus—The Queen v. the Justices of Cheshire (3), The Queen v. the Justices of the West Riding of Yorkshire (4). The Sessions have, in fact, heard—Ex parte Broseley (5), The Queen v. the Inhabitants of Clint (6). They also contended, with reference to the third ground of appeal, that it was bad, inasmuch as it set up no settlement, but merely an acknowledgment by relief, without signifying what was the kind of settlement acknowledged.

[COLERIDGE, J.—A party is bound to state his grounds of appeal; it does not follow that he can have no other ground, except specific heads of settlement elsewhere.]

The Attorney General (Sir F. Pollock), contra, was stopped by the Court.

WILLIAMS, J.—The third ground is, in my opinion, sufficiently stated. The argument, on the other side, pushed to its utmost extent, would exclude one of the most potent heads of evidence in this province of law altogether. It is contended, that it is evidence only, and useful only, as applicable to some head of settlement which the party has established; if so, it would be altogether superfluous. What the Courts have to look to is this: that parties may not be taken by surprise, but have due notice of what it is intended to rely upon. Now, having in mind that the relief mentioned in the third ground of appeal, was furnished by the respondent parish itself, it cannot be contended, that the respondent parish did not receive sufficient notice by that ground; it would be too much to say, that more exact particularity of time and place is necessary. Possibly, then, the other grounds may be too general; but, in my opinion, this one is sufficient; and the Sessions, having declined to hear the evidence, have declined to enter into the merits.

COLERIDGE, J.—I will not say, that there may not have been apparently conflicting observations made by Judges in deciding this class of cases; but it is clear, on the great current of authority, that, as well since as before the Poor Law Amendment Act, where the Sessions have declined to hear the evidence in an appeal, and decided it on a preliminary objection, this Court has exercised the power to interfere. But if the Sessions have gone into evidence, and come to a decision, then this Court has not interfered. Now, Ex parte Broseley was a case of that description. Witnesses were called in support of the grounds of appeal, and there was a variance between their evidence and those grounds. Upon this the Sessions decided, that the appellants had failed to prove their case. That was clearly a decision on the merits. Then, secondly, are these grounds sufficient? The only difficulty suggested, arises on words reported to have dropped from my Lord Chief Justice Denman and myself, that the Justices at Sessions are proper Judges of the necessary degree of particularity; and I still feel that the question, whether a notice is sufficient or insufficient, must so far depend on the particular facts in each case, that the Sessions may often be the best Judges; but we are bound by the authorities, at least to the extent of the present case, and must go into this inquiry. Then, taking the third ground by itself, I think it sufficiently stated, as my Brother Williams has shewn. It is a ground stated in good faith, and on matters more within the knowledge of the receiver of notice than the giver; the facts and circumstances of the relief given, must all be much better known to the respondent parish than the appellant. The argument, that this ground does not set up a substantial head of evidence, has no weight. We are only to look at the act. A party is to give notice of appeal, and state the grounds of that appeal. Here he states a ground; namely, certain evidences on which he means to rely.

WIGHTMAN, J.—If the Sessions have taken an erroneous view, so as to prevent parties from being heard, we have clearly the power to compel them to hear. Therefore, the only question is, whether the statement of ground be sufficient. If the sufficiency of the second be questionable, still, with reference to the third, I cannot see how better information of that on which it is intended to rely could be given. The respondent parish could only say, after receiving it, that they were not fully cognizant of the case against them.

turbing and annoying the said defendant and his family as aforesaid; and the plaintiff, having ascertained that he was about to be given into custody by the said defendant, ceased the said knocking and rapping at the back door of the said dwelling-house, but which he had violently, wrongfully, and illegally continued up to that period, and then and there ran and escaped off and from the said premises of the said defendant; when he, the said defendant, accompanied by certain persons who had been called to the aid and assistance of the said James Chatters, so being such constable as aforesaid, immediately followed and pursued the said plaintiff, and overtook him in a certain close, near to the said dwelling-house of the said defendant: whereupon the defendant, in order to preserve the peace, and to prevent the said plaintiff from continuing to disturb the good order and tranquillity of the said dwelling-house of the said defendant, and to hinder and prevent the said plaintiff from continuing to make the said noise and disturbance at the dwelling-house of the said defendant during the whole night, then gave charge of the said plaintiff to the said James Chatters, then and there being such constable as aforesaid, and then requested the said James Chatters, so being such constable as aforesaid, to take the said plaintiff into his custody, and carry him before some Justice or Justices of our said Lady the Queen assigned to keep the peace in and for the said county of Essex, to answer the premises, and to be dealt with according to law. And the said James Chatters, so being such constable as aforesaid, at such request of the said defendant, then gently laid his hands on the said plaintiff, for the cause aforesaid, and did then take the said plaintiff into his custody, in order to carry and conduct the said plaintiff before such Justice as aforesaid, to be there dealt with according to law for his said offence and breach of the peace; and because it was then late at night, and an unreasonable time, for the said James Chatters to carry the said plaintiff before such Justice as aforesaid, he, the said James Chatters, so being such constable as aforesaid, for that reason, and for the cause aforesaid, necessarily and unavoidably detained and imprisoned the said plaintiff until the next morning in the said messuage in the said declaration mentioned. And the said defendant further says, that on the next morning, as soon as conveniently could be, he, the said James Chatters, so being such constable as aforesaid, did carry and convey the said plaintiff before such Justice as aforesaid, to answer the said premises, and be dealt with according to law; and on the occasion aforesaid, the said plaintiff was necessarily and unavoidably trespassed upon and assaulted, seized, and laid hold of, pulled and dragged about, and given and struck the said blows and strokes, and forced and compelled to go about and be imprisoned, and kept and detained in prison, as in the said declaration mentioned, as he lawfully might have been, for the cause aforesaid, the defendant, on those occasions, doing no unnecessary trespass or damage to the plaintiff, and which are the said several trespasses in the said declaration mentioned. Verification.

The plaintiff joined issue on the first plea, and replied de injuriâ to the second.

A rule nisi having been obtained for judgment non obstante veredicto,—

Gurney and Ogle now shewed cause.—They contended, first, that the constable need not be more particularly described as having authority in the district where the offence was committed; and that if any of the allegations were defective, the defects were such as were cured by the verdict—Ingle v. Bell (1), Bull v. Steward (2), Chitty on Pleading, vol. 1. p. 679, Stennel v. Hogg (3), Whitworth v. Hall (4).

[LORD DENMAN, C.J.—That case only decided, that the learned Judge was wrong in adjourning the case from one assizes to another; and Mr. Justice Parke was only pointing out a way in which the defect might have been cured. His Lordship also referred to Timothy v. Simpson (5).]

The next objection made is, that it does not appear, on the face of the plea, that the breach of the peace was committed within actually left the place, he tells the constable to go after him, to prevent his repeating the outrage. But the defendant did this "to prevent the plaintiff from continuing to commit the outrage." Are we to infer from those words, after verdict, that the jury have found, in point of fact, that there was an intention to continue the outrage, and that the arrest was necessary to prevent it? I think not: it is too loosely stated. It is not averred that there was a continuing outrage, or danger of the outrage being repeated, but that the plaintiff thought so. The averment of a motive influencing his mind, is to be taken by us as equivalent to an averment of the fact of continuance. The King v. Howarth has no application. In that case, Mr. Justice Littledale reserved for the Judges the point, among others, "whether, under the circumstances of the case, the prisoner might be apprehended for the misdemeanour without a warrant"—Moo. C.C. 212; and the Judges thought that he might, because it was upon fresh pursuit; that is, the circumstances of that case were such as to afford a reasonable ground for considering it a continuing transaction. It was, therefore, matter of evidence, and not of law. We cannot enter into a discussion of the particular effect of each of these circumstances, which ought never to appear on the record at all; but it is sufficient to point out these deficiencies, which render the plea insufficient.

WILLIAMS, J.—It has been stated, in the argument, that doubts have been entertained how far a constable is justified in interfering on the information of an affray not actually going on. I say nothing upon that question; but I think, generally speaking, it has been understood, that if the affray was really over, the constable requires a warrant for his justification; not so, if there were symptoms of its continuance. Those symptoms are facts of which he may take cognizance, as well as of the actual breach itself; although no doubt there is a distinction, with respect to public danger, between an affray raging, and one no longer existing. But the facts stated upon the plea fall short of the supposition, on which alone, by the argument, it could be maintained. It is averred, that, in point of fact, the knocking and disturbance were discontinued; and that after such discontinuance, and to prevent their repetition, the defendant, accompanied by certain persons, followed the plaintiff, and overtook him in a certain close near the dwelling-house—how near, and how soon, are left entirely to inference. Unless then we can say, that if there has been a breach of the peace, no matter at what distance of time and place, a constable is justified in taking up the offender, the plea cannot be sustained. All its facts together fall short of the required justification.

COLERIDGE, J.—My judgment proceeds upon the assumption that the constable was acting within his jurisdiction. There is still not enough shewn to justify him. The facts stated are simply these: a breach of the peace, a threat to continue it all night, and its actual continuance for a certain space of time; that afterwards the constable is sent for, and the plaintiff goes away. It is true, that the plea goes on to say, that, in order to prevent the plaintiff from continuing to break the peace, the defendant caused him to be apprehended; but there is nothing to shew that the plaintiff did actually intend to continue it. To assert that the defendant expected its continuance, is by no means equivalent to asserting that it was about to continue or to be repeated. Therefore, on these pleadings, we are reduced to the question, whether a constable is justified generally in apprehending after a breach of the peace. As to the argument, that this defect is cured by verdict, it cannot be supported. That which it is required that we should presume to have been proved, cannot be deduced from any or all of these allegations, by any reasonable process of intendment.

WIGHTMAN, J.—It is unnecessary to determine whether or not the plea sufficiently sets out the authority of the constable. The point is, whether the defendant appears by it to have been justified, under the facts and at the time, in causing the imprisonment. The authorities which seem, or are thought to be, at variance, are collected in Timothy v. Simpson; and the result is, as stated in the judgment of the Court of Exchequer, that, "for the sake of the preservation of the peace, any individual who sees it broken may restrain the liberty of him whom he sees breaking it, so long as his conduct shews that the public peace is likely to be endangered by his acts." The facts here alleged by no means bring the case within this principle; it only appears that the plaintiff, when he heard that the constable was coming, ran away, and was pursued: all the rest is a mere explanation of the defendant's motives. It may have been, that the plaintiff was in the very act of going away when arrested; and it would be going an extreme length to hold, that, if so, the arrest was lawful.

Church-Rate—Churchwardens de facto, Proceedings by—Order of Justices.

An order of Justices under 53 Geo. 3. c. 127, for payment of a church-rate, is not bad, because made upon the complaint of persons who were churchwardens de facto, but not de jure.

The fact of a suit having been commenced in the Consistorial Court, but which was stated to have been abandoned at the time the churchwardens complained, will not oust the Justices of their jurisdiction.

G. Christopherson appealed to the Ipswich Quarter Sessions, against an order made upon him by two Justices, for the payment of a church-rate. The Court of Quarter Sessions quashed the order, subject to a case for the opinion of this Court, which stated, that at a vestry on Easter Monday, in 1838, Messrs. Cobbold and Scott were elected churchwardens for the parish of St. Clement, Ipswich, and were duly sworn in, and made the declaration required by law. The notice of the vestry was given only upon the day before Easter Monday. They acted as churchwardens in that year, and were re-elected in 1839. In September 1838, these churchwardens made a church-rate, and afterwards summoned the appellant for non-payment of it, before two Justices, under 53 Geo. 3. c. 127, but he did not appear. No notice was given of his intention to dispute the validity of the rate, but the validity of the appointment of the churchwardens having been questioned by another person summoned for non-payment, the Justices refused to proceed further. Christopherson was afterwards cited by the churchwardens, for the subtraction of church-rate, to the Consistorial Court of Norwich, but that suit was abandoned, and a fresh complaint having been laid against him, before two Justices, for non-payment of the rate, when he did not appear, nor give any notice of intention to dispute the rate, the order in question, directing him to pay it, was made. The Court of Quarter Sessions quashed this order.

Gunning, in support of the order of Sessions.—The order of the two Justices was bad, as Cobbold and Scott, not being legally churchwardens, were not competent to take any proceedings against the appellant. Three days notice of all vestries is required by section 1. of 58 Geo. 3. c. 69; here, only one was given, and consequently these churchwardens were not well chosen. By the statute 53 Geo. 3. c. 127. s. 7, the Justices are only empowered to act "upon the complaint of any churchwardens who ought to receive and collect the rate." That makes it necessary that they should be churchwardens de jure.

[LORD DENMAN, C.J.—You contend, that those words really meant to put in issue; their being churchwardens. They have been admitted and sworn in.]

That they act as churchwardens, is not sufficient. To an ejectment brought by them, would it not be a good answer to shew, that they were not churchwardens? Secondly, the jurisdiction of the Justices was taken away by the proceeding in the Ecclesiastical Court. That suit may still be going on; it is not enough to say, that it has been abandoned.

O'Malley, contra.—The only questions are, whether churchwardens de facto are competent to make an application to the Magistrates; and whether what is stated as to the proceedings in the Ecclesiastical Court, ousts the Magistrates of their jurisdiction.—(He was stopped by the Court.)

LORD DENMAN, C.J.—It appears to me perfectly clear, that churchwardens filling the office, may proceed in the recovery of church-rates. The whole argument rests upon the words in section 7, and it is said, these are not parties who ought to receive and collect the rates. The words used there, cannot have the meaning put upon them that is contended for.

Nov. 11. } BROOK v. JENNEY AND RUNNACLES.

Highway—Surveyor—Order of Justices—Trespass.

An order of Justices, under the Highway Act, 5 & 6 Will. 4. c. 50. s. 65, directing a party to cause certain hedges, complained of as injurious to a highway, by excluding the sun and air, "to be cut, pruned, or plashed, and the said trees to be pruned and lopped, and the said obstruction complained of, to the injury or damage of the highway, removed," is bad in substance, as not sufficiently explicit in its direction; and, where the party has refused to obey it, affords no justification to the defendant, in an action of trespass against the surveyor for cutting hedges and trees.

Trespass for breaking and entering a close of the plaintiff's, and cutting and breaking down hedges and fences, cutting oak, ash, and birch trees, ornamental and other thorns.

Plea—Not guilty, by statute.

The defendants were surveyors of the highways of the parish of Hasketon, in Essex. The plaintiff was owner of a farm, in the occupation of a tenant, but under a lease, reserving the fences and thorns to the plaintiff. The defendant Jenney laid an information against the plaintiff before a Magistrate, under section 65. of the Highway Act, alleging that he had refused to cut, prune, or plash certain hedges, on the right hand side of a high road in the parish. The plaintiff was summoned before two Magistrates, who, on hearing the information, made the following order:—

Suffolk, to wit. Whereas, on the 23rd day of November 1839, information and complaint was made on oath unto me, George Thomas, Esq., one of her Majesty's Justices of the Peace for the said county of Suffolk, and re-sworn on the 27th day of the said month of November, before me, the said George Thomas and Robert Newton Shawe, Esq., one other of her Majesty's Justices of the Peace for the said county, by Edmund Jenney, of Hasketon, in the said county, Esq., and one of the surveyors of the highways of the said parish, that Abraham Brook, of Woodbridge, in the said county, wine-merchant, being the owner of a certain farm, hereditaments, and premises, situate in the said parish of Hasketon, in the occupation of Robert Butcher, farmer, had neglected or refused to cut, prune, or plash the hedges, and to prune or lop the trees hereinafter mentioned, upon his said farm at Hasketon aforesaid, that is to say, the several trees on the right hand side of the carriage-way or cart-way, situate in the said parish of Hasketon, leading from Hasketon aforesaid, to Boulge, in the said county, growing or standing in the fence of a certain field, called Lower Tennings; also, the trees growing or standing in a belt or plantation, on the right hand side of the said carriage-way or cart-way, approaching the front entrance to the farm-house belonging to him, the said Abraham Brook; and also in the belt or plantation on the same side of the same carriage-way or cart-way, beyond the said entrance and the gate leading into his said farm-yard; and also the trees and hedges on the same side of the same carriage-way or cart-way, growing or standing in a fence adjoining a certain field, called Shortlands; and likewise the trees and hedges on the left hand side of the said carriage-way or cart-way, growing or standing in the fence of a certain other field, called Whinney Field, whereby the sun and wind were excluded from the said carriage-way or cart-way to the damage thereof, and whereby also obstructions were caused in the said carriage-way or cart-way, contrary to the statute in that case made and provided; and whereas the said Abraham Brook having appeared before us, the said Justices of the special sessions for the highways, held at the Shire Hall, in Woodbridge, in the said county, on the said 27th day of November instant, in pursuance of a summons duly served upon him to answer the said charge, and the said offence having been fully proved before us, upon the oath of George Runnacles, also one of the surveyors of the said highways, we, the said Justices, do hereby order the said Abraham Brook to cause the said hedges to be cut, pruned, or plashed, and the said trees to be pruned or lopped, and the said obstruction complained of, to the injury or damage of the said highway, removed, within ten days from the service hereof. And we do also hereby order the said Abraham Brook to pay the sum of 6s. 6d. to the said Edmund Jenney, being the costs incurred by him up to the present time. Given under our hands, this 27th day of November 1839.

R. N. Shawe, George Thomas.

These proceedings were taken under section 65. of the General Highway Act, 5 & 6 Will. 4. c. 50 (1).

The two defendants having deposed that the plaintiff made default in obeying this

(1) By which it is provided, "If the surveyor shall think that any carriage-way or cart-way is prejudiced by the shade of any hedges, or by any trees (except those trees planted for ornament or for shelter to any hop-ground, house, building, or court-yard, of the owner thereof,) growing in or near such hedges, or near other fences, and that the sun and wind are excluded from such highway, to the damage thereof, or if any obstruction is caused, in any carriage-way or cart-way, by any hedge or tree, it shall be lawful for any one Justice of the Peace, on the application of the said surveyor, to summon the owner of the land on which such hedges or trees are growing, next adjoining to such carriage-way or cart-way, to appear before the Justices at a special sessions for the highways, to shew cause why the said hedges are not cut, pruned, or plashed, or such trees not pruned or lopped, in such manner that the carriage-way or cart-way shall not be prejudiced by the shade thereof, and that the sun and wind may not be excluded from such carriage-way or cart-way to the damage thereof; or why the obstruction caused in such carriage-way or cart-way should not be removed. And the question, as to the cutting, pruning, or plashing such hedges, or the pruning and lopping such trees, or the removal of such obstruction as aforesaid, shall, upon proof of the service of such summons, and whether the said owner attend or not, be determined at the discretion of such last-mentioned Justices; and if such Justices shall order and direct that such hedges shall be cut, pruned, or plashed, or such trees pruned or lopped, in manner aforesaid, or such obstruction removed, the said owner shall comply therewith, within ten days after a copy of such order shall have been left at the usual place of abode of the said owner, or of his steward or agent; and in default thereof shall forfeit, on conviction, a sum not exceeding 40s. And the said surveyor, if the order of the said Justices is not complied with, shall, and he is hereby authorized and required to cut, prune, or plash such hedges, and to prune and lop such trees, for the benefit and improvement of the highway, and to remove such obstruction as aforesaid, to the best of his skill and judgment, and according to the true intent and meaning of this act; and the said surveyor shall be reimbursed by the owner as aforesaid, what charges and expenses he shall be at in cutting, pruning, and plashing such hedges, and pruning and lopping such trees, and the removal of such obstruction, over and above the said forfeiture; and it shall and may be lawful for the Justices, at a special sessions for the highways, upon proof to them made upon oath, to levy as well the expenses of cutting, pruning, and plashing such hedges, or pruning and lopping such trees, or removal of such obstructions as aforesaid, as the several and respective penalties hereby imposed, by distress and sale of the offender's goods and chattels, in such manner as distresses and sales for forfeiture are authorized and directed to be levied by virtue of this act."

order, the Justices aforesaid convicted the plaintiff of the offence charged in the information, and adjudged that he had forfeited 8s., and 14s. 6d. costs. The defendant Runnacles then proceeded to cut down the hedges, which was the trespass complained of.

At the trial of the action, before Patteson, J., at the Suffolk Summer Assizes, 1840, the defendants put in the order of the Magistrates, under the plea of not guilty, by statute. Several objections were taken to the form of the order, but they were overruled; and the jury found for the defendants.

A rule nisi was moved for and obtained, in the following term, for a new trial, on the ground of misdirection. It was objected to the order, amongst other things, that it did not appear by it that the plaintiff was the owner of the land next adjoining the highway; that it did not contain any sufficient finding of an offence under the act; and that it did not sufficiently direct the plaintiff what to do, he being ordered to "cut, prune, and plash" the hedges, &c., but without specifying to what extent this was to be done, or that it was to be performed in the manner required by the act.

Biggs Andrews and Byles now shewed cause.—[The arguments on all the objections, except the last, are omitted, that alone having been noticed by the Court.]—They contended, that this objection was not tenable, because the order went on farther to state, that the said obstruction was to be removed, the obstruction being the privation of sun and air by reason of the trees, which sufficiently specified the extent to which the act was to be performed. But, at all events, this is only an objection of form, and cured by sections 107. and 118. of the act.

[LORD DENMAN, C.J.—The latter section can hardly apply, for the act gives no form for this particular proceeding.]

And it is, in the next place, immaterial to the defence of the surveyors, in this action, whether the order was good or bad. If an order be issued by the Justices, commanding the surveyor to act, he is bound to obey.

[LORD DENMAN, C.J.—The statute puts the surveyor in motion, on the disobedience by another party of a certain order: can you contend, that if the order is wholly irrelevant, the surveyor is bound to act?]

[COLERIDGE, J.—Must it not be such an order as that other party is bound to obey?]

It is submitted, that it is only necessary it should be a subsisting order, not quashed on appeal. By section 20, the surveyor is exposed to a fine if he neglect his duty in anything required of him by this act, for which no particular penalty is imposed. An order, if good in substance, will not be so strictly construed as a conviction—The King v. Middlehurst (2); and will not be set aside in a collateral proceeding, even if it were bad on appeal—Hall v. Biggs (3). In The King v. Morris (4), Lord Kenyon says, "This Court has invariably made a distinction between orders of Justices and convictions, and said, that everything is to be intended in support of the former."

[WILLIAMS, J.—That is, provided always the order itself gives the Magistrates jurisdiction—The King v. the Inhabitants of Hulcott (5).]

Kelly (with whom was O'Malley), contra.—The sections curing defects of form (even if this were only such), do not affect actions in which the validity of the order comes indirectly in question.

[LORD DENMAN, C.J.—The question, whether these are defects in form, may arise, because the surveyor may not, perhaps, be bound to see whether the order is framed with all the accuracy of special pleading.]

Day v. King (6), Christie v. Unwin (7). The order is incomplete, for want of pointing out what is to be done by the party; and the defect is certainly not helped by the words, "and the said obstructions removed," because the "obstructions" alluded to in that section are plainly different from the prejudice occasioned by the shade of hedges and trees.

[PATTESON, J.—The whole trial proceeded on the supposition, that what was meant by the order was, to cut and prune for the purposes required by the act.]

The question cannot turn on what the party actually did, but what he was, in terms, directed to do—The King v. Walsh (8).—[Here he was stopped by the Court.]

LORD DENMAN, C.J.—We all think this is a formidable objection; and it is impossible not to lament that the words of the statute were not adopted. When a party is ordered to do a certain act, which involves the exercise of some discretion, it is necessary he should have some direction to what extent it is to be done. Instead of calling upon him to remove an obstruction, (when there appears some doubt, on the words of the statute, what that obstruction means,) the Justices should have ordered the party to do the specified act in the manner required by the statute.

PATTESON, J.—I was disposed to think, during part of the argument, that the objections taken were on matters of form; but the last now appears to me fatal. The argument, that the surveyor cannot be supposed to exercise a judgment as to the validity of the Magistrates' order, does not meet the case. He, originally, sets the proceeding on foot; when the order is, consequently, made on the party, and disobeyed, the surveyor is to act; and therefore, he can only be protected by a good order.

WILLIAMS, J.—The surveyor is not to act at all, except in the event of an order of the Justices not being complied with; therefore, we must necessarily see what that order is, and whether valid. Without adverting to the other objections, I am satisfied that the last is a fatal one. The object for which the cutting and pruning is to be performed, must be mentioned. This is a necessary part of the description of what is to be done by the party; default in which sets the surveyor in motion. That object must be so as to have the effect of disencumbering the way; all which allegation, and anything equivalent to it, is omitted.

COLERIDGE, J.—There is, undoubtedly, an apparent hardship on the defendants; but that must arise equally in many other cases, where officers have to act in pursuance of orders from persons above them; as was the case with constables, and various other functionaries, until the legislature interfered in their behalf. Prima facie, the surveyor, intruding on the land of another man, is a trespasser: he can only justify under the order: that order cannot be relied on, if substantially defective. Here is a substantial defect; the justification is, therefore, imperfect.

IN THE COMMON PLEAS.

 Nov. 12. } MATTHEWS v. BIDDULPH.

False Imprisonment—Arrest by Private Individual—False Pretences.

To a declaration for false imprisonment, a plea of justification by the defendant, a member of the firm of C. & B, that the plaintiff did unlawfully endeavour to obtain from the said C. & B. a certain book belonging to C. & B, by then and there falsely pretending (setting out at length certain alleged false pretences, without averring any attempt to defraud, or that the said book was obtained by the plaintiff); wherefore the defendant, having good and probable cause of suspicion, and vehemently suspecting that the said plaintiff had, by such false and fraudulent pretences, unlawfully endeavoured to obtain from the said C. & B. a book of the said C. & B, for unlawful and unauthorized purposes, assaulted the plaintiff, and delivered him to a police officer, &c.:—Held, ill, on general demurrer.

Plea—That before and at the said time when, &c., in the declaration mentioned, the defendant exercised and carried on the trade and business of a banker, in co-partnership with one T. S. C, J. B, R. B, T. S. C, jun., and O. B, in a certain banking-house or office, situate in a certain street, called Charing Cross, in Westminster, in the county of Middlesex, under the name, style, and firm of Cocks, Biddulph, Biddulph, & Co.; and one Peter Thompson, of Frith Street, Soho, tailor, kept a banking account with and was a customer of the said Cocks, Biddulph, Biddulph, & Co. And the said defendant further says, that just before the said time when, &c., in the said declaration mentioned, to wit, on the day and year in the said declaration mentioned, the said plaintiff did unlawfully endeavour to obtain from the said Messrs. Cocks, Biddulph, Biddulph, & Co. a certain blank cheque-book of and belonging to the said Messrs. Cocks, Biddulph, Biddulph, & Co., by then and there falsely pretending that the said Peter Thompson was the master of the said plaintiff, and that he, the said plaintiff, had been sent by the said Peter Thompson to the said Messrs. Cocks, Biddulph, Biddulph, & Co. to ask for and receive from them the said blank cheque-book, for and in the name and on account of the said Peter Thompson. And the said defendant further says, that in pursuance of such unlawful endeavour, he, the said plaintiff, just before the said time when, &c., in the said declaration mentioned, did go into the said street called Charing Cross, near to the said banking-house of the said Messrs. Cocks, Biddulph, Biddulph, & Co., and did then and there induce and prevail upon one George Atkinson to go into the said banking-house of the said Messrs. Cocks, Biddulph, Biddulph, & Co., and to ask of the said Messrs. Cocks, Biddulph, Biddulph, & Co., or of one of their clerks in the said banking-house, for one of the blank cheque-books of the said Messrs. Cocks, Biddulph, Biddulph, & Co., and did then and there falsely pretend to the said George Atkinson that the said Peter Thompson was the master of the said plaintiff, and did then and there order and direct the said George Atkinson, that if he, the said George Atkinson, were asked in the said banking-house for whom he, the said George Atkinson, wanted the said blank cheque-book, he, the said George Atkinson, was to tell the said Messrs. Cocks, Biddulph, Biddulph, & Co., or their clerk, that he, the said George Atkinson, wanted it for Mr. Peter Thompson, Frith Street, Soho, a tailor. And the said defendant further says, that just before the said time when, &c., in the said declaration mentioned, the said George Atkinson did, by such order and direction of the said plaintiff as aforesaid, go into the said banking-house of the said Messrs. Cocks, Biddulph, Biddulph, & Co., and did then and there, by such order and direction as aforesaid, ask one of the said clerks of the said Messrs. Cocks, Biddulph, Biddulph, & Co. for a blank cheque-book; and the said George Atkinson, upon being then and there asked by the said defendant for whom he wanted the said blank cheque-book, did then and there, by such order and direction as aforesaid, answer and say to the said defendant, that he wanted the said blank cheque-book for a Mr. Peter Thompson, of Frith Street, Soho, a tailor; and that he had been sent to ask for the said blank cheque-book by the said plaintiff, and that the said plaintiff was over the way waiting for the said blank cheque-book; whereas in truth and in fact the said Peter Thompson was not the master of the said plaintiff, and whereas in truth and in fact the said plaintiff had not been sent by the said Peter Thompson, nor had the said plaintiff any authority whatsoever from the said Peter Thompson to ask for or apply to the said Messrs. Cocks, Biddulph, Biddulph, & Co. for a blank cheque-book; whereupon the said defendant did, just before the said time when, &c., in the declaration mentioned, accompany the said George Atkinson from and out of the said banking-house into the said street, called Charing Cross, and there found the said plaintiff waiting for the said George Atkinson; and the said George Atkinson did then and there, in the presence and hearing of the said plaintiff, state to the said defendant, that he, the said George Atkinson, had been so sent by the said plaintiff to ask for and receive the said blank cheque-book as aforesaid; wherefore the said defendant, having good and probable cause of suspicion, and vehemently suspecting that the said plaintiff had, by such false and fraudulent pretences as aforesaid, unlawfully endeavoured to obtain from the said Messrs. Cocks, Biddulph, Biddulph, & Co. a blank cheque-book of the said Messrs. Cocks, Biddulph, Biddulph, & Co. for unlawful and unauthorized purposes, did, at the said time when, &c. in the said declaration mentioned, assault, seize, and lay hold of the said plaintiff, and did then and there deliver him into the custody of a certain police officer then and there being, to be dealt with according to law, and did then and there cause the said plaintiff to be conveyed in custody in and along the said public streets and highways to the said police station in the said declaration mentioned, the same being a proper and convenient place for that purpose; and because it was then an inconvenient time to take and convey the said plaintiff before a Justice, to be dealt with according to law, the said defendant did cause the said plaintiff to be kept and detained in prison in the said station-house for the said space of time in the said declaration mentioned, and at the expiration thereof did cause the said plaintiff to be conveyed in custody from the said police station along the said other public streets and highways to the said police office in the said declaration mentioned, and to be there again imprisoned until the said Justice could hear and determine concerning the said offence of the said plaintiff; when the said Justice did order and determine that the said plaintiff should find and procure such bail as in the declaration is mentioned, and then discharged the said plaintiff; all of which it was lawful for the defendant to do, for the causes aforesaid; which are the said supposed trespasses and assaults in the declaration mentioned. Verification.

General demurrer and joinder.

Talfourd, Serj., in support of the demurrer.—The plea is clearly bad. It attempts to justify the imprisonment of the plaintiff by a private individual, without any warrant, for an attempt to commit a misdemeanor. The plea ought at least to have alleged a felony committed, or an attempt to commit one. "There is this distinction between a private individual and a constable: in order to justify the former in causing the imprisonment of a person, he must not only make out a reasonable ground of suspicion, but he must prove that a felony has actually been committed; whereas a constable, having reasonable ground to suspect that a felony has been committed, is authorized to detain the party until inquiry has been made"—by Lord Tenterden, in Beckwith v. Philby (1). But the plea in this case charges, at most, only an attempt to commit a misdemeanor—Hawkins's Pleas of the Crown, book 2. c. 12. s. 8. A party who seeks to arrest another upon a charge of misdemeanor, must go before a Magistrate, and upon his information on oath the warrant is issued—Fox v. Gaunt (2). If it were otherwise, a private individual might take another into custody for an alleged libel, or upon a charge of assault, which had happened some time before.

[Channell, Serj. intimated, that he should not contend that the plea shewed a justification at common law, but that he should rely on the statute 7 & 8 Geo. 4. c. 29. s. 63.]

That section enacts, "that any person found committing any offence, punishable

(1) 6 B. & C. 635; s. c. 5 Law J. Rep. M.C. 132.

(2) 3 B. & Ad. 798; s. c. 1 Law J. Rep. (N.S.) K.B. 198.

either upon indictment or upon summary conviction by virtue of that act, except only the offence of angling in the daytime, may be immediately apprehended, without a warrant, by any peace officer, or by the owner of the property on or with respect to which the offence shall be committed, or by his servant, or any person authorized by him, and forthwith taken before some neighbouring Justice, to be dealt with according to law." But the plea sets out no offence within the statute. No indictment under the statute could be framed upon the facts which the plea discloses. The 53rd section of the same act provides, "that if any person shall, by any false pretence, obtain from any other person any chattel, &c., with intent to cheat or defraud any person of the same, every such offender shall be guilty of a misdemeanor." But this plea charges no attempt to defraud: it charges only an attempt to obtain the cheque-book "for unlawful and unauthorized purposes." And the offence, if any, must have been committed before the power of arrest is given. It is not sufficient that a person should be doing something towards the commission of an offence.—[He was then stopped.]

[TINDAL, C.J.—The object of the statute was, to give power to apprehend offenders flagrante delicto.]

Channell, Serj., contra.—It is sufficient that the plea shews that the party was in the course of committing an offence, or that the defendant had probable cause for suspecting that the plaintiff was in the act of committing an offence.

Sed per Curiam.—But the plea does not state even that. Can there be any offence under the act of parliament unless the goods are obtained, and there was also an intent to defraud? The plea is clearly incomplete, and we must give

1841. } THE QUEEN v. CHARLES SPACKMAN AND OTHERS.
Nov. 17. }

Overseer, Accounts of—Order of Justices—Jurisdiction.

By the statutes 43 Eliz. c. 2, 17 Geo. 2. c. 38, and 50 Geo. 3. c. 49, relating to overseers' accounts, the overseers are required "yearly and every year," to deliver a true and perfect account in writing, which Justices in Special Sessions are empowered to examine and correct, and to allow and approve, before the same shall be signed and attested; and an appeal is given to the Quarter Sessions against such an account. The following order was made at the Quarter Sessions:—

"On hearing the appeal of T. S, an inhabitant, &c., and rated and assessed to the rates for the relief of the poor of the said parish, against the account of C. S, late one of the churchwardens, and E. E, C. J, and J. S, three of the late overseers of the poor of the said parish, allowed by T. H. S, E. C, and W. S, Esqs., three of her Majesty's Justices of the Peace for the county, this Court doth order," &c.:—Held, that the order was defective, as it did not appear upon the face of it, that it was the overseers' annual account, over which only the Magistrates had jurisdiction by appeal in Quarter Sessions, especially as, since the Poor Law Amendment Act, certain quarterly accounts are, under certain circumstances, directed to be laid before Justices of the Peace at their petty sessions, for their allowance, in respect of which no appeal is given to the Quarter Sessions.

The defendants were the late churchwardens and overseers of the parish of Bradford, Wilts, and after the allowance of their annual account by the Justices in petty sessions, an appeal was made against the account to the Quarter Sessions, when the appeal was allowed, and an order made, which the defendants removed into this court by certiorari, to quash it for insufficiency. The material parts of the order were as follows:—

"Wilts, to wit.—On hearing the appeal of Thomas Savage, an inhabitant, &c., and rated and assessed to the rates for the relief of the poor of the said parish, against the account of Charles Spackman, late one of the churchwardens, and of Ezekiel Edmonds, Charles Jones, and James Sims, three of the late overseers of the poor of the said parish, allowed by T. H. S, E. C, and W. S, Esqs., three of her Majesty's Justices of the Peace in and for the said county, this Court doth order, that the following charges entered in the said account, as payments be wholly disallowed." (The items and their amount were then specified, which was ordered to be repaid to the then churchwardens.) It then proceeded, "And this Court doth further order and award to the said Thomas Savage, for whom this appeal is determined, the sum of 74*l.* 7*s.* 9*d.* for his reasonable costs," &c., which the Court ordered the defendants to pay.

The following points were made against the order:—

First, That the order of Sessions was bad on the face of it, as it did not shew that the Court of Quarter Sessions had jurisdiction in the matter, inasmuch as it did not appear that the account appealed against was the yearly account.

Second, That the order was on one churchwarden and three overseers; whereas, it appeared, that there were two churchwardens and four overseers.

Third, that one of the disbursements was by a cheque, signed by William Bullock, the fourth overseer, and he was not a party to the appeal.

Fourth, That it did not appear by the order, that the Sessions had heard and determined the appeal, and therefore they had no jurisdiction to award costs.

The judgment having proceeded entirely on the first point, the argument is confined to that only.

The Attorney General (Sir F. Pollock), Kelly, and Archbold, in support of the order.—It is objected to this order, that it is not shewn upon the face of it, that the appeal entertained by the Quarter Sessions was against the annual account of the overseers, over which only they have jurisdiction. Their controul over that account is given by the statutes 43 Eliz. c. 2, 17 Geo. 2. c. 38, and 50 Geo. 3. c. 49. By the second of those statutes it is enacted, that the churchwardens and overseers of the poor shall, "yearly and every year," within fourteen days after other overseers shall be nominated, &c., deliver to such succeeding overseers, a just, true, and perfect account in writing under their hands, &c., which shall be verified before a Justice, &c., who shall sign and attest the caption at the foot of the account. An appeal is given to persons having any material objection to such account to the Quarter Sessions. By the 50 Geo. 3, after reciting the expediency of a power to two or more Justices to examine and correct, and allow and approve of the account, before they shall sign it, it is enacted, that such account shall be submitted to two Justices at a special sessions, to be holden, &c., who may examine the matter of the account, and disallow and strike out all such charges as they shall deem unfounded, &c., specifying them, so far as they shall disallow or reduce the same, and the cause, and shall then sign their allowance, &c. A power of appeal to the Quarter Sessions is then given to the churchwardens against any disallowance or reduction, and the same power of appeal, as before existed, continued to other persons. It is submitted that it clearly appears on the face of the order, that the account mentioned in it, was the overseers' annual account. It is stated to have been an account allowed by three Justices, and is in the form always hitherto adopted. It is to be observed that the statute does not mention the word "annual." It is said, however, that in addition to the annual account before by law required, the overseers, since the Poor Law Amendment Act, (4 & 5 Will. 4. c. 76,) are required "once in every quarter," to render certain other accounts, which, under certain circumstances, may come before the Justices in petty sessions, but with regard to which, no appeal is given to the Quarter Sessions. But, first, no presumption will be made, that the Justices in Quarter Sessions entertained an appeal against a quarterly account, over which they have no jurisdiction; and secondly, where a parish forms part of a union, as is the case here, the Justices in petty sessions have nothing to do with the quarterly accounts; but, even if it does not appear that this parish is in a union, and therefore it might be a case where the quarterly accounts might be laid before the Justices in petty sessions under section 47 (1), yet it is submitted under that section, that they are only to receive, but have no power to allow or disallow them; whereas, it clearly appears that this order refers to accounts "allowed" by three Justices of the Peace, and which, therefore, could only apply to the annual account. At all events, unless a clear want of jurisdiction appears, all necessary intendments will be made to support the order—The King v. Cleg (2), The King v. Higher Walton (3), The King v. Mayfield (4).

(1) Sect. 47. "And be it further enacted, that every overseer, &c. having the collection, receipt, or distribution of the monies assessed for the relief of the poor, in any parish or union, or holding or accountable for any balance or sum of money, or the collection or distribution of the poor-rate, of any parish or union, shall once in every quarter, in addition to the annual account now by law required, make and render to the guardians, auditors, or such other persons as, by virtue of any statute or custom, or of the rules, orders, or regulations of the commissioners, may be appointed to examine, audit, allow, or disallow such accounts, or, in default of

Hodges, contra.—This order must be quashed, on the ground, that no jurisdiction appears on the face of it. If the jurisdiction clearly appears, the Court may make an inference in support of an order; but they will not infer anything in order to give jurisdiction—Com. Dig. 'Justice of the Peace,' (C) 2, The King v. Sheppard (5), The Queen v. Toke (6). Here, the Court below has chosen to return other things besides the order, for the purpose of supporting it; but they cannot be looked at to give jurisdiction—*Weston Rivers v. In Burn's Justice, (vol. 4. p. 257,) other annual accounts are enumerated, besides that under the 50 Geo. 3, which overseers are required to pass before two or more Justices, at the determination of their office. any such guardian, &c., then to the Justices of the Peace at their petty sessions, for the division in which such parish or union shall be situate, a full and distinct account in writing of all monies, matters, or things committed to their charge, or received, held, or expended by them on behalf of any such parish or union, and if thereunto required by the Justices, guardians, auditors, or other persons authorized in that behalf, shall verify on oath the truth of all such accounts and statements, from time to time respectively, &c.; and all balances due from any guardian, treasurer, overseer, or assistant overseer, or other person having the controul and distribution of the poor-rate, or accountable for such balances, may be recovered in the same manner as any penalties and forfeitures are recoverable under this act."

petty sessions would have to allow certain quarterly accounts of the overseers, over which the Quarter Sessions would have no jurisdiction. They are not merely to be looked at, but when, under the special circumstances, they come before them, they are to be examined, and allowed or disallowed.

[COLERIDGE, J.—I do not see how the balances that are due are to be discovered, unless the Magistrates may examine them.]

If therefore the statement in this order is so vague, as that it will as well apply to this quarterly account, as to the annual account, it must then be necessary for the Court to infer something, or rather to add something to the order, in order to give jurisdiction. That will not be done—The Queen v. Read (9).

LORD DENMAN, C.J.—As the defendants are seeking to take advantage of an irregularity of their own, if we could uphold this order, we should be glad to do so, but in order to do that, we must see that jurisdiction in those making it, appears upon the face of it. Here, the Justices act in allowing an account, but it does not appear what account it is. It is admitted, that it must be collected from the whole, that it is such an account as they have jurisdiction to allow. That, however, I think, is not enough; a complete jurisdiction must appear. Now, it does not appear in this case, as since the Poor Law Amendment Act, under certain circumstances another account may come before the Justices in petty sessions, over which no appeal is given to Magistrates in quarter sessions. It is quite as consistent with what appears upon the face of this order, that it may refer to that account; and the matter therefore remaining in doubt, as to what account it is, we must reluctantly hold the order to be insufficient.

WILLIAMS, J.—It has been said in support of the order, that if it stands indifferent upon the face of it, whether it refers to the overseer's annual account, or to the quarterly account under the Poor Law Act, the intendment that will support the order will be made. But it must not stand indifferent upon the face of the order, whether there was jurisdiction or not. It must distinctly appear, that there was; and if in one supposed case there would be jurisdiction, and in another not, then the case falls within the rule, under which orders have been held insufficient, because the jurisdiction did not appear.

COLERIDGE, J.—The jurisdiction of the Quarter Sessions is confined to the overseers' annual account. Now, it is not disputed, that upon the face of the order jurisdiction must appear. I have therefore read the order to see if it does appear. It is urged, in support of it, that it is in the usual form. It may be so, and that form formerly may have been sufficient, as until the statute 4 & 5 Will. 4. c. 76, perhaps only one account of this nature came before the Magistrates in petty sessions. It is then said, that the passing of that statute will not alter the usual form of proceeding; but, if a new law is introduced, and new proceedings grow up under it, the ancient form must alter with, and adapt itself to them. The statute alluded to has introduced a new account, a quarterly one, over which the Quarter Sessions have no jurisdiction. An alteration in the old form has therefore become necessary. Now, with regard to using affidavits, it has been said, that it is competent to shew that this parish is within a union, and that there are auditors, in which case the quarterly account could not come before the Justices in petty sessions, but would be laid before the auditors; and so the account allowed by the three Justices, as stated in the order, could not be an account under the Poor Law Act. But, even if it were allowable to shew that, jurisdiction to make an order cannot be supplied by affidavits, the order itself must shew it. It is also contended, that the word "allowed" used in the order, sufficiently demonstrates that the order relates to the annual account; but it appears to me, that under the Poor Law Act, in cases where Justices in petty sessions have these accounts laid before them, they are not merely to receive them, but are placed in the same situation as guardians or auditors, where they have been appointed, and may examine, audit, allow, or disallow such accounts. The direction as to the disposal of "all balances," also gives support to this view. Looking at this order, therefore, in every way, it is too doubtful to be supported.

WIGHTMAN, J.—I am also of opinion, that this order is insufficient. It should appear either by direct averment, or by necessary inference, that the Magistrates who made it had jurisdiction. It contains no direct averment sufficient to give it to them. Does it then appear by necessary inference? Whatever inference might have necessarily arisen before the Poor Law Act, as to an order similar to this, still, since that act it is a matter of doubt, upon the face of the order, whether the original annual account is alluded to, or the quarterly account, over which the Magistrates have no jurisdiction. But it is said, that under section 47 of the Poor Law Act, the Justices in petty sessions can never allow or disallow items in the account, and as therefore the order speaks of an account that was allowed, the only inference is, that it was the annual account. I cannot however agree to that construction of section 47, and, I therefore think, the order is bad.

Rule absolute to quash the order.

Settlement by Estate—Statute.

Section 68 of the 3 & 4 Will. 4. c. 76, "that no person shall be deemed, &c. to retain any settlement gained by virtue of any possession of any estate or interest in any parish, for any longer or further time than such person shall inhabit within ten miles thereof," enacts, that a settlement is destroyed by such removal, and not merely suspended, so as to be revived by the pauper's returning to inhabit within the limited distance.

Where a person purchased a leasehold interest, subject to a rent of 150 guineas a year (in the year 1826), and after ten months left the house, which was shut up, but the rent continued to be paid; and afterwards ceased to inhabit in the parish, or within ten miles thereof:—Held, that he possessed no settlement in that parish, either by estate, or by "coming to settle," within 13 & 14 Car. 2.

This was an appeal against an order of Justices, whereby Henry Walker was removed out of the parish of St. Giles in the Fields to the parish of St. James's, Westminster, as the place of his last legal settlement. The Court of Quarter Sessions allowed the appeal, subject to the opinion of this Court, on the following

CASE.

The pauper, on the 6th of September 1826, became the purchaser, for the sum of 1,575*l.*, of certain leasehold premises, called the Turk's Head, situate in the appellant parish. The leasehold interest, purchased by the pauper, was for an unexpired term of ninety-four years, subject to the reserved annual rent of 150 guineas; and on the day above mentioned he paid the purchase money, and a conveyance of the premises was duly executed to him. The pauper and his family occupied the premises from the time of the purchase until June 1827, when an execution was put into the house, under which the pauper's goods were sold. The house was then shut up until the 25th of October in the same year, when the pauper assigned the lease to another party, who thereupon entered into possession of the premises, and the pauper never returned to them. The pauper has not since that time done any act to gain a settlement elsewhere. The pauper paid the reserved rent for the whole period that he held the lease. In 1836 the pauper removed to and resided at a place more than ten miles distant from the appellant parish. The question for the opinion of the Court was, whether, upon the above facts, the pauper was at the time of the order of removal legally settled in the appellant parish. If this were decided in the affirmative, the order of Sessions was to be quashed; if otherwise, the order of Sessions was to stand confirmed.

J. L. Adolphus, in support of the order of Sessions.—By 4 & 5 Will. 4. c. 76. s. 68, the settlement by estate is destroyed; and there is no sufficient occupation, under 6 Geo. 4. c. 57. for a settlement by renting a tenement.

Kelly, contra, contended, that it did not appear on the case, that the pauper had not afterwards returned to the appellant parish, or within ten miles of it; and that, if so, the settlement gained by estate might only be suspended, not destroyed.

[LORD DENMAN, C.J.—Can you maintain that position? The words of the section are, "in case such person shall cease to inhabit within such distance, and thereafter become chargeable;" that is, at any time thereafter.]

There is, at all events, an ulterior question, whether the pauper has not obtained a settlement under 13 & 14 Car. 2. c. 12; for that purpose, it is not necessary that he should occupy in the character of tenant; it is sufficient if he have an independent occupation, and an interest of his own in the premises—The King v. St. Mary, Newington (1); and to this settlement, section 68 of the Poor Law Amendment Act would not apply; for the settlement would not be gained "by virtue of the possession of any estate."

LORD DENMAN, C.J.—I think that if the statute of Charles 2. can be held to have any application at all; that is, if a settlement be gained by "coming to settle" on a leasehold tenement, such a settlement must be gained "by virtue of the possession" of such interest; and consequently the words of section 68. would apply.

PATTESON, J.—The words, "by virtue of the possession of any estate or interest," are very strong.

Indictment—Certiorari—Costs of Prosecution—Record.

An indictment preferred at the Middlesex Quarter Sessions, at the instance of the Commissioners of Police, (who are also Justices,) appointed under the 10 Geo. 4. c. 44, for an assault upon a police officer in the execution of his duty, was removed by the defendants by writ of certiorari into the Court of Queen's Bench, and they afterwards suffered judgment by default:—Held, that the Commissioners were entitled to the costs of the prosecution, under 5 & 6 W. & M. c. 11. s. 3, if not as Justices, at all events as "civil officers who prosecuted on account of a fact done, which it concerned them to prosecute."

When a record has been thus brought into court, the Court will look at it for any purposes that may be necessary.

This was an indictment against the defendants, which contained two counts; the first, charging them with an assault upon one Charles John Wheatley, a police constable, in the execution of his duty; and the second, charging them with a common assault. The bill was presented and found at the Quarter Sessions for the county of Middlesex, in July 1840, and removed by the defendants, by writ of certiorari into the Court of Queen's Bench. They suffered judgment by default, and were sentenced to imprisonment, and to pay certain fines. A side-bar rule had been obtained to tax the costs of the prosecution, to be paid by the defendants. A rule was afterwards obtained to discharge that rule, upon an affidavit, which stated that the indictment was for an assault upon Charles John Wheatley, a police constable, and that the defendants suffered judgment by default; that Wheatley was the only person grieved or injured by the commission of the offence, but that he was not the prosecutor of the indictment; that the attorney who conducted the prosecution was not employed by Wheatley, but by the two Justices appointed under the statute 10 Geo. 4. c. 44, being the Commissioners of the Metropolitan Police, who were the promoters of the indictment, which was admitted upon the attendance for taxation of costs.

The Solicitor General (Sir W. W. Follett) and Waddington, shewed cause.—The prosecutors of this indictment, being the Justices of the Metropolitan Police Force, and appointed under the 10 Geo. 4. c. 44, 'An Act for improving the police of the metropolis,' are clearly within the provisions of section 3. of 5 W. & M. c. 11. By that act, if the defendant prosecuting the writ of certiorari, be convicted of the offence for which he was indicted, then the Court of King's Bench shall give reasonable costs to the prosecutor, if he be the party grieved or injured, or be a Justice, constable, or other civil officer, who prosecutes on account of any fact committed or done, that concerned him, as officer, to prosecute. It may be admitted, that the prosecutors here are not the parties grieved; but, either as "Justices" or "civil officers who prosecute on account of a fact done, that concerned them as officers to prosecute," they are entitled to costs. They are the persons specially appointed by the act, to be at the head of the Police Force, having the controul over "The Metropolitan Police District," and who are to "frame such orders and regulations as they shall deem expedient relative to the general government of the Police Force." One of that force having been assaulted, it was the public duty of the Commissioners to prosecute, and they are therefore directly within the terms of the statute of W. & M. They act simply in discharge of their duty, and this case is therefore distinguishable from The King v. Sharpness (1), The King v. Dewhurst (2), and The King v. Edwards (3), where no duty was cast upon the prosecutors to prosecute.

[LORD DENMAN, C.J.—There may be some difficulty in distinguishing this case from The King v. Edwards.]

The prosecutors there were the Paving and Lighting Commissioners; but that duty would not necessarily in any way connect them with the appointment of the police.

[LORD DENMAN, C.J.—It appears by the affidavits in that case, which are in court, that the person assaulted was appointed by the commissioners.]

They were not Justices of the Peace, and the Court thought them not public officers prosecuting within the statute. But, at all events, a greater duty is imposed on the Justices who prosecute this indictment, than existed in the cases of The King v. Ketleworth (4), and The King v. Taunton St. Mary (5), where the prosecutors were considered as parties within the statute, and entitled to their costs.

Martin, contra.—The Court are confined to the facts which appear upon the affidavits, which shew that this was an indictment against the defendants for an assault upon Wheatley, a police constable, and that the Commissioners of the Metropolitan Police were the prosecutors of the indictment.

[LORD DENMAN, C.J.—In cases of this nature, where the record has been brought before the Court, they will always look at it for any purpose, if necessary.]

But neither the affidavits nor the record shew how the Commissioners are connected with this prosecution, so as to bring themselves within the statute. The cases of The King v. Sharpness and The King v. Shuttleworth have decided, that those who ask for costs, must bring themselves strictly within the statute. It does not appear that this constable had any connexion with the Commissioners of Police. The Commissioners are not placed in a situation different from ordinary Justices of the Peace.

[COLERIDGE, J.—Are they not, at all events, civil officers, who prosecute on account of things which concern them as officers?]

[WIGHTMAN, J.—By section 1 of 10 Geo. 4, they seem appointed for the more efficient conduct of the Police Force.]

They are to perform the duties of a Justice of the Peace, and such other duties as shall be specified in the act, or from time to time directed by one of his Majesty's principal Secretaries of State. It nowhere appears that it is a part of their duties to prosecute in cases of this nature; and even if it should be taken that the constable was appointed by them, that would not bring them within the statute—The King v. Edwards.

Cur. adv. vult.

LORD DENMAN, C.J.—This is a rule to set aside a side-bar rule previously issued, for giving the costs of the prosecution to the Commissioners of Police, by whom, it was said, the proceedings were instituted, for an assault committed upon a police constable in the execution of his duty, under the 5 W. & M. c. 11. s. 3, which provides in express terms, that "if the defendant prosecuting such writ of certiorari be convicted of the offence for which he is indicted, then the Court of King's Bench shall give reasonable costs to the prosecutor, (that is, the prosecutor of the indictment, not of the certiorari), if he be the party grieved or injured, or be a Justice of the Peace, constable, or other civil officer, who prosecutes on account of any fact committed or done, that concerned him or them as the officer or officers to prosecute or present." Now, the Commissioners of Police are called into existence by the following words of the 10 Geo. 4. c. 44. s. 1: "Be it enacted, &c. that it shall be lawful for his Majesty to cause a new police office to be established in the city of Westminster, and by warrant under his sign manual to appoint two fit persons as Justices of the Peace, to execute the duties of Justices of the Peace, together with such other duties as shall be thereafter specified, or as shall be from time to time directed by one of his Majesty's principal Secretaries of State, for the more efficient administration of the police." On these words, it is difficult to feel any doubt, that the Commissioners will be entitled to their costs of an indictment, which they preferred for an assault upon one of their subordinate officers, in the execution of his duty, which indictment has been removed by the defendant, as this was by certiorari, and upon which, as here, a conviction has taken place. We think, that they fully answer the description of civil officers, prosecuting on account of a fact which it concerned them to prosecute, even if they were not, as Justices of the Peace, distinctly named in the act of William and Mary. We should at once have delivered this opinion, but for a case reported in a note to the 5th Barn. & Adol. p. 407, which, being apparently inconsistent with our view, we wished to examine: we have now done so, and find that decision, as it appears, is such as we cannot approve or follow. The short note of the judgment of the Court there is not very accurately expressed. It certainly appears, however, upon reference to the affidavits used in that case, that the two cases are alike as to the relation between the Paving Commissioners and the watchman assaulted, and the part which the former took in the prosecution; but, although so far in point, we do not agree with the decision, and if the commissioners there had put forward their claim directly, and in the first instance, instead of preferring that of the nominal (who was clearly not the real) prosecutor under the description of the party aggrieved, it is possible that the Court might have been led to a different conclusion. Upon the plain words of the two acts, and the facts appearing upon the face of the indictment, we are of opinion, that the Commissioners of Police are entitled to their costs, and that the present rule must be discharged.

Rule discharged.

April 21. } MORRELL v. MARTIN.*

Highway—Pleading—Replevin—Constable—Justification—Distress Warrant—Jurisdiction of Magistrates.

To a declaration in replevin, the defendant pleaded a justification, that after the passing of the 5 & 6 Will. 4. c. 50, (the General Highway Act,) a warrant was duly made by two Justices of the Peace, directed to the defendant, who was the constable, and to A. B, the surveyor, of the parish, which, after reciting that the plaintiff was an occupier of land within the parish, and had been duly rated to the repair of the highways in a certain sum, which had been demanded of him, and payment refused, and that he had been duly summoned, &c., directed the defendant and A. B. to levy the rate by distress and sale:—Held, on demurrer, that the plea was ill, as it did not shew on the face of it any facts to bring the case within the jurisdiction of the Magistrates, who granted it under the statute, and that it was no justification at common law.

Where a Magistrate, or other party having limited jurisdiction, in issuing a warrant, exceeds his jurisdiction, though the warrant may be good on the face of it, yet the officer who executes it is liable to an action.

And, therefore, when a constable justifies under a warrant granted by a Court of limited jurisdiction, he must shew on the face of his plea, such facts as bring the case within such limited jurisdiction.

Replevin for seizing and taking two stacks of wheat, the property of the plaintiff.

Plea—by the defendant, as to the seizing and taking, and retaining the goods and chattels, in the declaration mentioned, that after the passing of an act of the 5 & 6 Will. 4, entitled, 'An act to consolidate and amend the laws relating to highways in England,' J. P. and R. M, being two of her Majesty's Justices of the Peace for the county of Kent, residing within, and acting for the division therein named, made and issued their warrant to the purport following.—The plea then set out in terms a warrant addressed to the surveyor of the highways of Hawkhurst, in the county of Kent, and to the constable of Hawkhurst, reciting, that Morrell, an occupier of land in Hawkhurst, was duly rated to the repair of the highways, in a certain sum therein mentioned, which had been duly demanded of him, and which he had refused to pay, and on being summoned, had not appeared, &c., the warrant therefore directed them to levy the amount by distress and sale. The plea then averred, that the defendant was the constable of Hawkhurst, within the division, and that Aylhurst and Durrant, in the warrant mentioned, were surveyor of the highways; that Morrell, in the warrant named, was the plaintiff, and so justified under the warrant, as acting by the desire and in aid and assistance of Aylhurst and Durrant.

To this plea there was a general demurrer and joinder.

This case was argued in Easter term last, by—

Ludlow, Serj., in support of the demurrer.—First, this plea cannot be considered as a good plea, under the 34th section of 5 & 6 Will. 4. c. 50, which gives the surveyor the same power for the recovery of the highway rate, as the overseers have under 43 Eliz. c. 2. It is not even averred that the warrant was made by virtue of the act. It would not, therefore, have been a good plea under the latter act—Whitley v. Fawcett (1). The warrant cannot be considered as conclusive of the facts stated in it, and there are no preliminary averments in the plea, stating the facts which would give the Magistrates jurisdiction to make it. In Selby v. Bardons (2), the allowance of the rate, and the inhabitancy of the plaintiff within the parish rated, and the other facts from which the jurisdiction of the Magistrates arose, were set out on the pleadings. So in The Governors of the Poor of Bristol v. Wait (3), all the preliminary facts were alleged in the avowry, which shewed that the plaintiff was liable to be rated; and it is right that the plaintiff should have the opportunity of traversing this liability. In Hurrell v. Wink (4), the plaintiff was held entitled to a verdict, the defendants not having shewn a legal demand of the whole amount of the rates. In Morse v. James (5), it was held, that an officer of an inferior court could not justify under a void process, though he might under one which was voidable. In Ladbroke v. James (6), it was held to be at all events necessary, in pleading the authority of a court of limited jurisdiction, to shew facts from whence the jurisdiction might appear.

(2) 3 B. & Ad. 2; s. c. 1 Law J. Rep. (N.S.) K.B. 128.

* This case is reported by P. B. Barlow, Esq.

[TINDAL, C.J.—It certainly is a hard case on the constable, if he is not allowed to plead in this manner. It is difficult for him to ascertain the legality of a warrant; and if he refuses to obey it, he is liable to be indicted.]

On the other hand, it would be dangerous to allow every officer to act, without taking any notice as to how far he was authorized by the process. In Collett v. Lord Keith (7), Lawrence, J., in alluding to the case of a justification under process issuing out of inferior courts in this country, says, "It is necessary not merely to allege that they had jurisdiction over the subject-matter, but to state what the jurisdiction was, and then allege such facts as may enable the superior Court to judge, whether the Court below had jurisdiction of the cause or not." Evans v. Munkley (8) is to the same effect. There is no case to shew that a constable is justified in acting under a warrant, where the Magistrate has no jurisdiction to grant it; nor is there any act of parliament which protects him in such a case, the statute 24 Geo. 2. c. 44. not applying to the action of replevin—Fletcher v. Wilkins (9). Certain Magistrates only have authority to grant warrants in each particular case, and their authority should be shewn. The plea then is bad at common law, and is not good within the meaning of any statute.

Channell, Serj. for the defendant.—Here a warrant, good on the face of it, has been presented to the constable, who has no opportunity or means of knowing whether the Magistrate who grants it, has, in strictness, jurisdiction or not. He, the constable, is only bound to obey the process of the Court, and may be indicted for not doing so—The Marshalsea case (10), Hill v. Bateman (11). As to the form of the plea, this is not a special demurrer, and the Court will not go out of its way to inquire by what allegations it might have been made more complete—Gins v. Dams (12); and with regard to the substance of the plea, first, the statute 5 & 6 Will. 4. c. 50. s. 34. gives the surveyor the same powers, remedies, and privileges for levying and recovering the rate authorized by the act to be made, as the overseers of the poor have by law for the recovery of any rate made for the relief of the poor. To see what those powers are, we must look to the statute 43 Eliz. c. 2. ss. 4 & 19, which enables the churchwardens to levy the amount assessed by warrant from two Justices of the county, and in the event of any action being brought against any person, the defendant may plead that the matter was done under the authority of the act, and here the constable pleads that he was acting in aid of the surveyors, who are stated to have made a rate under the 5 & 6 Will. 4. c. 50. It may be admitted, that there is a broad distinction between trespass and replevin. If an action of trespass had been brought, there can be no doubt that the warrant would have been an answer to the action, and that the defendant would have had a good defence under the general issue. It was, however, held, in Fletcher v. Wilkins, that the statute 24 Geo. 2. c. 44. s. 2. did not apply to the action of replevin, and that the constable might be sued without any demand having been made of the copy of the warrant under which he acted. But it is to be observed, that in that case the defendant avowed; here he does not avow: a defendant who avows is in the position of a plaintiff, and claims a return of the goods. Here the defendant claims no return—Com. Dig. 'Pleader,' 3, K, 12, where it is said, that the defendant in replevin may plead a plea in justification, without making avowry or conusance; but in that case he cannot have a return of the thing taken. In Painter v. the Liverpool Oil-Gas-Light Company (13), it was held, that a warrant of distress, issued by a Justice, without previously summoning and hearing the party against whom the warrant was applied for, was illegal, and that trover would lie against the parties who had received the fruits of a seizure under such illegal warrant; but in that case, each of the Judges, in delivering judgment, expressly refers to the situation of the officer who executes the process:—Lord Denman says, "A warrant is a justification to officers, because they are not to canvass the legality of the process they have to execute;" and "it would be absurd, that an officer charged with the execution of a warrant should have to pause and consider whether it was properly issued or not." Littledale, J. says, "An officer, in a case like this, would be protected according to the case of Webb v. Batchelour (14), for it does not belong to him to say, there is an error in the proceedings, therefore I will not execute the warrant;" and Patteson, J. also remarks, "The reason for which such a warrant, though irregular, would be a protection to an officer is, that he would not be entitled to set up his private opinion against that of the Justice; he is bound to obey it, and is therefore protected in doing so." It is true, that an officer may not be justified in acting on a warrant which is defective on the face of it, and which discloses no jurisdiction, but he is not to scan the validity of every warrant put into his hands. Selby v. Bardons was the case of an avowry.

Ludlow, Serj. in reply.—The defendant, having taken upon himself to plead specially, should have made out a complete defence. The question is not, whether the defendant might have pleaded the general issue, or might have pleaded a good defence under any act of parliament. It does not appear that, quoad the defendant, the Magistrates had any jurisdiction whatever, and this cannot be treated as a plea under the 43 Eliz.

Cur. adv. vult.

Nov. 25.—The judgment of the Court was now delivered by—

TINDAL, C.J.—(after stating the pleadings, as ante, p. 22).—In this case it was contended, on behalf of the plaintiff, that the plea was bad, it being neither a plea authorized by the statute, nor a plea that was good at common law. Upon the first point, we are of opinion that this plea is neither in form nor substance a plea under the statute. The statute, by section 34, gives the surveyors the same powers, liberties, and privileges as overseers of the poor-rate have by law for the recovery of any rate made for the relief of the poor. And admitting that the constable, acting in aid of the overseer, came within the benefit of this clause, and that, according to the case in 2 Lutwyche, 1179, a plea which concludes that the distress was made by virtue of the statute of Elizabeth, is good, under the statute, although it does not follow the precise words of the act; yet in this case the plea has no such allegation in substance, but, on the contrary, avoids all reference to the authority of the statute, except in stating, in point of time, that the warrant was granted after the statute 5 & 6 Will. 4. came into operation. Neither is the present plea equivalent to such plea under the statute. In point of fact, under such a plea, the defendant might have proved in evidence, that the Justices granted their warrant on a subject-matter within their jurisdiction, which the present plea does not allege. The question secondly above stated must be considered, whether this is a good plea at common law; that is, where a constable justifies a trespass under a warrant directed to him under the hands and seals of two Justices, whether it is sufficient simply to state, that the two Justices did grant the warrant under their hands and seals, against the goods of the plaintiff, directed to the defendant—that they were Justices of the Peace for the county—and that the defendant was constable for the county, which is the whole of the allegation contained in this plea, without stating any fact or facts to shew the subject-matter to which the warrant relates to be within the jurisdiction of the Justices.

(14) 1 Vent. 273.

There is great difficulty at first in reconciling the cases which have been brought in review before the Court. It is clear from all the cases, that neither the Justices who issued the warrant in question, nor the surveyors who set the Justices in motion, could have justified the act, without shewing the party rated was an occupier, and had been duly assessed. A known distinction exists in this respect between the highway rate and the poor-rate; and the cases are express, that if a person is assessed to the relief of the poor, who is not by law liable, and his goods are taken by warrant of distress, an action of trespass will lie against the overseer levying under the distress, as in Nichols v. Walker (15), Milward v. Caffin (16); so as against the Magistrates who issued the warrant—Lord Amherst v. Lord Sommers (17), Weaver v. Price (18); and the ground of this decision appears from what is said in Nichols v. Walker, that the Magistrates have but a particular jurisdiction to make warrants to levy rates well assessed. But it is contended, on the part of the defendant, that the officer to whom the warrant is directed, stands in a different position from either the Magistrate or the surveyor; that he knows nothing but what the warrant discloses, and that if no want of jurisdiction appears on the face of the warrant, he stands protected by the warrant for what he might have done under it. And The Marshalsea case is relied on for the purpose, where it is said, that if a Justice of the Peace makes a warrant to arrest one for felony, who is not indicted, though the Justice errs in making the warrant, yet he who makes the arrest by force of that warrant, shall not be punished by reason of the false imprisonment, because he who is the Justice is the Judge of the case: which point is stated and relied on in the case in 1 Ventris, 273; and the case of Hill v. Bateman is also relied on, which was a conviction for distraining goods; and there the Justice committing the man to prison, when he had sufficient to pay the penalty, was held to be liable in an action for the false imprisonment, but the constable was held justified by the warrant. So in

Webb v. Batchelour, where the defendant justified under a warrant of a Justice to distrain for not performing statute duty on the road; the objection was, that he ought to have been summoned before the distress warrant was granted, and there it is stated by the Court that the officer who exercises the warrant (though unduly made for the cause alleged,) is not answerable, for he is not to judge, but to execute the matter, it being within the jurisdiction of the Justice of the Peace. In the case of Painter v. the Liverpool Oil-Gas-Light Company, the same doctrine is expressly laid down by the Court. But notwithstanding the inference to be derived from these cases, we think the sounder construction is, that in the case of a justification at common law by a constable under the warrant of a Justice of the Peace, the plea is bad, which does not shew that the Justice had jurisdiction over the subject-matter for which the warrant is granted. If at common law the constable might have justified under the warrant simply, and independently of the consideration, whether the Justice, who issued it, had jurisdiction or not, there could surely have been no necessity for the enactment contained in the 10th section of the 24 Geo. 2. c. 44, "that in case, after the demand of the warrant and compliance therewith, any action is brought against the constable, without making the Justice of the Peace, who signed it, defendant, the jury shall give their verdict for the defendant, notwithstanding any defect of jurisdiction in such Justice of the Peace, and that if the action be brought against them both, then on proof of the warrant the jury shall find for the constable, notwithstanding such defect of jurisdiction: a provision which necessarily implies, as it appears to us, that at common law the want of jurisdiction in the Justice took away the protection of the constable who executed the warrant; and we take the law on this subject to be correctly laid down in the second resolution in The Marshalsea case, before referred to—namely, "And a difference was taken when a court has jurisdiction of the cause, and proceeds inverso ordine or erroneously; there the party who sues, or the officer or minister of the court who executes the precept or process of the Court, no action lies against them. But where the Court has not jurisdiction of the cause, there the whole proceeding is coram non iudice, and actions will lie against them, without any regard of the precept or process; and, therefore, the said rule cited by the other side, Qui iussu iudicii aliquod fecerit, (but where he has no jurisdiction non est iudex;) non videtur dolo malo fecisse quia parere necesse est, was well allowed;" but it is not of necessity to obey him who is not Judge of the cause, any more than it is a mere stranger. And the application of this distinction may explain the ground of the decision before referred to, and on which the defendant has relied; for in that case it appears, that the Justice had a general jurisdiction over the subject-matter, but had proceeded inverso ordine, granting the warrant before the summons; whereas in the present case, so far as appears by the plea, the Justice had no jurisdiction whatever: and there are cases which have expressly decided, that the officer is liable for executing the warrant, when the Magistrate granting it has no jurisdiction. Such is that of Shergold v. Holloway (19), where it was resolved, that a Justice has no power to grant a warrant to apprehend a party for refusing to pay wages due to a servant; he can only issue a summons: and that a warrant expressly to arrest the party will not justify the officer, there being no pretence for such a jurisdiction. So also in Rooke's case (20), where the defendant justified the taking, by authority of a commission of sewers, directed to B. S. and others, to survey all walls, &c. in the River Thames, (prout, &c.,) because one Carter, &c. was assessed to every acre for repairing of a bank, &c., for the non-payment of which he took the distress. On special verdict, the distress was held to be bad, for Carter alone was assessed, whereas all the lands within the same level ought to have been assessed. So that in this case, though the commissioners had jurisdiction to make assessment, yet the warrant was held no justification of the party executing it. In Brown v. Compton (21), which was an action against the sheriff for an escape, where the Justices had discharged an insolvent debtor, under the 37 Geo. 3, at an adjourned sessions held after the passing of the act, but being an adjournment of a sessions originally held before the act passed, it was ruled that they had no jurisdiction, and that both the sheriff and officer were liable. The Queen v. Burnaby (22) is strong to shew, that in the opinion of the Judges who decided it, where the Justices have no authority to convict, yet, nevertheless, they proceed to convict and grant the warrant, though the warrant is good on the face of it, the officer who executes it is liable. In the case of The Margate Pier Company v. Hannam (23), the observations of Lord Teasterden are expressly to the same point, that where the act of the Justice issuing a warrant is invalid, all persons who act in the execution of such warrant act without any authority, although it is otherwise where the proceedings are in the regular course.

On these grounds it appears to us, that where a limited authority is given, as in the present case, if the party to whom such authority is given exceeds his jurisdiction, and assumes to exercise it over objects not within it, his warrant will give no protection to the officer who acts under it, and that by necessary consequence, where the officer justifies under such warrant so granted by a court of limited jurisdiction, he must shew the warrant was granted, and that the case falls within such limited jurisdiction. We are of opinion, that the present plea, containing no sufficient allegation to bring the case within the jurisdiction of the Justices, is bad, and that there must be judgment on it for the plaintiff.

Insane Pauper, Settlement of—Appeal, Notice of.

the notice of appeal should be given under the provisions of section 54, and not under those of section 46.

A rule was obtained in Michaelmas term last, calling upon the Justices for the Western Division for the county of Kent, to shew cause why a writ of mandamus should not issue, directed to them, commanding them to enter continuances upon an appeal made by the overseers of the parish of St. Nicholas, Deptford, against an order of Justices, adjudging the settlement of a poor insane person (confined in the county lunatic asylum,) to be in that parish, and to hear and determine the merits of that appeal. The affidavits shewed, that in September 1839, Eliza Rawlings, a poor person, deemed to be insane, and chargeable to the parish of Greenwich, was brought before two Justices and a surgeon, under section 38. of 9 Geo. 4. c. 40, who were satisfied that she was insane, but being unable at that time to discover her place of settlement, she was sent to the county lunatic asylum. In May 1841, satisfactory evidence having been obtained as to her settlement, inquiry into it was made under section 42. of the above act, and the pauper was adjudged to belong to St. Nicholas, Deptford. The overseers of that parish gave notice of, and prosecuted, an appeal against the order, but at the Sessions it was objected, that they were not entitled to be heard in support of the appeal, as the notice was framed under section 54. of the act, and not under section 46, which, it was urged, was the section applicable to a pauper lunatic, under the circumstances of this case. The Court allowed the objection, and declined to hear the appeal, as no notice of appeal had been served upon the Justices who made the order, under section 46, but only upon the clerk of the peace, under section 54.

Decides shewed cause.—The Court of Quarter Sessions came to a right conclusion, in deciding that section 46. was the appeal clause applicable to this case, and not section 54, under which the notice was given. In the statute 9 Geo. 4. c. 40, the provisions of several previous statutes relating to pauper, vagrant, and criminal lunatics are repealed, and for the most part embodied and re-enacted in that act. Great care appears to be taken in the act, to keep distinct these several classes of lunatics, both with respect to their maintenance and the adjudication of their settlements. Several sections, commencing with section 38, are first introduced, and as far as section 45. are exclusively confined to the cases of pauper and vagrant lunatics—and then follows an appeal clause, section 46, which it is submitted, both from its largeness, and position in the statute, is applicable to all orders made under those preceding sections. By section 38, any poor person chargeable to any parish, and deemed to be insane, and afterwards upon examination found to be so, may be examined as to his place of settlement, and be sent to the county lunatic asylum, and an order made on the overseers of the place where the settlement shall be adjudged to be, for the payment of certain expenses of conveyance, maintenance, &c. Here, as there was no sufficient evidence, at the time, when the pauper was first chargeable, and sent to the asylum, to adjudicate upon her settlement, that inquiry was subsequently made, and the pauper adjudged to belong to the appellant parish, under the provisions of section 42. That section provides, that where the settlement of any insane person, confined in the lunatic asylum, has not been ascertained, it shall be lawful for two Justices at any time to inquire into it, and make order upon the overseers of the parish where the settlement shall be adjudged to be, for the re-payment to the treasurer of the county of certain expenses incurred in respect of the pauper, during the twelve calendar months previous to the date of the order, and also to provide for the future expenses. Then follow sections 44. and 45. (1), which relate to vagrant

(1) Sect. 44. "And be it further enacted, that upon its being made known to any Justice of the Peace, that any person wandering about, and at large within his jurisdiction, is deemed to be insane, it shall be lawful for such Justice, by an order under his hand and seal, if he shall so think fit, to require the constable or churchwardens, &c. of the parish or place, where such person is found, to bring the said person before two Justices of the Peace of the county; and the Justices are hereby required to call to their assistance a physician, &c.; and if upon examination of such person, deemed to be insane, or from other proof, the said Justices shall be satisfied that such person is so far disordered in his senses, that it is dangerous for such person to be permitted to go abroad, the said Jus-lunatics. An appeal clause, section 46. (2), follows, which gives an appeal to "any person who shall feel aggrieved by any order, or by any refusal of an order." By clause 61, the word "person" will include "any number of persons;" and it is clear, that under the previous statutes, 13 & 14 Car. 2. c. 12. s. 2, and the 3 Will. & M. c. 11. s. 9, churchwardens and overseers may appeal under the words "person or persons aggrieved," though not mentioned nominatim. The words, therefore, of section 46. would seem to give an appeal against any order, ties shall make inquiry into the circumstances and place of last legal settlement of such insane person, and it shall be lawful for such Justices to proceed in such case, in the same manner as has hereinbefore been directed, in the case of a person chargeable to any parish, within the jurisdiction of the said Justices: Provided always, if it shall appear to the said or any other two Justices, upon inquiry, that such person hath an estate more than sufficient to maintain his or her family, they shall by order, under their hands and seals, direct the overseers or churchwardens of any parish or place, where any goods, chattels, lands, or tenements of such persons shall be, to seize and sell so much of the goods and chattels, or receive so much of the annual rent of the lands and tenements of such persons, as is necessary to pay the charges of removal, maintenance, medicine, clothing, and care of such insane person, accounting for the same at the next Quarter Sessions, such charges having been first proved to the satisfaction of such Justices, and the amount thereof being set forth in such order: Provided always, that nothing herein contained shall be construed to extend to restrain or prevent any relation or friend from taking such insane person under their own care and protection."

Sect. 45. "Provided always, and be it enacted, that if any Justice of the Peace shall refuse to make an order for the conveyance of any insane person to any county lunatic asylum, or licensed house for the reception of insane persons, or the application of any overseer of the poor for such purpose, he shall deliver to the said overseer his reasons in writing for such refusal."

(2) Sect. 46. "Provided also, and be it enacted, that if any person shall feel aggrieved, by any order, or by any refusal of an order of any Justice or Justices, as aforesaid, such person may appeal to the Justices of the Peace, at the next Quarter Sessions of the Peace, to be holden in and for the county where the matter of appeal shall have arisen, the person so appealing having given to the Justice or Justices, against whom such appeal shall be made ten days' notice of his or her intention to make such appeal; and the said Justices at such sessions, are hereby authorized and required to hear and determine the matter of such appeal in a summary way, and to make such determination as they shall think proper; and every such determination shall be final and conclusive to all intents and purposes whatsoever."

under any of the preceding sections, by which any person is aggrieved. It was said, however, that this appeal clause was not applicable to orders which contained an adjudication of settlement, and that although the early part of section 54. (3) related only to criminal lunatics, yet that the proviso which gives the notice of appeal, was applicable as well to pauper as criminal lunatics, whenever an adjudication of settlement was made. It may, perhaps, be admitted, that the words of the appeal clause in this section are large enough to include all such cases; but coming at the close of, and forming part of a section containing provisions referable only to a particular class, it is submitted, that they will not have an operation larger than those provisions.

(3) Sect. 54. "And be it further enacted, that in all cases, where any person shall be kept in custody, as an insane person, by order of any Court, or by his Majesty's order subsequent thereunto, it shall and may be lawful for any two Justices of the Peace of the county where such person shall be so kept in custody, to inquire into and ascertain by the best legal evidence that can be procured, under the circumstances of personal legal disability of such insane person, the place of the last legal settlement, and the circumstances of such person; and if it shall not appear that he or she is possessed of sufficient property which can be applied to his or her maintenance, it shall and may be lawful for such two Justices to make order, under their hands and seals, upon such parish where they adjudge him or her to be legally settled, to pay such weekly sum for his or her maintenance, in such place of custody, as one of his Majesty's principal Secretaries of State shall, by writing under his hand, from time to time direct; and where such place of settlement cannot be ascertained, such order shall be made upon the treasurer of the county where such person shall have been apprehended; but if it shall appear that such person is possessed of such sufficient property, as aforesaid, then such Justices shall order and direct the same to be applied, to pay and satisfy the expense of the maintenance of such person, in the manner hereinbefore directed: Provided always, that the churchwardens and overseers of the parish in which the Justices, or the major part of them, shall adjudge any insane person to be settled, may appeal against such order to the General Quarter Sessions of the Peace, to be holden for the county where such order shall be made, in like manner and under like restrictions and regulations, as against any order of removal, giving reasonable notice thereof to the clerk of the peace of such county, who shall be respondent in such appeal; which appeal the Justices of the Peace assembled at the said General Quarter Sessions are hereby authorized and empowered to hear and determine, in the same manner as appeals against orders of removal are now heard and determined."

[COLERIDGE, J.—By section 41, the pauper in this case has been kept at the expense of the county, out of the county rates, which is also the case under section 54, where the place of settlement cannot be ascertained; there would, therefore, appear to be precisely the same reason for making the clerk of the peace, who is the officer of the Justices, in the matter of county rates, the respondent under both sections.]

But as the Justices who make the order, are equally interested in the proper distribution of the county rate, and as it is usual to give notice to those whose act or order is to be affected by the appeal, if the words in section 46, are large enough to include the case, that section cannot be passed over. The several provisions in this statute are contained in former acts, and the appeal clause, section 46, appears to embody the appeal clauses in 17 Geo. 2. c. 5, 51 Geo. 3. c. 79, and 5 Geo. 4. c. 71, which enabled appeals to be made previously in some cases of pauper and vagrant lunatics; but the whole clause, section 54, including the provision as to appeal, is an entire re-enactment from the 48 Geo. 3. c. 96. s. 27, which had express reference to criminal lunatics only. It is submitted, therefore, that as nothing appears to give this clause a wider operation than it had in the former act, it will not be extended, and that the notice under it, in respect of a pauper lunatic is, therefore, erroneous, and the Justices came to a right conclusion, in holding this notice of appeal insufficient.—He also referred to 1 & 2 Vict. c. 14. s. 2, which relates to criminal lunatics only, and contains an appeal clause precisely similar to section 54.

Bodkin, contra, was not called upon.

LORD DENMAN, C.J.—This was a proceeding, by way of appeal, against an adjudication of settlement under section 42. The notice of appeal has been given under section 54; and the question is, whether a notice under that section is proper in this case; and, upon the whole, I think the notice is good. The words of section 54, are quite large enough to include this case, and, notwithstanding the position of the section, may reflect back to other sections. [His Lordship read the words giving an appeal, in section 54.] But the order having been made under section 42, it is said that the intermediate section of appeal, section 46, will include this case, and cannot be passed over. We must, therefore, look at the object of that clause. It gives an appeal "to any person aggrieved by any order, or by any refusal of an order," and appears to me to have reference to the two sections immediately preceding, as to persons wandering about, and where the Justice shall refuse to make an order to convey the person to the county lunatic asylum. Section 46, seems to relate to where an individual, under sections 44. or 45, is affected by an order, or by the refusal of an order, and where, therefore, it is right that the notice should be given to the Justice; but this is not such a case, but is a question between the parish to which the adjudication has been made, and the county upon whom the burthen of maintaining the pauper has been cast, and whose officer, as regards this fund, is the clerk of the peace, who, on that account, would seem to be the proper party to receive the notice of appeal on behalf of the county. It seems, therefore, that there may be a complete case both of an order and refusal of an order under sections 44. and 45, to which section 46. may have reference. Then if that is so, as there seems no distinction, so far as the county fund is concerned, between the cases under section 42, and those under section 54, it seems reasonable that the more general notice under section 54, which clearly applies to cases under that section, should also be given in the present case.

PATTESON, J.—I am of the same opinion, though certainly the case appears to me not to be without considerable difficulties. I think, however, that the notice of appeal in section 54, applies to an order adjudicating the settlement under section 42, as in such cases there appears no difference between pauper and criminal lunatics. The burthen may be cast upon the county in both cases, and the struggle is between the county and another parish. Some party must be respondents, and that party is expressly pointed out by section 54, which has provided for that. Section 46. applies to section 44, the case of a vagrant; and to section 45, where there has been the refusal of an order. But then certainly a difficulty arises, as if under section 44. the vagrant has been adjudged to his settlement, as he may be, there seems no reason why the clerk of the peace should not also be respondent there. But, however, upon the whole, I think section 54. the most applicable, as cases under section 42. and that section are in the same situation, as respects any charge upon the county.

COLERIDGE, J.—I am of the same opinion, and I think that the Magistrates committed an error in not hearing this appeal. It was conceded by Mr. Deedes, as it must be, that the words in section 54. are large enough to include this case; and I suppose it would not have been denied upon the other side, that the words of section 46. are also large enough, so that, in that respect, the one may be set off against the other. The argument against the sufficiency of this notice has been rested principally on two grounds: first, on the effect and scope of the clauses, as they formerly stood in the acts from whence they have been transferred to this act; and secondly, upon the collocation of the clauses in the act now in question. With respect to the first ground, I protest against its being of any force under the circumstances. The act of 9 Geo. 4. c. 40. is a consolidating act; and although it is true, that each appeal clause, as it existed in each act, would be limited to the provisions of its own act, yet when the same words (as I admit those of section 54. are here) are introduced into a certain clause of an act, which contains some new regulations, there can be no ground for saying, that it should not have been intended to give it a more extended application, if the words used will bear it. Secondly, with regard to the collocation of the clauses, that is quite a proper and legitimate argument in the construction of a statute; but I am of opinion, that its force is obviated when we look at the objects of the clauses. Now, it appears to me, that sections 44, 45, and 46. are in the nature of a little island, if I may so say. Under sections 44. and 45, the individual may be affected in many ways, apart from his settlement. He may be affected by an order, as to his being disordered in his senses, or as to his estate, in which instances and others, the Justices would be doing something affecting his personal interests, and not directly affecting his settlement. In such cases it is natural that the Justices should have notice, and such orders appear to me to afford abundant ground for section 46. to act upon. But when we look at the sections under which this settlement has been adjudicated, who are the parties interested? Why clearly the county, which has been charged on the one side, and the parish to which the party is adjudged to belong, on the other. It therefore seems very reasonable, that the clerk of the peace, who represents the county in these public matters, should have the notice and be made respondent. In an ordinary case of appeal, the Justices, who make the order, have no notice of appeal served on them. It seems to me, therefore, that upon the same principle, on which notice is given to the parish officers in an ordinary case of appeal to support their order, notice here should be given to the clerk of the peace.

Jan. 14. { JUSTICES OF THE MIDDLESEX
PAUPER LUNATIC ASYLUM.

Lunatic Asylum—Visiting Justices—Chaplain—Dismissal of.

Under sections 30. and 32. of 9 Geo. 4. c. 40, for the regulation of lunatic asylums, the visiting Justices have the power to dismiss the chaplain of the asylum.

In this case—

Halcomb, Serj. had obtained a rule, calling upon the Justices appointed to visit and inspect the pauper lunatic asylum for the county of Middlesex, situate within the parish or precinct of Norwood, in the said county, to shew cause why a writ of mandamus should not issue, directed to them, commanding them to admit Francis Tebbutt, clerk, into the said asylum, to perform his duties as chaplain, and to pay him the arrears of his salary as such chaplain. It appeared, from the affidavits, that upon the 11th of July 1839, the Rev. Francis Tebbutt was elected by the visiting Justices of the pauper lunatic asylum, to be the chaplain of the asylum, at a yearly salary of 150*l.*, and that his duties were to commence on the 1st of August following. He entered upon his duties on the 4th of August, and received a licence from the Archbishop of Canterbury, within whose province the asylum is situate, on the 9th of January 1841. Upon the 7th of January 1841, the visiting Justices passed the following resolution:—"It appears to this committee essential to the due and proper discharge of the sacred duties devolving upon the chaplain, in his pastoral visits to the patients, that he should from time to time communicate to the resident physician any circumstance connected with the spiritual condition of the patients: the committee therefore request the chaplain's particular attention to this subject." The chaplain having objected to make these communications, some correspondence passed upon the subject, and on the 29th of April 1841, the following resolution was passed by the committee:—"The committee feel themselves imperatively called upon to cancel the appointment of the chaplain, and do hereby resolve, that his appointment shall cease and determine at the expiration of the current year of his office, and that he shall cease to hold the office of chaplain, or perform any of the duties attached thereto, from and after the 11th of July next." It was further resolved, in consequence of a statement by the chaplain, of certain expenses having been incurred by him upon his removing to take up his abode at the asylum, to present him on his retirement with the sum of 50*l.* The clerk to the Justices further informed Mr. Tebbutt, that he might receive on the 11th of July, from the accountant at the office, the sum of 42*l.* 0*s.* 4*d.*, as the amount of salary then due, and also the sum of 50*l.*, if the acceptance thereof would be agreeable. Mr. Tebbutt, in his affidavit, stated, "that he did not on the said 11th of July, nor hath he at any time since, received either of the said several sums of 42*l.* 0*s.* 4*d.*, or 50*l.*, nor any other sum of the said visiting Justices, or any other person, on account of, or in reference to his said appointment." It further appeared, that upon the 25th of June 1841, the Rev. Mr. Burt was appointed chaplain to the asylum, and entered upon his duties upon the 12th of July; and that since that time Mr. Tebbutt had demanded and been refused admission to the asylum. It appeared also, that Mr. Tebbutt's licence had not been revoked by the archbishop, and that no licence had been obtained by Mr. Burt.

Sir W. W. Follett and Whiteharst shewed cause against the rule, and contended, that the power of dismissal of the chaplain, as well as appointment, were vested in the visiting Justices of the asylum under sections 30. and 32. of 9 Geo. 4. c. 40 (1); and that this Court would not consider, whether the Justices had wisely exercised their discretion or not. They also referred to the act 4 Geo. 4. c. 64, relating to gaols and houses of correction, where, by sections 28. and 30, the power of appointing and dismissing the chaplain to the gaol, is given to the Justices assembled in Quarter Sessions; and also to the case of The Queen v. the Guardians of the Poor of the Braintree Union (2), where under the word "officer" as used in section 46. of the Poor Law Act (4 & 5 Will. 4. c. 76), this Court decided, that a chaplain might be appointed in a union.

(1) The following clauses of the 9 Geo. 4. c. 40. were referred to:

Sect. 30. "And be it further enacted, that in all cases, where any such county lunatic asylum shall have been established under the authority of this act, or any former act or acts, the major part of the visitors appointed as aforesaid to superintend the same, present at a meeting duly summoned, such major part not being fewer than three, shall from time to time make such regulations as to them shall seem expedient for the management and conduct thereof, in which regulations shall be set forth the number and description of officers and servants to be kept, the duties to be required, and what salaries respectively shall be paid to them, and may appoint a treasurer and such other officers and servants, together with such number of assistants, as they shall from time to time find necessary, &c. and may dismiss any such officer, servant, or assistant, if they see occasion."

Sect. 32. "Provided always, and be it further enacted, that in every case where a county lunatic asylum shall be provided, a chaplain shall be appointed for the same, which chaplain shall be in full orders, and shall be licensed by the bishop of the diocese; and the said licence shall be revocable by the bishop, whenever he shall think fit to withdraw it; and such chaplain shall perform on each Sunday, and on the great festivals, the divine service of our Church, according to the forms by law established."

Sect. 12. "And be it further enacted, in order to defray the necessary expenses for the execution of this act, that the Justices of the Peace, at their General Quarter Sessions, may and shall assess and tax a special county rate or rates on all places liable to contribute to the county rate, which said special county rate shall be collected, levied, and recovered in like manner, and by such ways and means, and under such penalties, as any ordinary county rate may by law be collected, levied, and recovered."

(2) 10 Law J. Rep. (n.s.) M.C. 76.

Halecomb, Serj. and Watson, supported the rule, and contended, that section 30. gave the Justices no power to dismiss the chaplain, but that such power, by section 32, would be either in the archbishop, who alone had the power to revoke the licence, and had not done so; or in the incumbent of Norwood, in which parish the asylum was situate: that although, by section 32. alone, there was no power to grant a salary, that that might be appointed and paid under the provisions of section 12. They further contended, that a yearly contract had been made at a yearly stipend, but that the notice to discontinue the duties did not expire with the current year, which commenced in August, and not in July, and that the notice was therefore insufficient. They also urged, that the duties required of the chaplain were expressly defined and limited by section 32, and that he could not be called upon to perform any others, and was not therefore included among the "officers and servants to be kept," whose duties were to be pointed out and regulated under section 30. Against the right contended for on the part of the visiting Justices, they also cited Farwerth v. the Bishop of Chester (3).

LORD DENMAN, C.J.—I am of opinion that this rule must be discharged. If there were any real doubt upon the question, it would be right that the Justices should make a return, and that the matter should be further discussed. But I think no reasonable doubt exists as to the power of the Justices to make this dismissal, and I ground that opinion upon the sections 30. and 32, the former of which I consider important as the only one containing any power of appointment.—[After reading section 32, his Lordship proceeded]—It is contended, that this section gives impliedly to the Archbishop the power of appointment, as he is enabled to revoke the licence; but it seems to me, that we can only consider section 32. in conjunction with section 30; then, if that is so, section 30. gives to the Justices a general power of appointment and dismissal, and is amply sufficient; if the appointment of a chaplain may be included under the word "officer." I think the chaplain may be considered as an officer, from analogy as well to our decision upon that word in The Braintree case, as with reference to the provisions of the Gaol Act, in this respect, which have been referred to. Under that act, the clergyman is considered as an officer, and is removable under certain circumstances. The Gaol Act certainly states more in detail the particular duties of the chaplain, and for breach or non-performance of which a dismissal may take place; but reasons will readily occur why a more general power of removal should be contained in the act under discussion. In gaols, the duties of the clergyman are of a more regular kind, with regard to his attendance upon the inmates, and instruction to them in religious duties, and the performance of the services of the church; and in these respects, or as regards any other duties, the particular misconduct may, without difficulty, be specified, which shall make the party liable to dismissal; but in a lunatic asylum, the mere mention of religious subjects to some of the patients may be highly improper, and any allusion to particular (though otherwise most proper) topics, may produce the greatest possible mischief and excitement, and be the occasion of occurrences most carefully to be avoided. There seems, therefore, good reason, in this case, for giving a power of removal, as the Justices "see occasion." It also seems, that section 30. is necessary, in order to enable any salary to be given, and that section 12, which has been referred to as making the county rate chargeable to defray the necessary expenses of the act, is not applicable. It appears to me, therefore, that this is an appointment and dismissal given to the Justices by section 30; and I may add, that I think the Archbishop has not the power of appointing; and that the view of the question taken by his Grace was correct, in supposing that the Justices were to make the appointment, while it was his duty to see that no licence was given to an unfit or improper person. I cannot agree that the duties of the chaplain are limited and confined to those stated in section 32, and that he is therefore not a person of whom "duties may be required" under section 30. There can be no doubt that he may and ought to administer spiritual consolation and instruction to all who are in a fit state to receive it. We, therefore, not having to review the Magistrates' discretion, but only to see whether they have the power to exercise it in this case, I am of opinion, that they have the power, and that, consequently, the rule must be discharged.

PARSONS, J.—I think, that upon reading sections 30. and 32, there is no doubt of the Magistrates' power of removal in this case, and that therefore we ought not to issue this writ of mandamus. It is quite beside the question, whether all the consequences resulting from this power of removal, were contemplated by the legislature, or whether they foresaw that difficulties, which have been suggested, would arise. The Court can only look at the words used in the statute. It appears to me, that section 32. must be read by way of proviso to section 30, notwithstanding the intervention of another section. Section 32. is insensible, if read alone, and as a substantive enactment, as it places in no one the power of appointment. It is said, however, that the incumbent of Norwood would have the power of appointment, as is usual in the appointment of curates to parishes; but under circumstances of this kind, where a new establishment is formed, in which alone the chaplain is to perform his duties, it does not at all follow that this appointment should be made by the incumbent. I think, therefore, looking at these two sections, that the appointment is in the visiting Justices. Then they also have the power to dismiss, "as they see occasion;" nor can this power, to the full extent, be denied to them, without striking out those important words. The duties of the chaplain, and the causes of removal, are certainly not specified in the same manner as in the Gaol Act; but the words in that act shew that the Justices may make the removal, without the intervention or control of the Bishop. Nothing, therefore, arises in this particular act, as to any interference with the ecclesiastical jurisdiction in allowing this power of removal to reside in the Justices. With regard to the largeness of the power of removal, reasons for that have been suggested by my Lord, which appear highly probable, as although in a lunatic asylum, the chaplain may be most strict and correct in all the duties appertaining to his office, he may yet on other accounts, be an unfit person to hold the situation. The rule, therefore, must be discharged.

COLERIDGE, J.—I am entirely of the same opinion. I cannot consider that any important rights of the Archbishop, or of the general spiritual jurisdiction, are involved in this inquiry, but that we simply have to determine whether this party is entitled to what he prays for: and first, with regard to any arrears of salary, it does not distinctly appear whether any are due, and if that part of the rule is looked at separately, no such demand and refusal appears as to that, as to warrant us at present in granting the writ for that alone. If anything is now due, matters may be put into a proper train, and an application made with regard to the salary. Then upon the other point—has the applicant a right to be admitted? And with respect to that, has he been ill or well appointed? If he has been improperly appointed, it is hardly right to press for a restoration; but if the appointment was rightly made under the act, then we must see how that appointment was made. Now, section 30. gives an express power to appoint officers; but it is said, that a chaplain cannot be included under that word. But why not? I can see nothing degrading in his being included in the words "officer or servant," especially as, under the term "officer," a clergyman is included, in the Gaol Act; and we have put a similar construction upon the same word, under the Poor Law Amendment Act, where, indeed, by the interpretation clause, the word "officer" is expressly made to include a clergyman, where it shall be necessary. It is said, that another difficulty occurs, in giving to laymen the power of removal; but such a power is expressly given in the Gaol Act, though the circumstances under which it may be exercised are fully detailed; a sufficient reason for which difference in the two acts has been already given. If then a power of appointment and removal exists under sections 30. and 32, all difficulty ceases. It is contended, however, that section 32. must be looked at alone, but I agree that that section must be read as a proviso on section 30, as otherwise, by section 32. alone, no provision whatever is made for any one to appoint. Who then, in that view of the case, is to appoint? and whence is any provision to be made for a salary? We are referred to section 12, but that only pledges the county rate for certain specific tices can give the costs of the evidence on the second inquiry, but not on the first.

[PATTESON, J.—How are the officers of the appellant parish to form any judgment, whether to appeal or not, if the examination of the pauper merely states a settlement? The object of the act is, to give them twenty-one days to consider whether they will appeal or not. A pauper makes a general statement of a settlement, acquired, perhaps, by the act of a husband or father, in a distant part of the country; then your argument would throw the burden of making an expensive inquiry on the appellant parish.]

Moreover, there appears no substantial reason why hearsay might not be evidence of place of birth, as it notoriously may be of time of birth—Phillipps on Evidence, ch. 13. s. 1; or of illegitimacy, Cooke v. Lloyd (4), notwithstanding the distinction set up in The King v. Erith (5). See Herbert v. Tuckal (6), Crease v. Barrett (7), Johnson v. Lawson (8), Berkeley Peerage Case (9).

LORD DENMAN, C.J.—The question is, whether an order of removal is well founded, on the following examination, [here his Lordship read the examination,] the appellants having given notice that they object to it as insufficient. The first doubt suggested is, whether this case is within the authority of The King v. Ecclesall Bierlow, and The King v. Lydeard St. Lawrence. Of that it is impossible to entertain a doubt. It is perfectly obvious, that the pauper does not profess to know, of her own knowledge, that which she states. We cannot shut our eyes to this. Next, whether those authorities were rightly decided: and of that also I have no doubt. Nevertheless, I by no means regret that the doctrine contained in them has been brought again under our consideration. It may unquestionably be attended with some inconveniences: but, I think, the balance of inconvenience is the other way. I do not consider it as a doctrine which has arisen out of the Poor Law Amendment Act. It is not necessary to inquire, what would have been the case before that statute; but now, the examination being handed over to the officers of the other parish, and open to their objection, the question of sufficiency can be raised, and the general principle of law is brought into operation. I think, an order not founded on legal evidence, is no order at all: it is no legal document; it has no binding force whatever. If hearsay alone were receivable, it would be sufficient to say, "I am settled," or "I have heard some one say that I am settled;" and we cannot entertain ingenious assumptions of possible ways in which such statements might be legal evidence. I believe that many of these country proceedings were heretofore conducted in a much looser manner than would bear examination: but when brought into court their badness becomes apparent. No doubt the necessity of producing legal documents, and so forth, might raise difficulties in the way of proceedings before the Justices. Perhaps the legislature would do well to make some provision for meeting them. But if an order proceeds on no inquiry at all, an appeal is rendered almost inevitable. I think the state of things respecting costs makes rather for than against our decision. If each were ignorant of the grounds of the proceedings of the adversary, they would go to trial merely to ascertain them. Now, if the examination is properly communicated, and affords substantial evidence, the appellant parish may be rightly saddled with costs, if it refuse to submit. But then, it is said, that no costs can be recovered by the respondent parish for its proceedings before the Magistrates. Why should they? The respondents get the benefit: and they must pay the costs of their ex parte proceeding. It appears to be supposed, that there is a sort of inequality between the two parties: the appellants having to give their grounds of appeal only. But the examination is that on which the respondents are themselves to act. As to the other party, it is sufficient to say, that the act only requires their grounds to be stated: whether or not it might be convenient that they should go further, the act does not impose any other conditions upon them. I think we are doing a benefit to the public by our decision. Those who wish to avail themselves of an act of Magistrates must bring legal evidence before them.

PATTERSON, J.—There is no doubt as to the insufficiency of this examination. Supposing that it could be argued, on the authority of any case or dictum, that there is no distinction as to evidence of place or time of birth (and I know of none such), here the evidence as to time would be clearly inadmissible; much more as to place. Suppose no other evidence were given at the trial, how can any one know, of his own knowledge, either the time or place of his birth? I have no hesitation in holding, that no legal evidence was given here either of the place of birth, time of birth, or fact of illegitimacy. Then comes the general question. I admit, that the strongest objection to the principle of our decisions is, the inconvenience of going before Magistrates, producing deeds and subscribing witnesses, proving execution, and so forth; and all this without any provision for getting the costs of the proceeding. That is true; but then, on the other hand, I apprehend that the probability of appeals is much lessened by this strictness. If legal evidence appears on the examination, it is far less likely that the appellant will resist. I think the meaning of the act is, that the disclosures on the part of the removing parish should be sufficient to enable the other party to see whether they will acquiesce or not; and I cannot see how any such discretion could be exercised, if no legal evidence need be shewn them. Put the case of a settlement by apprenticeship. Suppose the pauper only says before the Magistrates, "I was bound," &c., what is the other parish to do? Must its officers search about to find out where the indenture is, who are the subscribing witnesses, when it was executed? By such means, the onus of all this expense would be thrown on the parish to which the removal takes place: that seems to me to be throwing it on the wrong party. Whether the consequences of these decisions may be to render it difficult to remove paupers, and whether that inconvenience is such as would induce the legislature to interfere, I cannot say; but the doctrine rests on general principles of interpretation. If, indeed, the parties appealing do not state in their grounds their objection on the score of apparent deficiency, it is another thing; but if they do, the course is open to the respondents to consider, whether the objection exists. If, after that, they choose to go on, they cannot complain. But they might perhaps abandon their order and get another. It might be hard on them if they were not allowed to do so. But that is not the question before us at present.

COLERIDGE, J.—I agree in thinking, that it was not inconvenient that these cases should receive a fresh consideration. Three points have been made in the present instance:—first, that this case is distinguishable from former ones;—second, that the evidence taken before the Magistrates was legal;—third, that we ought to reconsider our decisions. As to the first, there was, in one of them, another objection to the examination; but no one can doubt that the Court intended to lay down exactly the same principle. Therefore, if that other ground were shaken, the decision would still stand. The others, I think, not distinguishable. No doubt it was there distinctly stated, that the evidence was hearsay; but if the facts deposed to are such as can only be known by hearsay, it is the same thing. Next, was this legal evidence? I will not go through the cases. It may be easy to construct an ingenious argument against the distinction established in them. But the judgment in The King v. Erith was a well considered one; because the Court saw the bearing it would have on questions of pedigree generally. There the Court expressly made a distinction between the effect of hearsay, as evidence of the time and of the place of birth. I have not courage to recommend that it should be overruled. But, on general grounds also, the distinction appears well founded. Lastly, were the two cases referred to rightly decided? No one can be more sensible of the great inconvenience which may result from them than I am; so much so, that I have entertained doubts whether I ought to have so decided: but I must say, that the judgments given by the learned Judges who have preceded me to-day, have satisfied me that we were right; and I see that the balance of convenience is, on the whole, in our favour. I will not now go into the particulars; but much inconvenience is remedied, I think, by the provision which suspends the removal for twenty-one days. If the deficiency is not pointed out to the respondent parish in good time, the objection may be waived. I believe, moreover, that we are in reality only carrying out the principle of the old law. If it had been the practice, in old times, to set out the grounds on which the order was made in the order itself, I apprehend the same objections to it might have been made available at Sessions as now, when the respondent parish is compelled to impart the examination to the appellant, and the latter to state the grounds of appeal.

WIGHTMAN, J.—I cannot distinguish this from former cases. The object is, that the parish charged may know the grounds of removal to it, in order that litigation may be avoided. Here, the objection is, that there is no evidence whatever to shew that the appellant parish was charged at all; and that is the result of the application of the rules of evidence to this examination. It is contended, that hearsay evidence is admissible on a question of pedigree; and particularly as to time; and if so, why not as to place? The distinction is clearly taken in The King v. Erith; but, besides that, on general principles, the persons of whose declarations evidence has been admitted, were such as of their own knowledge might know the facts. Therefore, there is no evidence whatever on this examination.

Jan. 22. } OF STAPLEFORD FITZPAINE.

Settlement—Examination—Grounds of Appeal—General Objection to Examination as bad on the face, where insufficient.

Under the general ground of objection, that an examination "is informal, and wholly insufficient in law, and bad on the face of it," and that it "does not contain any sufficient evidence of a settlement," an appellant parish cannot object, that some material facts appear not to have been proved before the Magistrates by legal evidence, especially where there are other grounds of appeal, pointing out specific defects on the face of the examination, and not noticing this: e. g., where a settlement by payment of parochial taxes is relied on, and it does not appear that the parish books were produced or accounted for, or any other legal evidence of rating given.

The respondent parish relied on a settlement gained by the pauper's husband's father, by payment of parochial taxes. It appeared on the face of the examination, that during the period in which such taxes were paid, the pauper's husband resided with his father as one of his family:—Held, that this was a sufficient statement, on the face of the examination, that the pauper's husband was unemancipated when his father acquired the settlement.

This was an appeal against an order, whereby Betty Hake, widow, and her four children, were removed from Stapleford Fitzpaine to Buckland St. Mary. The Court of Quarter Sessions for Somersetshire quashed the order, subject to the following

CASE.

The examinations upon which the order of removal was made, were as follows:—The examination of Betty Hake, who saith as follows: "I am the widow of Sander Hake, late of Stapleford Fitzpaine aforesaid, labourer, deceased. I was married to the said Sander Hake, in the parish church of Buckland St. Mary, about sixteen years ago. On my marriage, I went to live with my husband on an estate at Blindmore, in the said parish of Buckland St. Mary, who resided with his father, and was carter to him. After we had lived there about a year, my father-in-law was turned out of the estate, upon which, he went to Stapleford Fitzpaine, and I and my husband went to Curland, and lived there with my father and mother. My husband never rented 10l. a year afterwards. My husband, Sander Hake, died about seven years ago, and I and my four children, by the said Sander Hake, videlicet; &c., are now chargeable to the said parish of Stapleford Fitzpaine." The examination of Mary Hake, who saith as follows: "I am the widow of John Hake, deceased. About twenty-six years ago, being about the year 1815, Mr. George Score employed my husband to work on and take care of his estate at Blindmore, in the said parish of Buckland St. Mary, and during that year the said Mr. Score, who was at our house, said to my husband, 'John, you shall have this estate,' to which my husband replied, 'I am not strong enough to stock it.' He then said, 'Won't you have it if I give it to you? You can borrow some money, and I'll be bound for it.' It was then understood my husband was to have it. It contained in quantity about 100 acres, and was worth upwards of 100*l.* a year. My husband afterwards stocked the estate, and occupied it about thirteen years, except small parts of it he let to his sons. I believe he paid the rates and taxes all the time for the whole. I frequently saw him pay the overseers the poor-rates, and many times paid them myself. After occupying the estate about thirteen years, my husband was turned out of it by an ejectment." The examination of John Hake, who saith as follows: "I was present in the year 1815, and heard Mr. Score say he would give the estate to my father, and he might do what he liked with it. Mr. Score called John Pinney, who is now dead, to witness that he gave it to my father. My father afterwards occupied it about thirteen years, except small parts of it, which he, about three years afterwards let to me and my brother, under 20*l.* a year, but my father paid the rates and taxes for the whole. From 1815, my brother Sander lived on the estate with my father, as one of his family. My father stocked the farm, and paid the rates and taxes. He also bought a new waggon, on which his name was painted, and his name was also on the iron-work of the gates. I paid my father rent for the land I took of him. My father, during the time he occupied the estate, built a new lime-kiln on it, and sold lime, and afterwards let the kiln to Mr. Edward Ackland." The examination of Thomas Willie, who saith as follows: "I was overseer of the parish of Buckland St. Mary five or six years, during the time the said John Hake occupied the estate, and about the year 1826 collected the poor-rates of him as the occupier." The following were the grounds of appeal:—That the said John Hake, the father of Sander Hake, did not gain any settlement in our parish of Buckland St. Mary, by any of the means stated in the examination, and that the said Betty Hake and her children were not settled in our parish, in the manner stated in the examination; that the said John Hake was not rated, and did not pay rates and taxes for the estate at Blindmore, as stated in the examination; that the said John Hake never was the occupier of the estate at Blind-more; that the said examination is informal and wholly insufficient in law, and bad on the face of it; that the examination does not contain any sufficient evidence of a settlement gained in our said parish of Buckland St. Mary, by the said John Hake, nor does it contain any valid grounds of removal of the said Betty Hake and her children to our said parish; that the examination does not shew that Sander Hake was at any time settled in our parish of Buckland St. Mary, there being no proof or statement, on the face of the examination, that the said Sander Hake was unemancipated at the time of his marriage, so as to derive a settlement from his father John Hake; that the examination does not state when or in what year or years the said John Hake occupied the estate at Blindmore, or in what year or years he paid rates and taxes for the same; that the examination does not state that the said John Hake resided forty days in our parish of Buckland St. Mary, during the time that he occupied the said estate at Blindmore, or after he had so paid rates and taxes for the same; that the examination does not state any residence by the said John Hake, in our said parish of Buckland St. Mary, sufficient to confer a settlement under the statute of 13 & 14 Car. 2. c. 12.

Upon the trial of the appeal, it was proved that John Hake, the father of Sander Hake, had, from the year 1813 to 1815, managed the estate mentioned in the examination for Mr. George Score, in the appellant parish; that in 1815, Mr. G. Score made a verbal gift of the estate to John Hake, in the manner stated in the examination; that from 1815 to 1826, John Hake resided in and occupied the said estate, claiming title thereto by virtue of the said gift, and paying no rent for the same; that in 1824, John Hake made a feoffment of the estate, and levied a fine of the same to the use of himself in fee, and was turned out by ejectment in 1826; that from 1815 to 1826, he was charged to and paid all the parochial rates and taxes in respect of the said estate, including the land-tax; that Sander Hake resided with his father from 1815 to 1825, as one of his family, being unemancipated; and that he was married to the pauper in August 1825.

The Court were of opinion that John Hake acquired a settlement in the appellant parish, both by such residence under a claim of ownership of the estate, and also by being charged unto, and paying, parochial rates and public taxes; and that Sander Hake followed his father's settlement up to August 1825. Although the Court were of opinion, that under these circumstances, the settlement of Sander Hake was in the appellant parish, and that the respondents were entitled to the judgment of the Court on the merits, they quashed the order, upon the ground, that the examination was, on the face of it, insufficient to enable the respondents to go into either of these grounds of removal. If the Court of Queen's Bench should be of opinion that the examination was sufficient, then the order of Sessions to be quashed, and the order of removal to be confirmed. If the Court should be of opinion that the examination was insufficient, the order of Sessions to be confirmed.

The case was argued on the 22nd of January, by—

Erle and Moody, in support of the order of Sessions.—The settlement of the pauper, in this case, is derivative from her husband, and her husband's from his father, John Hake; and the Sessions have found, that in point of fact John Hake acquired a settlement in Buckland St. Mary, by residing there under a claim of ownership, and by payment of parochial taxes; but they have quashed the order, on the ground, that the examinations are defective in several points. First, it is not stated in the examinations, that the son was unemancipated at the time when the settlement was acquired by the father; and even admitting that this fact might be collected, as a high probability, from the whole tenour of the examinations, it should be positively stated, and not left to such conjecture. Secondly, it is not stated positively in the examinations, that the father, John Hake, resided forty days on the property. Thirdly, the settlement by claim of ownership, may be disposed of at once, as such a settlement could not be acquired in this way—The King v. Wooburn (1), The King v. Chew Magna (2), The King v. Pensax (3). And they were not entitled to go into the settlement by payment of parochial taxes; because, it appears, on the face of the examination, that it contains no legal evidence of such a settlement; the overseer was present, and stated, that he received the rates, but no parish books were produced, and no legal evidence of rating given before the Magistrates.

[PATTESON, J.—How can you avail yourself of that objection, without any ground alleging the want of legal evidence of rating?]

Under the formal ground, that the said examination is informal and wholly insufficient in law, and bad on the face of it—The Queen v. Middleton in Teesdale (4).

The Solicitor General (Sir W. W. Follett) and Fitzherbert, contra.—It is impossible to apply the same strict rules to the taking of evidence before Magistrates, as to the taking of it at Nisi Prius. Before the Magistrates there are no parties, and consequently there is no one to object to the question of illegal evidence. But at Nisi Prius, if a fact were proved by illegal evidence, unobjected to, a new trial would not be granted. For instance, if a deed were read without calling the attesting witness.

[PATTESON, J.—There is a party to object; the examinations are to be sent to the other parish, in order that they may object.]

How were the parish books in this instance to be produced? They belong to the appellant parish; and how could its officers be compelled to produce them? To whom is notice to produce to be given, for there are no litigant parties? Besides, if the parish of Buckland St. Mary had called on John Hake for the rates, and received them, they admitted him to be settled; and thus the evidence given amounts to an admission on their parts.

[PATTESON, J. referred to The King v. Coppull (5), which decides, that a settlement by being rated, and paying rates, cannot be proved by evidence of paying only, without the production of the rate, or accounting reasonably for the non-production of it.]

But, at all events, it does not appear on the grounds of appeal, that the appellants intended to rely on the non-production of the rate-book. This objection could not be advanced under the general ground, that the examination is bad on the face of it; and if it could in any case, certainly not where the appellants have gone on to make a number of specific objections to the examination, omitting this particular one. With respect to its not appearing on the examination, that the son was unemancipated when the settlement was obtained, the examination does state that he was residing with the father as one of the family; and that is the test of non-emancipation.

Cur. adv. vult.

LORD DENMAN, C.J. now delivered the judgment of the Court.—This is an appeal against an order of removal. An objection was made to the examination, on the reception of evidence in support of the order, in consequence of an alleged defect in such examination. The Sessions found, that one John Hake, the pauper's father-in-law, under whom the settlement was claimed, acquired a settlement in the appellant parish by residence under a claim of ownership of an estate, and also by being charged to and paying parochial rates, and that the respondents were entitled to the judgment of the Court upon the merits; but they quashed the order, on the ground, that the examination, on the face of it, was insufficient to enable the respondents to go into either of these grounds of removal. The Sessions have submitted to us, simply, the question of the sufficiency of the examination for this purpose. On the part of the respondents, the case at present has only been argued in respect of the settlement by rating; and if we are of opinion the examination was sufficient to let them into that case, it would be unnecessary to go further. One ground of removal is enough, and the Sessions have not submitted to us the conclusion they have drawn from the evidence. Supposing they were at liberty to consider it at all, before we inquire into the sufficiency of the examination, it is necessary to consider the statement of the grounds of appeal; because the appellants can make no other objections to that part of the respondent's case, than are stated in such grounds. We agree with the respondent's counsel, that at least the same degree of strictness is to be used in deciding on the sufficiency of such statement, as in deciding on that of the examination. Both are to be treated with a view to advance the objects of the statute in requiring them. The examination, construed fairly, must shew that the Justices have prima facie been justified in making the order. The grounds of appeal, construed in the same way, must disclose the nature of the objection to the order, or the new matter, as the case may be, which induces the appellant to resist the removal. By these means, the legislature has wisely thought, the expense of groundless removals and fruitless appeals will best be prevented; and it is the duty of the Court of Quarter Sessions, and of this Court, to take care that the provisions of the statute be fairly and fully carried out. The statement of the grounds of appeal, so far as regards the present question, after objecting that in fact John Hake was not rated, and did not pay rates, as stated in the examination, thus proceeds: "That the said examination is informal, wholly insufficient in law, and bad on the face of it; that it does not contain any sufficient evidence of a settlement gained in our parish, nor any valid ground of removal to our parish; that it does not shew that Sander, the pauper's husband, was unemancipated at the time of his marriage, so as to derive a settlement from his father; that it does not state in what year John Hake paid rates or taxes, or that he had resided forty days after he had so paid rates and taxes. It may be conceded, that the examination does not in any part of it state, in express terms, that Hake was rated; and assuming that the parish rates were not produced or proved before the removing Justices, two questions might have arisen: first, whether the examination is, on these accounts, defective: and, secondly, looking at it and the notice of appeal together, whether the respondent could be properly admitted to prove a rating at the time. But, it appears to us, that the statement itself is so framed as to preclude the appellant from insisting on either of these objections. It does not object to the examination for any want of proof of rating. It denies that Hake was rated in fact, but does not say, that the examination contains no evidence of such rating.

It was argued, that this objection was open under the general words "informal, insufficient in law, and bad on the face of it." We are quite clear that, under those words, if they stood alone, no objection would be open in this case to the appellants, for they would convey no information to the respondents of the grounds of appeal intended to be relied upon; and to hold them sufficient would defeat the very object of the statute. The addition of other particulars, instead of helping the appellants, makes their case worse. Any one reading the general words, followed by the specific objections, would conclude, that they were intended only to introduce and comprise no more than such particulars as were afterwards specified; and when, besides this, they are preceded by a denial in terms that John Hake was in fact rated, the respondents would still more certainly be led to conclude, that it is not intended to object to the want of evidence before the removing Justices, but to rely on the fact itself being otherwise than was asserted. Instead, therefore, of having a defect pointed out in the examination, of the existence of which, if true, they must be aware, and which would lead to at once abandoning the support of the order, they would see themselves challenged only to prove the fact on the trial, and be led to prepare themselves to prove it there. On the principle before laid down, we think the notice defective for the purpose. We were referred to The Queen v. Middleton in Teesdale, as being inconsistent with this. There the grounds of appeal were stated thus: "The order and examination, as also the notice of chargeability, are bad on the face thereof." We thought this enough to let the appellant into an objection to the following paragraph of the examination: "My father gained a settlement in such a parish, by renting and occupying a house, &c. of one A. B, at the yearly rent of 10l." That was the whole that related to the settlement, and nothing was said of the time for which it was rated or occupied; and in such a case, we think it was enough to say, the examination was bad on the face it. The notice not only could not mislead, but would scarcely fail to point out, to those who read it with ordinary care, the defect intended to be insisted upon. The facts of the two cases are so different, that the decision of the one case can be no authority for that of the other. The second question is decided by the fate of the first. There was clearly nothing to prevent the respondents from proving a rate at the time of the trial, but the assumed defect in the examination. As to want of express statement and strict proof of such rating, that is impliedly stated, and at all events irregularly proved by the evidence of the parish officer, who states he called on Hake as the occupier for the rates, and he paid them. But, if the appellants are precluded from insisting on this defect, by the insufficiency of their notice, it is as between these parties as if it had never been made. Other points in support of the order of Sessions were argued, but they have not left them open to us to inquire into them. With respect, indeed, to the question of emancipation, we may say, the examination appears to us not to be deficient as to this, the non-emancipation of Sander Hake being clearly to be presumed from the depositions set out.

We are of opinion, therefore, with reference to the notice and grounds of appeal, that this examination is sufficient as to the settlement by rating, and that the order of Sessions must therefore be quashed. We had some idea of going a little more fully into the cases we have decided, and shewing they are perfectly consistent with this. We are of that opinion, and certainly desire to be understood, that in coming to this determination, we do not interfere at all with any of those decisions.

1842. } THE QUEEN v. THE INHAB-
Jan. 26. } ITANTS OF WHISSENDINE.

Estate—Lunatic—Removal to Lunatic Asylum—Ceasing to inhabit—Poor Law Act.

A pauper lunatic, who had gained a settlement by estate, was removed from his estate, where he was residing, to the county lunatic asylum, by an order of two Justices, under the 9 Geo. 4. c. 40, the asylum being distant more than ten miles from the parish where the estate lay:—Held, that section 68. of the Poor Law Act was applicable to this case; and that, by this removal, the party had "ceased to inhabit," within the meaning of that provision, and did not retain his settlement by estate after that removal.

The parish of Whissendine appealed against an order of two Justices of the borough of Leicester, calling upon the parish to pay 12s. per week, towards the support of a pauper lunatic, named Edward Peach, then in the Leicester county lunatic asylum, and adjudging his last legal settlement to be in Whissendine. The order was confirmed by the Sessions, subject to the opinion of this Court upon the following

CASE.

Edward Peach, the pauper, was entitled, under the will of his father, Robert Peach, to one-seventh share of his real estates, situate in the parish of Whissendine, in the county of Rutland. He was born in the parish of Whissendine, in the year 1810, and resided there, with his mother, until he was about fourteen years old (in the year 1824), when he was apprenticed to John Hind, an ironmonger, in the parish of St. Martin's, Leicester. He served him three years in that parish, when he ran away from his master, and went home to his mother, at Whissendine. Shortly afterwards, in the year 1827, the indentures were duly cancelled, by consent. From this period till the beginning of 1837, he continued to live with his mother, in a house, part of the estate, in the parish of Whissendine, devised to him and his brothers and sisters, by his father's will, and thereby gained a settlement by estate in the parish of Whissendine. In the year 1837, having become quite insane, he was removed to the Leicester county lunatic asylum, where he remained until the month of April, in the year 1841, being maintained partly by his relations and partly by his proportion of the rents of his estate, the latter alone being insufficient for his support. In the month of April, his relations declining to contribute any longer to his support, he was taken from the asylum, and brought to the parish of Whissendine, and remained there one night, but, on the parish officers of Whissendine declining to acknowledge him as their pauper, he was taken back to Leicester, and the necessary warrant and order of two Justices of the borough of Leicester, for his removal to the same asylum, and his maintenance there at the expense of the parish of Whissendine, as a pauper lunatic, were duly obtained, made, and served on the parish officers of Whissendine; and he was accordingly removed. At the trial, the appellants proved a settlement by apprenticeship in the parish of St. Martin's, Leicester. The respondents relied on the subsequent settlement by estate, which was gained in the parish of Whissendine, after the pauper left St. Martin's. The appellants then contended, that under the statute 4 & 5 Will. 4. c. 76. s. 68, the settlement gained in Whissendine by the pauper's residence on his estate was destroyed by his removal into the asylum at Leicester, more than ten miles therefrom; that the effect of 4 & 5 Will. 4. c. 76. s. 68. was to do away settlements by estate, and to throw the pauper back on the antecedent settlement, and that, therefore, the settlement of the pauper was in the parish in which he was apprenticed. For the respondents, it was contended, that the case was not within the 68th section of 4 & 5 Will. 4. c. 76, and that that section did not apply to the involuntary removal of an insane person.

Mellor, in support of the order of Sessions. — This is not a case intended to be included in the provisions of section 68. (1) of the Poor Law Act. That section has no application to lunatic paupers, respecting whose settlements orders are made, not by virtue of the general statutes, but a particular act, 9 Geo. 4. c. 40.

But their general application would work great hardship here, as a lunatic pauper may be removed from his own estate and put into an asylum against his will, but no ordinary pauper can be removed from his own estate. The words being general is not of itself sufficient—The Mayor of Leicester v. Burgess (2). If, therefore, the words are considered sufficiently general, yet there is ample reason that, in their application, they should be confined to persons who can exercise a will of their own. The words "shall cease to inhabit," further imply an abandonment of an intention to return. Nor doth the word "inhabit" necessarily imply personal residence; the possession of lands or tenements is sufficient. In commenting upon the word "inhabitant," in the Statute of Bridges, Lord Coke says (2nd Instit. 702), "Although a man be dwelling in a house in a foreign country, riding, city, or town corporate, yet if he have lands and tenements in his own possession, and manurance, in the county, riding, city, or town corporate, where the decayed bridge is, he is an inhabitant, both where his person dwelleth, and where he hath lands or tenements in his own possession, within the statute"—The King v. St. Luke's Hospital (3), The Governors of the Bristol Poor v. Wait (4). The concluding words of section 68. also contemplate the case of a party having gained a subsequent settlement, which would further shew it not to be applicable to lunatics, who, by their confinement, are prevented from gaining a subsequent settlement.

(1) Section 68.—“And be it further enacted, that no person shall be deemed, adjudged, or taken to retain any settlement, gained by virtue of any possession of any estate or interest, in any parish, for any longer or further time than such person shall inhabit within ten miles thereof; and in case such person shall cease to inhabit within such distance, and thereafter become chargeable, such person shall be liable to be removed to the parish wherein, previously to such inhabitancy, he may have been legally settled; or in case he may have, subsequently to such inhabitancy, gained a legal settlement in some other parish, then to such other parish.”

(2) 5 B. & Ad. 246; s. c. 2 Law J. Rep. (n.s.) K.B. 187.

[PATTESON, J.—In that case he may be removed to the parish where, "previously to such inhabitation, he may have been legally settled."]

But yet some determination on his part to cease to inhabit must be shewn.

[COLERIDGE, J.—Under stat. 9 Geo. 4. c. 40, where a lunatic is removed into an asylum, and his settlement is known, it is then adjudicated upon. Here the settlement would be known, but, as it is said he has ceased to inhabit, are the Justices to abandon that settlement, and go on and inquire into his previous settlement?]

It is submitted they are not, and that the party has not ceased to inhabit within the meaning of the act. As to the construction of statutes, he referred to Bac. Abrid. 'Statutes,' I. 5.

White, contra, was stopped by the Court.

(3) 2 Barr. 1053.

(4) 5 Ad. & El. 1; s.c. 5 Law J. Rep. (n.s.) M.C. 133.

LORD DENMAN, C.J.—It appears to me that if the legislature had had their attention called to the cases of pauper lunatics when this section was passed, they could not have used words more proper to include such cases than they have done. The phrase is not "to go, or depart," which might be construed to imply a voluntary act, but the words used are "cease to inhabit." This case, therefore, is clearly within the words; and I cannot avoid thinking that such cases were in contemplation, notwithstanding some doubts of my Brother Coleridge, and what has been urged at the bar. We, therefore, ought not to interfere where the words are so clear, even if all the effects should not have been contemplated.

PATTESON, J.—I cannot construe the words "cease to inhabit" in any way that can enable me to say that this party has not ceased to inhabit. It seemed to me strange, at first, that a parish, by sending a pauper to a lunatic asylum, might get rid of the burthen of supporting him; but, until 1841, he was kept there at the expense of his relations, and since that, at the expense of the parish, which may be called on where the relations cannot or refuse to support. The case of a pauper lunatic being removed to a lunatic asylum is clearly within the words of the section.

COLERIDGE, J.—Upon consideration, I am of the same opinion. I have doubts whether this case was in the contemplation of the legislature when the section was passed; but even that may not be a sufficient reason for not giving to plain words their full meaning. Such words certainly seem to have been selected here, as exclude all other considerations but whether the party has "ceased to inhabit" or not. Now it cannot be said that this person has not "ceased to inhabit," and I therefore concur with the rest of the Court.

WIGHTMAN, J.—There may be difficulties in the application of this enactment in particular cases, but I do not see that any arise here; and the words that have been used are too strong to be overcome.

Order of Sessions quashed.

Jan. 12. } JONES v. GURDON.

Justice of the Peace—Game—Conviction—Damages.

The stat. 43 Geo. 3. c. 141. does not extend to protect a Magistrate against actions of trespass, where he had no jurisdiction to convict, although the conviction has been quashed.

An information or complaint under rule 13, schedule L, 52 Geo. 3. c. 93, must be heard before the same Justice to whom it has been made.

Therefore, where an information had been made to a Justice, under 52 Geo. 3. c. 93. sched. L, r. 13, who granted a warrant for the apprehension of the plaintiff, and the plaintiff was afterwards apprehended on this warrant, and carried before the defendant, another Justice, by whom he was convicted, and imprisoned in default of paying the penalty; which conviction was quashed on appeal:—Held, that trespass for false imprisonment lay.

Quære—whether the conviction, as well as the information, under the above rule, must take place within three months after the offence has been committed.

Trespass for seizing and imprisoning the plaintiff.

Plea—Not guilty.

On the 2nd of October 1838, the following information was laid against the plaintiff, before George Dawson, Esq., a Justice of the Peace, and Commissioner of Taxes, for the county of Suffolk.

"The information and complaint of Henry Lipscombe, &c. On the morning of this day, about 7 o'clock, William Jones, of the parish of Stoke aforesaid, labourer, was on a field called Town Field, in the occupation of Mrs. Durham, armed with a gun, in pursuit of game, not being authorized to do so, for want of a game certificate."

Upon this Mr. Dawson granted the following warrant for the apprehension of plaintiff, under 1 & 2 Will. 4. c. 32. s. 42.

"To the constable of Stoke by Nayland, &c. Forasmuch as Henry Lipscombe, of Stoke by Nayland, in the same county, gamekeeper, hath this day made information and complaint, supported upon oath, before me, Charles Dawson, Esq., one of Her Majesty's Justices of the Peace in and for the said county, that William Jones, of Stoke by Nayland, in the said county, labourer, on the second day of October, at Stoke, in the said county, was on a field called Town Field, about seven o'clock in the morning, in the occupation of Mrs. Durham, armed with a gun, in pursuit of game, not being authorized so to do, for want of a game certificate: these are therefore to command you, in Her Majesty's name, forthwith to apprehend and bring before me, or some other of Her Majesty's Justices of the Peace, in and for the said county, the body of the said William Jones, to answer unto the said complaint, and to be further dealt with according to law. Herein fail not. Given under my hand and seal, the second day of October, in the year of our Lord One thousand eight hundred and thirty-eight.

(Signed) "Charles Dawson."

The plaintiff absconded, and kept out of the way till the following March, when he returned to his home. On the 25th of October 1839, he was taken into custody on the above warrant, and carried before the defendant, another Magistrate for Suffolk, and Commissioner of Taxes. On that day a fresh information was laid against the plaintiff by one Thomas Mortimer, which was reduced into writing as follows:—

"The information and complaint of Mr. Thomas Mortimer, of the parish of Stoke, in the said county of Suffolk, taken and made before me, one of Her Majesty's Justices of the Peace for the said county, this 25th of October 1839, who saith, that on the 2nd of October William Jones shot a hare in a field called Town Field, in the parish of Stoke, in the occupation of Mrs. Durham, the property of Sir Joshua Rowley, to whom I am gamekeeper." A warrant was issued that day. The examination of one William Martin was taken to the same effect.

The defendant convicted the plaintiff under the Tax Act, 52 Geo. 3. c. 93, in the penalty of 20*l.*, and, in default of payment, committed him to the gaol of Bury St. Edmund's for six months, which was the imprisonment complained of.

The following was the form of the conviction:—

"Be it remembered, that, on the 25th day of October, in the year of our Lord 1839, at Assington, in the county of Suffolk, William Jones, of the parish of Stoke by Nayland, in the said county, labourer, was duly convicted by me, John Gurdon, Esq., for that he, the said William Jones, did, on the 2nd day of October, A.D. 1838, on land the property of Sir Joshua Rowley, Bart., in the parish of Stoke aforesaid, use a gun for the purpose of taking or killing game, not being authorized so to do for want of a game certificate, contrary to the statute in such case made and provided. The original complaint or information against the said William Jones for the said offence having been made before Charles Dawson, Esq., one of Her Majesty's Justices of the Peace, and also a Commissioner acting in the execution of the acts relating to assessed taxes for the district of Babergh, in the said county, within three calendar months after the commission of the said offence. And I did adjudge the said William Jones, for the said offence, to forfeit and pay the sum of 20*l.*, to be applied in manner directed by the said statute. And as it did appear to me, by the confession of the said offender, that he had not goods or chattels whereon to levy the aforesaid penalty, I did commit the said William Jones to the house of correction at Bury St. Edmund's, in the said county, there to remain for the space of six calendar months, unless the said penalty should be sooner paid. Given under my hand and seal, being a Justice of the Peace for the county of Suffolk, and a Commissioner acting in the execution of the acts relating to assessed taxes for the district of Babergh, in the said county.

The following was the form of the commitment:—

"To all and every the constables and other officers of the peace for the said county, whom these may concern, and to the keeper of the house of correction at Bury St. Edmund's, in the said county. These are, in Her Majesty's name, to command you, and every of you, the said officers, forthwith safely to convey and deliver into the custody of the said keeper the body of William Jones, of the parish of Stoke, labourer, being charged before me, John Gurdon, Esq., one of Her Majesty's Justices of the Peace, in and for the said county, by the oath of Mr. Thomas Mortimer, gamekeeper to Sir Joshua Rowley, Bart., in that the said William Jones did, on the 2nd of October, in the morning, 1838, shoot a hare on the property of Sir Joshua Rowley, without having such certificate as is required by law for that purpose, whereby the said William Jones has forfeited the sum of 20*l.*: he, the said William Jones, not being a householder, having no goods or chattels to distress or sell, he being duly convicted of the said offence; and you, the said keeper, are hereby required to receive the said William Jones into your said house of correction, and him safely there to keep, for the space of six calendar months, unless the sum of 20*l.* be sooner paid. And for your so doing this shall be to you and every of you a sufficient warrant. Given under my hand and seal, this 25th day of October 1839.

(Signed) "John Gurdon."

The defendant appealed against the conviction at the Quarter Sessions, and it was quashed, several objections having been taken at the trial of the appeal.

At the trial, before Patteson, J., at the Suffolk Summer Assizes, 1840, the plaintiff was nonsuited, with leave to move to enter a verdict for himself, with 10*l.* damages, the sum found by the jury.

Kelly having obtained a rule accordingly, Biggs Andrews and Byles shewed cause.—The conviction having been quashed, the action is misconceived, and trespass cannot be brought—Gray v. Cookson (1), cited in Brittain v. Kinnaird (2). By 43 Geo. 3. c. 142, in all actions against Justices for any conviction, in case such conviction has been quashed, the plaintiff can only recover 2*d.* damages, unless malice and want of reasonable and probable cause be alleged.

[COLERIDGE, J.—The objection taken when the rule nisi was obtained, was, that the act did not apply where there was want of jurisdiction; that it only applies to convictions "under or by virtue of any act of parliament."]

If these words could mean only where the Justice has acted in pursuance of a statute, then he would need no protection. This case is not governed by Baylis v. Strickland (3).

[COLERIDGE, J.—It cannot be doubted, that, before the statute, a subsisting conviction

(1) 16 East, 13.

(3) 1 Man. & Gr. 591; s. c. 10 Law J. Rep. (N.S.) M.C. 61.

tion, unquashed, would not have protected a Magistrate acting without jurisdiction; and can it be contended that he should be in a better case for the quashing of his conviction?]

That must follow, at all events; for an informal conviction, if unquashed, would not protect him; and, if quashed, it certainly would. The words "done in pursuance of an act," are to be construed literally; for when the Justice has not exceeded his authority, the enactment is useless. See the cases on 24 Geo. 2. c. 44, collected in 1 Chitty's Statutes, 645—Newman v. Bendyshe (4). In any view of this act, where the conviction has been quashed, the Magistrate is in a better position than where it is subsisting.

[PATTERSON, J.—Before the act, if a conviction, good on the face of it, was quashed on the merits, the Magistrate was liable to an action. Therefore the primary object of the act was, that although the conviction might be quashed on such ground, the action should not lie: but the words undoubtedly go further.]

It is not, however, clear that the defendant has acted without jurisdiction. Mr. Dawson clearly had authority to entertain the information; and he issued a warrant to bring the offender, in the usual form, "before him or any other Justice of the Peace." The warrant was equivalent to a summons: for, suppose neither had been issued, the appearance of the party would cure the defect; and it cannot make any difference that the appearance was compulsory. By 3 Geo. 4. c. 23. s. 2, in all cases where two or more Justices are authorized to hear any complaint, one Justice is competent to receive the original information, and to issue the summons or warrant; and the adjudication being made by such two Justices, all subsequent proceedings may be enforced by either of them.

Kelly and O'Malley, contra.—The defendant had no jurisdiction, and therefore the quashing of his conviction does not protect him. "Under and by virtue of an act of parliament," means, where the Magistrate had jurisdiction; and is not at all of the same signification with the words "in execution of his office," in 24 Geo. 2. c. 44. The object of the stat. 43 Geo. 3. c. 141. was to protect Magistrates where a conviction might have been quashed on the ground of error in the facts, unless malice and want of reasonable cause were averred and shewn—Paley on Convictions, 318. The case of Baylis v. Strickland seems to have been argued simply on the question, whether the Magistrate had jurisdiction or not: here, there can be no doubt that the defendant had none. The statute directs a summons, and none has been given, but an old warrant of one Magistrate put into operation a year afterwards by another.

Cur. adv. vult.

LORD DENMAN, C.J. now delivered judgment.—This was an action of trespass for false imprisonment, in which there was a nonsuit, with liberty to move to enter a verdict for the plaintiff for ten pounds damages, found by the jury. The plaintiff had been convicted before the defendant, who was a Justice of the Peace for Suffolk, and a Commissioner of Taxes. The conviction had been quashed on appeal at the Sessions. The defendant contended, that, under the stat. 43 Geo. 3. c. 141, an action of trespass would not lie, but an action on the case only; and on that ground the nonsuit proceeded. The plaintiff contends, that the statute does not apply where there is a want of jurisdiction, as was laid down in Massey v. Johnson (5); and this case turns entirely on the question, whether the defendant had jurisdiction or not. The conviction was for killing a hare, not having a game certificate, on the 2nd of October, 1836: it proceeded on the stat. 52 Geo. 3. c. 93. sched. r. 1, 12, and 13, and was dated on the 25th of October 1839. The 13th rule in that schedule provides, in substance, that it shall be lawful for any one Justice of the Peace, such Justice also being a Commissioner of Taxes, on information or complaint to him made within three calendar months after the offence shall be committed, to proceed to hear in a summary way. It was contended by the plaintiff, that, under the rule, the conviction must be within three calendar months of the offence, whereas, in the present case, it was not until more than a year afterwards. It was answered, that the rule only requires the information or complaint to be within three calendar months; and in order to shew that the proceedings were correct, the defendant put in the original information, dated the 2nd of October 1838, the very day when the offence was committed, on a warrant of apprehension, not a summons, dated the same day. The information, however, was made, not to the defendant, but to a Mr. Dawson, who was a Justice of the Peace, and a Commissioner, and the warrant was signed by Mr. Dawson only. The plaintiff had absconded on the 2nd of October 1838, and did not return until after three calendar months—namely, in March 1839. He remained at home until the 25th of October 1839, when he was brought before the defendant, having been apprehended on Mr. Dawson's warrant. Passing over the illegality of issuing a warrant when the rule requires a summons, and enables the Justices to proceed in default of appearance, and assuming that the limitation of three calendar months applies to the information or complaint only, the question here arises, whether the defendant had jurisdiction to proceed upon the information made to Mr. Dawson. It may be conceded, that, in general, when no provision is made to the contrary, the original information or complaint may be made to one Justice, and another may hear and determine the matter. The stat. 3 Geo. 4. c. 23. s. 2, in the latter part of that section, recognizes such a course of proceeding very distinctly. This case, however, depends, not on the general rule, or upon that statute, but upon the words of rule 13, in 52 Geo. 3, which gives the jurisdiction. The words are, "that it shall be lawful for any one Justice, being also a Commissioner, to summon the person accused to appear before him:" not adding "or any other Justice," or "Commissioner," or any other equivalent words; and on appearance or default to proceed, &c. We are of opinion that this rule does not authorize any Justice to hear the matter, except that one to whom the information or complaint is made; and that the stat. 3 Geo. 4. c. 23. s. 2. does not make any difference, inasmuch as that statute contains no enactment that one Justice may summon and another hear, but only recognizes such a course of proceeding incidentally, the enactment being only that, when the law requires two or more to hear, one only may take the information. This being the construction which we feel ourselves bound to put on rule 13, it follows that the defendant had no jurisdiction in the particular case, and that the stat. 43 Geo. 3. c. 141. does not apply. The rule must, therefore, be made absolute, to enter a verdict for the plaintiff for 10*l*.

(4) 9 Ad. & El. 11; s. c. 8 Law J. Rep. (N.S.) M.C. 58.

(5) 12 East, 67.

Settlement by Estate—Devise in trust to sell, and divide the Monies between Children.

Testator devised his real estates to trustees, to sell and stand possessed of the monies in trust to divide between his nine children; the same to be to the sole and separate use of such daughters as should be married before his decease. The pauper married one of the daughters before the death of the testator. After the testator's death, the pauper and his wife resided in a house, part of the property, for more than forty days, paying rent to the trustees; after which the property was sold, and the money divided:—Held, that the pauper gained no settlement (1).

This was an appeal against the removal of John Inge, from the parish of St. Margaret, Leicester. The Sessions quashed the order, subject to the opinion of this Court on the following

CASE.

John Norton, of Leicester, being seised of fourteen freehold houses, situate in the parish of St. Margaret, in the borough of Leicester, by his will, bearing date on or about the 24th of October, A.D. 1832, and duly executed and attested to pass real estates, after directing the payment of his debts and funeral and testamentary expenses, and certain pecuniary legacies, which he thereafter bequeathed, out of his personal estate, gave, subject thereto, all his personal estate, and also gave, devised, and bequeathed all his lands, messuages, tenements, hereditaments, and real estate whatsoever and wheresoever, unto Richard Rawson and Thomas Cooper, their heirs, executors, administrators, and assigns for ever, upon trust that the said trustees, or the survivor of them, did and should, as soon as conveniently might be after his decease, sell and dispose thereof, either by public auction or by private contract, for the best price that could be obtained for the same, and did and should stand possessed of the monies arising from such sale, after payment of the costs and expenses attendant thereon, upon trust to pay and divide the same equally between and amongst the testator's nine children, being five daughters and four sons, respectively enumerated in the said will. And as to the shares of such of the testator's said daughters as should be married at the time of his decease, the testator gave and bequeathed the same to and for their own sole, separate, and absolute use and benefit and advantage; and he directed that their respective receipts alone should be sufficient discharges for the same. The trustees were authorized to reimburse themselves, out of the trust monies, the expenses of executing the trusts of the said will; and their conveyances of the devised premises to the purchasers, and their receipts for the purchase-money, were declared to be effectual and sufficient.

The said John Norton died on or about the 23rd of November 1832.

The real estate consisted of the freehold houses above mentioned. John Inge, the pauper, was married to Ann Norton, one of the testator's nine children, mentioned in his said will, in the year 1823. Some time prior and up to the testator's death, the pauper, with his wife and family, occupied one of the said houses, in the said parish of St. Margaret, as his tenant, at the rent, first of 2s., and afterwards at 1s. 10d. per week. After the testator's death, the pauper continued to occupy the same house, and paid the same weekly rent of 1s. 10d., as tenant to the said trustees, to a collector employed by them to collect the rents for all the said fourteen houses. The trustees every month divided the whole sum so collected equally amongst the said nine children of the testator, and the share received by the pauper, on such division, was generally 8s. or 10s. per week. The pauper resided more than forty days after the death of the testator in the said house, so occupied by him as tenant as aforesaid, in the parish of St. Margaret aforesaid. The pauper continued to reside, and the trustees to receive and divide the rents in the manner above mentioned, for nearly two years after the death of the said testator. The testator's real estates were sold by the trustees in the year 1834, and the proceeds of the sale, after payment of the expenses attendant thereon, were equally divided amongst the testator's said nine children. The pauper received his wife's share, amounting to 54l. 19s.

The question for the opinion of the Court was, whether, under these circumstances, John Inge obtained a settlement in St. Margaret's, Leicester.

White and N. Goldsmid, in support of the order of Sessions.—This was a settlement, according to The King v. Offchurch (2), The King v. Wivelingham (3). The devise operated to give the nine children equitable interests as tenants in common in fee; and they might at any time have called on the trustees to convey to them as such.

[COLERIDGE, J.—Then how could the nine have had sole and separate estates?]

A conveyance would have been ordered in Chancery—Lewin on Trusts, p. 496, Pearson v. Lane (4). The King v. Aslackby (5) is precisely in point. Land was devised to trustees for sale, and payment of the money to the wife for her own use and benefit; and it was held, that she gained a settlement by residence in the parish, the occupation by the trustees not being adverse to her. It will be contended, that the Court has taken a distinction between equitable estates and mere equitable rights—2 Nolan, 100. But here, as the nine children could have required a conveyance, they had estates.

[COLERIDGE, J.—Could that have been done without the consent of all?]

Perhaps not; but there is no doubt, if they did all require it, the conveyance would be ordered; and it cannot make any difference in principle, whether one exercises the option or nine. They cited also The King v. Berkswell (6), The King v. Woolpit (7), The King v. Llantilio Grosvenor (8).

Mellor and Kenneth Macauley, contra.—The difference between this case and The King v. Aslackby consists in the circumstance of there being nine legatees instead of one. No one, singly, could have compelled the trustees to convey, or had anything more than an equitable right; and no child could obtain a settlement until all had appeared and made their election—Fletcher v. Ashburner (9). Neither of the children could have selected one particular house, or portion of the property. Here, the legatee was also a married woman, which makes an exception to the doctrine of election—1 Roper on Legacies, 474, and the cases there cited.

[COLERIDGE, J.—The evidence seems to be against an election in fact.]

It shews that the pauper inhabited the house as tenant, not owner. The cases cited are all distinguishable on the same grounds—The King v. Widworthy (10). The King v. Berksuwell is in point. The King v. Horsley (11).

[PATTESON, J. referred to The King v. Natland (12).]

That case is also distinguishable on the facts; the pauper paid no rent.

[PATTESON, J.—The devise was not to take effect until the death of the widow, and after her death he did pay rent.]

From the manner in which the case is reported, it is not easy to see on what ground it was decided. Mr. Justice Gould, to whom it was referred, may have thought that there was some act of election or some agreement not revoked. The recognition of his decision by the Court, was only to the effect that the Court would not interfere where a Judge has certified.

[COLERIDGE, J. referred to the abstract of the case in Gambier on Settlements, Greenwood's edition, p. 191.]

They also cited The King v. Geddington (13).

LORD DENMAN, C.J.—The only authority, in support of this settlement, is The King v. Natland, and I think that case does not stand on very good ground. A Judge, under the old system of reference, was in the nature of an arbitrator; and the Court only decided that, being so, his award was not to be appealed from.

PATTESON, J.—To make The King v. Natland an authority, it would be necessary to shew, that the statement of facts there is correct, which may perhaps be doubted. And all the other cases, where settlements have been obtained under this kind of devise, have been where one person only was entitled; in The King v. Wivelingham, by agreement; in the other cases by the death of parties, and so forth. It appears here that the pauper never did reside on the property as his own or his wife's, but always as a tenant, paying rent.

COLERIDGE, J.—There appear to be two grounds for decision here. It appears that the pauper resided; but in what right? In point of fact, certainly not in respect of his supposed equitable estate, for he paid rent to those in whom the legal estate was vested. Secondly, it is tender ground for this Court to take, when it looks into equitable interests at all. But there is one broad line of distinction: an equitable estate may have been obtained where there is something to entitle the party at once to a decree in equity. But here it is uncertain what equity would do. In the next place, also, it was clearly the object of the testator here to exclude the husband altogether; and there is no evidence of the wife's making any election, or of the other parties. It is not necessary to rest this case on The King v. Geddington, of which the authority, as we know, has been much doubted.

WIGHTMAN, J.—In order to obtain a settlement, the pauper must either have had a legal estate, or an equitable which he could at any time convert into legal. Here, to use the words of Abbott, C.J., in The King v. Berksuwell, "The pauper had no such equitable interest as would have entitled him to say, 'I shall come and live in this place, and if you do not allow me to do so, a court of equity will enforce my title.'" Here there were nine tenants in common, and it seems necessary that all should concur; one could not convert without the will of the rest.

County Bridge, When Structure part of—Repairs—Indictment.

Certain parts of a structure will not be necessarily excluded from being considered as parts of a county bridge, repairable by the county, because water does not at all times flow under them: and, therefore, where it was found on a special case, that the whole structure contained forty-two arches; that under five arches at the eastern end, the river Trent flowed; that under one of eight at the western end, a brook always flowed; that the other twenty-nine arches were interspersed throughout the space between the five and eight arches; that in times of flood the water flowed under all the arches; that under the greatest number of arches between the eighth and the fifth, there was always stagnant water, but under the others, sometimes no water; and the case further found, that the whole of the structure from beginning to end, (containing the forty-two arches,) had from all time been called Swarkestone Bridge, and the county of Derby had from time immemorial repaired the whole structure, and the road and battlements from beginning to end: this Court held, that judgment should be entered for the Crown, where these facts were proved upon an indictment against the inhabitants of the county for not repairing some of the arches, between the five at the eastern, and the eight at the western end of this bridge.

Indictment. The first count stated, that there was a common and public bridge, called Swarkestone Bridge, in the parish of Stanton-by-Bridge, in the county of Derby, in the common Queen's highway, being a common highway for persons on foot, and with horses, coaches, carts, &c., at all times of the year. It then charged, that the bridge was ruinous, broken, dangerous, &c., for want of repair, and that the inhabitants of the county of Derby of right have been, and still of right are bound to repair and amend the said bridge, when and so often as it shall be necessary. The second count stated, that from time immemorial there was a common and ancient Queen's highway, leading, &c., and that a certain part of the said highway, in the parish of Stanton-by-Bridge, lying and adjoining the east end of the bridge, and within the distance of 300 feet thereof, and two certain other parts (describing them), both within the same distance of the above bridge, were ruinous, &c.; and that the inhabitants of the county of Derby ought to repair the same. The third and fourth counts were similar to the second, and charged the non-repair of certain other parts of the highway, in the same parish, and lying within the distance of 300 feet from Swarkestone Bridge. The fifth count stated, that from time whereof, &c., there was a common, ancient highway, leading, &c., and that a certain part, beginning at 300 feet westward from a certain river called the Trent, and so continuing westward for the length of 876 yards, &c., was out of repair; and that the inhabitants of the whole county of Derby have from time whereof, &c., hitherto been used and accustomed, and have of right repaired and amended the said public highway, when necessary, and still of right ought to repair and amend the same, &c.

Plea—Not guilty.

This indictment was tried at the Summer Assizes, for the county of Derby, in 1839, before Lord Abinger, C.B., when the jury found that the whole of the structure, more particularly described below in the case, was known and called by the name of Swarkestone Bridge, and that the county had immemorially repaired the road, battlements, and arches thereof. A verdict was taken for the Crown, subject to the opinion of this Court, upon the following

CASE.

The structure which forms the subject-matter of the several counts of the indictment, is about 1,275 yards in length, lies wholly in the county of Derby, and extends from the village of Swarkestone, on the east bank of the river Trent westernly, towards the village of Stanton-by-Bridge, both in the county of Derby; and the said structure is situate as described in the indictment, and is a common Queen's highway, as stated in the indictment, and is of great public utility. The whole structure contains forty-two arches in all ; under the first five of which, at the eastern end, the river Trent flows, and is there 115 yards wide, the last eight arches at the western end are continuous, separated only by piers, and under one of them there is a brook, the water of which always flows. The above five arches are continuous, and separated only from each other by piers. The other twenty-nine arches are interspersed throughout the space between the eight and five arches, sometimes four or five continuous, and sometimes a single or double arch, but there is in no place a distance of 300 feet between any two arches, or sets of arches. Between all the arches, including the eight and the five, there are either piers only, or a continuous line of solid stone-mason work, on both sides, of the same description ; the space between such mason work being filled up where there are no arches, and over the arches where there are any, with earth and stones, upon which the road runs, and where the arches adjoin, they are connected with buttresses ; and a stone battlement, about three feet high, extends from one end of the structure to the other. The structure is very ancient, and before altered, as hereinafter mentioned, the whole was of exactly the same style of architecture, (gothic of a peculiar description,) and apparently built at the same time, and from one design ; the arches pointed at the top. From the extremity of the five arches at the east, to the commencement of the eight arches at the west end, the structure is carried over low flat meadow land. In times of flood, the water flows under all the arches, and under the greatest number of arches between the eight and five arches at the ends, there is always stagnant water, but under the others there is sometimes no water. Before it was widened by the county hereinafter mentioned, it was only wide enough for carriages to pass each other in two places ; but it has been from time to time so widened by the county, that now there are only two places along the whole line, at which two carriages cannot pass each other.

The whole of the structure, that is, the part containing the twenty-nine arches, as well as the eight and five arches, from the beginning to the end, has from all time been called Swarkestone Bridge, and the county of Derby have from time immemorial repaired the whole structure, the road and battlements, from beginning to end, including the whole forty-two arches, as also the 300 feet at the eastern or Swarkestone extremity of the same, and have at different times, and at a great expense, rebuilt and widened twenty-two of the twenty-nine arches, between the eight and five arches. Also in the years 1795, 6, and 7, they rebuilt the five arches over the Trent. The arches the county have rebuilt are easily distinguished from the others, being circular instead of pointed at the top. Between the year 1683 (the first year for which any records of the Quarter Sessions are preserved) down to 1832, there are upwards of sixty orders relative to the repairs of this structure, in many of which it is called, "Swarkestone Bridge," being a county bridge. (The accompanying extracts to form and be referred to as part of the case by either party.) It appears from the same records, that from the year 1750, various parts of the said structure, other than the said five arches over the Trent, have been frequently presented under the name of 'Swarkestone Bridge' by the grand jury, as out of repair ; and in 1788, being presented, the Court ordered that a sum of 336*l.* 8*s.* 10*d.* should be expended by the county, in widening and repairing the bridge, and which sum was expended in widening and repairing that part of the bridge between the eight and five arches. And in 1791, a further sum of 232*l.* 18*s.* 9*d.* was ordered to be expended for the same purpose. At various sessions in 1795, 6, and 7, "Swarkestone Bridge" was presented as being out of repair, and necessary to be rebuilt, and various sums, amounting in all to 3,550*l.*, were ordered to be raised for that purpose. It was presented in 1808, and the Quarter Sessions then ordered, that the sum of 667*l.* 8*s.* 5*d.* should be raised by the county, and expended in taking down and rebuilding two arches ; these are the two round arches near the centre of the plan, and the eleventh and twelfth arches eastward from the eight arches which were taken down and rebuilt accordingly. In 1819 it was presented, and 155*l.* ordered to be expended in the repair of the flood arches, and road over them. In 1827, the surveyor of county bridges was ordered to examine "Swarkestone Bridge," and the road from thence over the arches to Stanton, and report the most eligible mode of repairing the same. In 1828, it was again presented, and an order made for the repair by the county, of abutments, piers, arches, and spandrils over the two flood arches near the Stanton end of the bridge, being the two arches next eastward of the eight arches. In 1829, Sir George Crewe submitted to the Sessions a plan for repairing and widening, &c. that part of the Stanton end of Swarkestone Bridge, ordered to be repaired at a former Sessions, with an estimate of the expense, amounting to 400*l.* 14*s.*; and in consideration of the additional convenience, &c., he and other inhabitants of that side of the county offered to contribute half the expense, which offer was accepted. In 1830, it was presented, and 110*l.* ordered to be paid to rebuild the bank parapet wall on the south side from the said new wall to the pier point at the Stanton end, to fill up the opening of the present road to the new wall, to make the work and road conformable with the adjoining parts of the bridge. In 1834, an order was made to apply to Sir George Crewe, for payment of 100*l.*, the remainder of the sum of 200*l.*, for which he made himself liable. There are divers other presentments by the grand jury, as well as orders to repair. In 1832, in consequence of the decision of the King's Bench in the case of The King v. the Inhabitants of Oxfordshire (1), the county resolved to repair so much only of Swarkestone Bridge as is actually over the river Trent, and 300 feet at each end of the same. This part, viz. the five arches over the river Trent, and 300 feet at each end of the same, is and was at the time of finding the indictment, in good repair; the remainder then was, and still is, much out of repair, as stated in the indictment.

The question for the opinion of the Court was, whether any part of the said structure, other than that part above stated to be in repair, was such a bridge or road that the county were liable to repair it.

This case was argued by Whitehurst, for the Crown, and Willmore, for the defendants, in Hilary term, 1841, and the Court took time to consider their judgment. As the judgment proceeds entirely upon the first count of the indictment, and in the judgment, the cases of The King v. the Justices of Oxfordshire (2), (which were much relied upon by the defendants,) are very fully considered, it has not been thought necessary to state the arguments in detail.

The following authorities were referred to on behalf of the Crown:—as to the county being estopped by the facts found in the case, The King v. St. Pancras (3). As to the general matter, stat. 22 Hen. 8. c. 5—2 Inst. 700. Kingsmore* (6). And as to the last count, and presumptions to support it if necessary, The Mayor of Kingston-upon-Hull v. Horner (7), Sparrow's case, cited in Stafford v. Llewellyn (8), Lord Falmouth v. George (9), The King v. Ecclesfield (10), 39 Eliz. c. 23, 24.

For the defendants, the following cases were cited:—The King v. the West Riding of Yorkshire (11), Master of Leonard's case (12), 14 Edw. 3. stat. 1. c. 4, The King v. the Inhabitants of Kent (13), The King v. Whitney (14), The King v. St. Giles, Cambridge (15), The King v. Machynlleth (16).

Cur. adv. vult.

LORD DENMAN, C.J.—This was an indictment for the non-repair of a county bridge, and the question was, whether it was a county bridge. The structure which forms the subject-matter of this indictment appears by the case to be 1,275 yards in length; at the eastern end are five arches, under which the river Trent runs; at the western end are eight arches, under one of which a brook continually flows; the rest of the space consists of a raised causeway. At different points there are twenty-nine arches;

NEW SERIES, XI.—MAG. CAS.

under most of these arches there are pools of stagnant water at all times, and under all of them the water of the Trent flows in times of flood. The county of Derby resist the repairing any part of this structure, except the five arches over the river Trent, and 300 feet from the end of those arches, on the authority of the case of The King v. the Inhabitants of Oxfordshire. The present case differs from that in two respects, first, that it is here found by the case, that the county of Derby have from time immemorial repaired the whole structure, the road and battlements, from beginning to end, including the whole forty-two arches, and also the parts at the eastern extremity, and have at different times and at great expense, rebuilt and widened twenty-two of the twenty-nine arches, between the eight and the five arches; and also, that from the year 1750, various parts of the said structure, other than the said five arches over the Trent, have been frequently presented under the name of Swarkestone Bridge to the grand jury, as out of repair, and such parts have been repaired accordingly; whereas, in the case of The King v. the Inhabitants of Oxfordshire, it was not shown that the disputed arches had been repaired by the county. Secondly, it appears by this case, that there is a constant flow of water under one of the eight contiguous arches at the western end of the structure, which would, therefore, be a county bridge, independent of their connexion with the arches over the Trent; and also, that most of the other twenty-nine arches are over water continually there, although stagnant; whereas in the Oxfordshire case, the disputed arches stood on dry ground except at times of flood. We do not think it necessary to consider the second difference, or to examine whether an arch, or a number of arches constructed across stagnant water, ought to be treated as constituting a bridge, or whether it is necessary that there should be flumen, vel cursus aquæ for that purpose, because we think the first difference is sufficient to take this case out of the authority of the Oxfordshire case, and to entitle the Crown to our judgment. That case was tried twice; upon the first occasion, the indictment treated each of the arches as a separate bridge: the Court held that to be wrong; but Bayley, J. in giving his judgment, used these words, "It is said, that these arches are part of the bridge;

there might be strong grounds for coming to that conclusion if it appeared that they were erected at the same time as the main bridge, or if the inhabitants of the county had from time to time repaired 800 feet of the road beyond these arches, which (if they were part of the original bridge) they would have been liable to do. That is a matter of fact, and ought to have been decided by a jury. We cannot say that they necessarily are part of the bridge, and upon a special case, we can only draw necessary conclusions." Upon the second occasion, the indictment treated the whole as one bridge, and the jury found a verdict for the Crown, which the Court set aside as being contrary to the evidence, and ordered a verdict to be entered for the defendants. None of the circumstances which Bayley, J. mentioned in his former judgment, as affording strong ground for coming to the conclusion that the arches were part of the bridge, were proved on that second occasion. Here, on the contrary, it appears that the whole structure has from time immemorial been treated as one bridge, and the whole of it, from the beginning to the end, has been immemorially repaired by the county; indeed, twenty-two out of the twenty-nine arches in dispute have been actually rebuilt by the county. The facts, therefore, of this case are conclusive, as against the defendants, to show that the whole structure is one bridge, unless there is some rule of law which, under all or any circumstances, prohibits every part of the structure from being treated as a bridge, under which water does not flow at all times. No such rule of law is to be found, unless it can be deduced from the decision in the Oxfordshire case; looking at all the circumstances of that case, we do not think that any such rule can properly be deduced from that decision, notwithstanding the language used in the latter part of the judgment, and the importance attached to the passage in the 2 Inst., as to the use of the words, super flumen seu cursum aquæ. In ancient indictments, indeed, the confining those words to a constant stream or course of water, flowing at all times, to the exclusion of flood water, whether rarely or frequently occurring, is not altogether consistent with the doctrine laid down in a case in the same volume of reports—The King v. Trafford (17). In that case; the ancient course and outlet of flood water had been obstructed by certain fenders or banks. The Court, in giving judgment, said, "Now it has been long established, that the ordinary course of water cannot be lawfully changed or obstructed for the benefit of one class of persons to the injury of another. Unless, therefore, a sound distinction can be made between the ordinary course of water flowing in a bounded channel at all usual seasons, and the extraordinary course which its superabundant quantity has been accustomed to take at particular seasons, the erection and continuance of those fenders can be justified. No case was cited, or has been found, that will support such a distinction." This view of the law was agreed to in error by the Court of Exchequer Chamber, reported in the 8 Bing. 204; although the judgment was reversed, from the insufficiency of the special verdict. Now, if it be unlawful to obstruct the accustomed course of flood water which flows only occasionally, it is difficult to see why a structure of arches made to carry a highway in such a manner as to permit flood waters to flow in their accustomed course, should not be treated as a bridge, although at ordinary times there may be no water under it; at any rate, where, as in the present case, such arches are contiguous to and, as it were, in continuation of the acknowledged county bridge, and have always been immemorially treated by the county as part of the bridge. A rule of law prevents our saying that they are so in point of law, as it is obvious that they are so in point of fact. We are of opinion, that the whole of this structure must be taken to be one county bridge, and that the verdict entered for the Crown must stand."

Indictment—Venice—Municipal Boundary Act.

Indictment for an assault, found at the Quarter Sessions for the borough of Stamford; the defendants were described as of the parish of St. B. in the county of Northampton, and within the borough of St. B. and the offence was alleged to have been committed "at the parish aforesaid, in the borough aforesaid."

The defendants traversed, and obtained a certiorari, on which a venire was awarded into Lincolnshire; and the defendants found guilty by a jury of that county:—Held, bad in arrest of judgment:—

Although the title of the corporation of Stamford, as given in the Municipal Corporation Act, is "in the county of Lincoln;" and although in schedule D of the Boundary Act, the borough of Stamford is enumerated among those for the same county:

And although it appeared in evidence on the trial, that the offence was committed within 500 yards of the boundary of the counties.

Held also, that this Court could not enter any suggestion to cure the defect.

This was an indictment for an assault, found at the Quarter Sessions for the borough of Stamford, in the following form:—

"The jurors for our Lady the Queen, upon their oath, present, that Francis Mitchell, late of the parish of St. Martin Stamford Baron, in the county of Northampton, and within the borough of Stamford, constable, and John Blades, late of the same parish, constable, on the 26th day of March, in the 4th year, &c., with force and arms, at the parish aforesaid, in the borough aforesaid, in and upon one William Collins Cock, &c., did make an assault."

The indictment was preferred at the April Quarter Sessions, 1841. The defendants pleaded, but traversed to the next sessions, and in the interim obtained a certiorari to remove the indictment into the Queen's Bench. A venire was awarded to the sheriff of Lincolnshire, and the indictment was tried at the Summer Assizes for that county. The defendants were police officers of the borough of Stamford. The assault was committed in the apprehension of a party charged with making a disturbance tending to a breach of the peace, and took place within that part of the parish of Stamford Baron which is in the borough of Stamford, and within 500 yards of the boundary between Lincolnshire and Northamptonshire.

At the trial, it was objected by the counsel for the defendants, before the jury were sworn, that the case could not be tried by a Lincolnshire jury. Parke, B. allowed it to go on, but gave the defendants leave to avail themselves of the objection in the court above, in such manner as they might think fit. The jury found both defendants guilty. In the following term, why judgment should not be arrested, on the ground of mis-trial, or a venire de novo awarded; or why a verdict should not be entered for the defendants. The borough of Stamford, before the Municipal Corporations Act, 5 & 6 Will. 4. c. 76, was wholly within the county of Lincoln. By that act, a portion of the parish of St. Martin's, Stamford Baron, (the whole of which is situated in Northamptonshire,) was added to the borough.

M. D. Hill and Miller now shewed cause.—The indictment is sufficient. The Court is judicially informed, that the borough of Stamford is in the county of Lincoln. It is so described in schedule A, section 1. of the Municipal Corporation Act, 5 & 6 Will. 4. c. 76. So in the Boundary Act, 2 & 3 Will. 4. c. 14, schedule O, division 21, the borough of Stamford appears under the heading, "County of Lincoln, parts of Kesteven and Holland." In point of fact, no doubt, a portion of Northamptonshire was placed within the limits of the borough by the latter act; and it may be admitted that the alleged offence was committed in that portion. But that does not affect the description of the borough, which is "in the county of Lincoln;" and, therefore, when the indictment lays the fact, "at the parish aforesaid, in the borough aforesaid," the Court will take cognizance that the borough aforesaid is in that county, and that a Lincolnshire jury was properly summoned to try it. It cannot be necessary to hold all these proceedings wrong, on account of the insertion of the unnecessary words, "at the parish aforesaid;" utile per inutile non vitiatur. At all events, a venire de novo cannot be awarded, for that would be an award that a Lincolnshire jury should come again. Section 133. of the Municipal Act, "that all actions and prosecutions to be commenced against any person for anything done in pursuance of this act, shall be laid and tried in the county where the fact was committed," will not help the defendants in this stage of the proceedings, for it does not appear on the record, that they were acting in pursuance of the act. By 7 Geo. 4. c. 64. s. 20, no judgment on any indictment shall be stayed or reversed for want of a perfect or proper venire, when the Court shall appear by the indictment to have had jurisdiction over the offence. Section 12. also applies; for it appears on the evidence, that the offence was committed within 500 yards of the county boundary. But even if there is any doubt, since it appears that the defendants, by obtaining a certiorari, have themselves caused the error, and consented to a trial in the county of Lincoln, the Court will enter a suggestion on the record.

Whitehurst and Waddington, contra.—It appears by the Judge's notes of the evidence, that this was an attack on a policeman; and therefore he must be entitled to the benefit of 5 & 6 Will. 4. c. 76. s. 133, by awarding a venire into the proper county, or in some other mode. But this is bad in arrest of judgment. The parish of Stamford Baron is described as "in the county of Northampton," (as in fact it is,) and the offence is laid to have been committed "in the parish aforesaid," and consequently in the county. It is true, that the words, "in the borough aforesaid," are also added, and it may be true, that the style of the borough of Stamford is "in the county of Lincoln;" but that cannot alter the effect of the material averment immediately preceding it.

[COLERIDGE, J.—I do not understand, upon your argument, how the defendants could obtain the benefit of being tried in the county where the borough is situate at all; yet that was clearly intended.]

Under these peculiar circumstances, there would, no doubt, be a difficulty.

[WIGHTMAN, J. referred to the interpretation clause, section 142, by which it is provided, that the word "county" shall be construed to mean county, riding, parts, liberty, or division. Might not a borough be a "liberty" or "division," within the meaning of this act, and so section 133. import that offences should be tried within the borough?]

The word "liberty" seems rather applicable to particular districts, such as the Ainsty Liberty, near York, and the liberty of the soke of Peterborough. Similar objections have not unfrequently prevailed in civil cases—Goodright v. Williams (1), Ambrose v. Rees (2), Greene v. Cole (3). 7 Geo. 4. c. 64. s. 20. does not aid the defect; it applies only when the Court appears by the indictment to have had jurisdiction; here, the contrary appears. Neither does section 12, for in order to that, it must have been laid that the offence was within 500 yards of the boundary. The trial is a mere nullity—The King v. Welsh (4).

LORD DENMAN, C.J.—The Boundary Act has no application here. Its title is, 'An act to settle and describe the divisions of counties, and the limits of cities and boroughs in England and Wales, in so far as respects the election of members to serve in parliament.' Its operation, therefore, is expressly restricted to the latter purpose; and if it classes the borough of Stamford as in Lincolnshire, that is no judicial information to us, that the whole of the borough, for all purposes, is within that county. The venue here is clearly in Northamptonshire, for the statement amounts, in substance, to a distinct averment, that the offence was committed there; its being within the borough does not prevent its being also in a parish which is in the county of Northampton. Therefore, the venue to the sheriff of Lincolnshire was wrong. Nor is the error cured by anything subsequent. As to a suggestion, I do not think it would be in our power to enter one; or that even consent would give us jurisdiction; although, perhaps, it might have given it to the Court at the time of the trial.

PATTESON, J.—The only difficulty I felt was in ascertaining that the indictment states the offence in Northamptonshire. If it does, a venue into Lincolnshire is wrong, and judgment must be arrested. 7 Geo. 4. c. 64. s. 12. does not apply, for it is not laid that the offence was committed within 500 yards of the boundary: nor section 20; for on the face of the indictment, the Court had not jurisdiction; and that applies only to cases of wrong venue; here, the venue is right, the venue wrong. The Municipal Corporation Act, in its schedules, only gives the old titles of the municipalities of the several boroughs; it gives no binding local description of the boroughs themselves; and the description in the Boundary Act is evidently mere matter of pleading and arrangement. We are not precluded by either from holding, that part of the borough may be in the county of Northampton; and we cannot reject the word "parish" in the description of the offence.

Jan. 28. } THE WEST RIDING.

Order of Removal—Supersedeas—Reasons of Decision of Justices, Review of.

Upon application for a mandamus to enter continuances and hear an appeal, this Court being of opinion that the Sessions had rightly disposed of the case upon the facts, refused to interfere, although the reasons on which the decision rested were not satisfactory.

Where, therefore, grounds stated that the examination was made on hearsay evidence; upon which the respondent parish obtained a supersedeas, and served it on the appellants, after the removal had taken place, but prior to any entry of appeal, and at the same time offered to pay all expenses incurred, but the appellants, notwithstanding, entered their appeal at the Sessions, which, though objected to by the respondents, was entertained by the Sessions, who, in the first place quashed the order, but having afterwards found that a rule of the Sessions, as to the entry of the appeal, had not been observed, they reversed their former decision, and struck out the appeal: this Court refused to compel them to enter continuances and hear the appeal, being of opinion, on the facts, that their ultimate decision was right, though the Court did not concur in the rule of the Sessions on which it rested.

An order, under certain circumstances, may be superseded, after the removal has taken place.

Semble—That a rule of Sessions, which requires that, upon entry of an appeal, the original order of removal must be filed by the appellants with the clerk of the peace, cannot be supported.

A rule had been obtained by Pashley for a mandamus to the Justices of the West Riding, to enter continuances and hear an appeal. The affidavits shewed, that, on the 8th of May 1841, an order of removal was made from Halifax to Longwood; that, twenty-one days having elapsed after the order was sent, without any notice of appeal, on the 1st of June the pauper was removed. Upon the 15th of June, the parish of Longwood gave notice of appeal, and also stated their grounds, some of which (namely, that the examination contained no legal evidence, &c.) appearing fatal to the order, the respondent parish, on the 21st of June, went before the Magistrates who made it, and applied for a supersedeas, and the Magistrates made an order of supersedeas upon the same day. Upon the 22nd, it was served at the appellant parish, by being left at the house of one of the churchwardens (as none of the officers were found at home). The party serving it afterwards proceeded to Huddersfield, where he was told some of the officers were, and having met the guardian of the poor for Longwood (but not the officers), he informed him what had been done, and that the parish of Halifax would pay all the costs of maintenance which had been incurred at Longwood, with which the guardian expressed himself satisfied. Upon the 26th of June a letter was received by the respondent parish from the attorney for the appellants, in which he alluded to the order of supersedeas having come to hand. It further appeared that the appellants; notwithstanding the supersedeas, attended at the next Sessions, at the beginning of July, and entered an appeal against this order. It was contended, under these circumstances, that, as the order had been superseded, and all costs paid, the Court of Quarter Sessions had no power to entertain the appeal. The Court, however, decided that they had jurisdiction, and quashed the order, of which entry was made by the clerk of the peace. Subsequently, upon the same day, it was discovered that a rule of the Sessions, as to entering appeals, had not been complied with by the appellants. The rule, which was made in 1835, was, that "on entry of an appeal, copies of the notice of appeal and of examinations shall be filed along with the order of removal." This rule was republished in 1836, and usually acted upon. The appellants had filed a copy of the order of removal; but the Justices held, under the above rule, that the original must be filed, and, as that had not been done, they reversed their former decision, and dismissed the appeal, and ordered that all entry of it should be struck out from the books of the clerk of the peace. It further appeared that the paper had been taken back by the parish of Halifax on the 10th of July, and upon the 31st a fresh order had been obtained, and served, against which the parish of Longwood had entered an appeal, which stood rescript at the time of this argument.

Baines shewed cause.—If the Justices have come to a right conclusion in this case, the Court will not review their reasons. The only ground on which the appellants could have had a right to enter their appeal, namely, to recover any costs they had been put to, did not exist in this case—The King v. the Justices of Norfolk (1). The Justices were at liberty to alter their decision at any time during the sessions. The course taken by the respondents was correct, and warranted by the judgments of Pattenon, J. in The Queen v. Ecclesall Bierlow (2), and The Queen v. Lyddard St. Laurence (3); nor is it at variance with the decision of this Court in The Queen v. the Justices of Middlesex (4); where a supersedeas was held to be too late after entry of the appeal. He also referred to The King v. Diddlebury (5); He was then stopped by the Court.

Pashley, contra.—The grounds upon which the Sessions disposed of the appeal in this case being before the Court, they will inquire whether those grounds are valid and sufficient—The King v. the Justices of the West Riding (6); The Queen v. the Justices of the West Riding (7). They cannot be supported, and the Court will controul an unreasonable rule of Sessions. The "original" order of removal, which the rule requires to be filed, is not in the custody of the appellants, but of the respondents who obtain it. The appellants had filed a copy or counterpart of the order, which, by section 79, of the Poor Law Act, is all the respondent parish are bound to furnish them with. The Sessions have no right to introduce a new condition of appeal, which is not in the Act of parliament—per Lord Denman, C.J., in The King v. the Justices of Staffordshire (8). The order of the Sessions, therefore, to strike out the appeal on this ground cannot be supported. Secondly, the Sessions were right in allowing the entry of the appeal, as this was no supersedeas at all, and was properly disregarded by the Court. After the removal of a pauper has taken place, the order is executed, and there can be no supersedeas—Pennock v. Furness bold (10). "It is a command to stay some proceeding"—Termes de la Ley, 'Superseas;' Bac. Abr. 'Justice of the Peace,' (E) 801, 6th edit. The execution might have been superseded, but here the proceeding was complete before interference.

[WIGHTMAN, J.—Pancras v. Rumbold was commented upon in The King v. the Justices of Norfolk, where there was a consent by the removing parish to quash their own order, as there is here.]

It is still submitted, that, after execution, there can be no superseas; as, therefore, the appeal was rightly entered, but the reasons for the disposal of it were wrong, the rule must be made absolute for the Justices to enter continuances and hear it. He also referred to the observation of Ratteson, J. in The Queen v. Rushworth.

Lord DENMAN, C.J.—It appears, upon the facts of this case, that an order of removal had been made upon an insufficient examination, which was pointed out as the ground of objection by the notice of appeal. Upon consideration of the notice, the respondent parish thought the order bad, and applied to the Magistrates who made it for its superseas, and they in turn superseded the order, supposing it could be done in law. All this was prior to the entry of the appeal, and some time before the Sessions, and all expenses that had been incurred by the appellant parish were paid or allowed them. The appellant parish, however, notwithstanding, went to the Sessions afterwards, and got the appeal entered, and made an application to the Court to quash the order. This was objected to and discussed, and the Court inclined to think that they had power to entertain the question, and in the first instance decided upon quashing the order. However, in the course of the day, it was discovered that a rule of the Sessions, respecting entry of appeals, had not been complied with by the appellants, and the Court then took a different view of the matter, and reversed the former decision, and ordered that the whole entry as to the appeal and judgment should be erased from the minute book of their proceedings. An application is now made to this Court, to order that continuances may be entered upon this appeal, in order to its being heard, and the order quashed for the insufficiency of the examination. It should be noticed, however, that since the decision at the Sessions and other order has been obtained, and an appeal against it entered, upon which the merits of the question may be tried. These the appellants seek to shut out, by compelling a decision on the former insufficient examination, a course of proceeding in which we should not be inclined to give them much assistance. The question, therefore, is, whether the Sessions have done that which we are bound to reverse. It is contended they have, because the second determination they came to rests upon bad and insufficient reasons. That, perhaps, may be so, but that the conclusion they have come to is, in effect, the same as if they had not allowed the appeal to be entertained, (which course we think would have been the proper one under the circumstances,) we are of opinion that we need not inquire whether they have proceeded to that conclusion on good reasons. It is said, however, upon the authority of Pancras v. Rumbold, that, after removal, the superseas was void, as the authority of the Justices was executed. We are of opinion, as indeed has been thought before, that the words of that decision are much too large. They have incidentally been considered in the subsequent cases of The King v. Ditchbury, and The King v. the Justices of Norfolk, where they have not been supported as the extent now contended for. In the latter case, Mr. Justice Bayley observes, that "Pancras v. Rumbold is only an authority to shew that the Justices, having been surprised into making an order, may, of their own authority, and without the consent of the removing parish, supersede it before execution, but not after." I think the latter words in this judgment are to be taken with some qualification, though it may be observed that the application for the superseas in this case was made by the removing parish, who of course, therefore, was a consenting party. If, for the purpose of securing costs to the appellants, it is necessary to keep the appeal alive, notwithstanding a superseas has been obtained, then there is something on which this discretion of the Court may operate, but if the order has been superseded, and all expenses paid, and no injury done to the appellant parish, and all parties are thus placed in their former position, as in this case, then I think that what has been done has been well done, and that the order of removal has been properly revoked. I wish to add, that I quite concur in the observations of my Brother Patteson, in the two cases that have been referred to. The Sessions, therefore, having done right, we do not very strictly examine whether they were warranted in their reasons.

PATTESON, J.—We are asked to direct this mandamus to issue, because the Court below has decided upon bad reasons, and, having done so, although their decision may be right, we are required to interfere in this way. But even supposing their reasons wrong, I do not subscribe to the conclusion contended for. The question here is, whether the supersedeas was sufficient, and whether, upon that ground, the Sessions ought not to have refused to go at all into the appeal. On the one side, Mr. Baines has alluded to what fell from me in the cases of Ecclesall Bierlow and Lydiard St. Lawrence, and Mr. Pashley to my observations on Saturday last (11). What I then said, I said advisedly, and purposely, that I might not be supposed to have prejudged this point, when it might be distinctly brought before the Court. It appears to me, that we should be acting unfairly and hardly by parishes which get orders of removal, if, when they are objected to by a notice of appeal, on good and sufficient grounds, we were to say that the parishes could not, under any circumstances, abandon them. The frequent necessity now for so doing has been introduced by the Poor Law Act, as, prior to that act, there was no communication between the contending parishes, in the particular and strict manner now required. Since that act, all the examinations, as well as the order, must be sent to the appellants; and as the object of the statute is, to prevent unnecessary appeals, it would be monstrous to suppose that, where the removing parish has properly, in every respect, abandoned an order which they have obtained, the other party may still insist on going to the Sessions in order to get that order quashed, and costs. I think, from the altered circumstances as regards the present law, we ought even, if it were necessary, to introduce a new practice. But the course followed by the respondents here is not new. I think, therefore, that they clearly might abandon their order in this case, as they did, when almost no expense had been incurred, even though the party had been removed; a step, it may be observed, which was entirely the consequence of the appellants' own fault, in not giving notice of appeal within the time prescribed by the act: but here even the costs resulting from that have been paid by the respondents. In such a case as this, where, upon notice and grounds of appeal being given, an examination has been found to be bad, and the order, therefore, abandoned, I think no Court of Quarter Sessions should entertain an appeal against the order.

COLERIDGE, J.—I am of the same opinion. In this case an order was made, and sent to the appellant parish, and being unobjected to for twenty-one days, a removal took place. Notice of appeal was subsequently given, and grounds of appeal, which were found by the respondents to be irresistible; upon which they do all they can to abandon their order, and they pay all the expenses that have been incurred. Then the other party, notwithstanding, go and get their appeal entered. Now if the appeal had been disposed of, and the question had rested entirely upon the rule of the Quarter Sessions that has been referred to, I should have doubted whether they had done rightly, as I agree that they cannot make rules which will have the effect of altering the law. It is not, however, necessary to enter at all into that, though the disposal of the appeal was grounded upon that rule. Previous to that, the Sessions had decided, that they had jurisdiction to entertain the appeal, and had quashed the order; on the same day, however, they reverse that decision, which there is no doubt they had the power to do; and having at last come to a right conclusion upon all the facts, I think we ought not to interfere. With regard to the point of abandonment of the order, I will only add, that I think the present state of the law completely warrants all the observations of my Brother Patteson, to which I accede entirely.

WIGHTMAN, J.—In The King v. the Justices of Norfolk, Mr. Justice Bayley says, that in some cases "the Justices may exercise a discretion, and enter the appeal or not, so as best to answer the purposes of justice;" but he also adds, if the parties are willing to pay the expenses incurred previous to the supersedeas, the Sessions may refuse to enter the appeal. Here all those expenses were offered.—Rule discharged.

1842. } CALDECOTT AND WYNN.

Costs—Certiorari—5 W. & M. c. 11. s. 3.

To entitle the prosecutor of an indictment, which has been removed by certiorari, to costs, under the provisions of 5 W. & M. c. 11. s. 3, he must be a party grieved or injured by the thing complained of in the indictment. Therefore, where the defendants were convicted upon an indictment for a libel, as tending to incite to a breach of the peace, upon the prosecution of a private individual, not named in the libel:—Held, that he was not a party grieved or injured, within the statute, and was not entitled to the costs of prosecuting the indictment.

The defendants, in this case, having been convicted of a libel, upon an indictment preferred by a Mr. Thornicroft, under the circumstances hereafter stated in the judgment, a side bar rule had been obtained for the costs of prosecuting the indictment.

Ludlow, Serj. obtained a rule to set aside the side bar rule for costs, against which

R. V. Richards shewed cause.

The following cases were cited: The King v. Ingleton (1), The King v. Williamson (2), The King v. the Inhabitants of Taunton St. Mary (3), The King v. Dewsbury (4), The King v. Inledon (5).

Cur. adv. vult.

WILLIAMS, J. (January 26) delivered judgment.—This was an indictment for a libel, published in the Staffordshire Examiner, of which the defendants were respectively proprietor and printer. The indictment was found at the Staffordshire Quarter Sessions, was removed by certiorari into the Court of Queen's Bench, and came on for trial at the Stafford Spring Assizes, 1841, when the defendants were found guilty. The libel was not a libel upon Mr. Thornicroft, the prosecutor, whose name was not mentioned in it, but it was a libel tending to a breach of the peace, and containing inflammatory language respecting a political dinner, which, shortly after the publication of it, was given to Lord Ingestrie, at Bilston, in the county of Stafford. The dinner was attended by Mr. Thornicroft, and, upon that occasion, a disturbance took place: the mob threw stones at the pavilion in which the banquet was held: several persons were injured, and, among others, Mr. Thornicroft. Mr. Thornicroft has obtained a side bar rule for the costs of prosecuting the indictment, and a rule has been obtained to set aside that rule for costs, on the ground that he is not a party grieved or injured within the meaning of the statute, and therefore not a party to whom costs can be awarded. Now there is no doubt that Mr. Thornicroft was injured in the abstract: it was proved that he had received several blows, and was knocked down; but the question is, is he a party grieved within the meaning of the act of parliament? And upon this, I think, that to entitle the prosecutor of an indictment which has been removed by certiorari to costs, under the provisions of the 5 W. & M. c. 11. s. 3, he must be a party injured by the thing complained of in the indictment. For example, in the case of an indictment for the obstruction of a road, which the person who preferred the indictment was in the habit of going, he was held to be a party grieved. By what? By the thing mentioned in the indictment; viz. the stopping up of the road. So in the case of an indictment for a nuisance, where the defendant carries on a noxious manufactory, producing smells injurious to health, a party inhabiting a house in the neighbourhood is a person grieved. By what? By the thing indicted. And again, in the case of an indictment for a riot, a party who is injured by the very thing which was the subject-matter of the indictment, has been held entitled to the costs of prosecuting such indictment. But, in the present case, Mr. Thornicroft, the prosecutor, has been injured by the thing indicted only incidentally, if at all. It was not the libel which injured him, but only its consequences, incidentally: if, indeed, that were so; because how can I say that there is not inflammable stuff at Bilston sufficient to have occasioned a riot, when a party dinner was given there, even though this libel had never been published? I can find no case at all in which costs have Poor-Rate—Rateability of Toll Tin.

Toll tin payable in the ore by custom to the Duke of Cornwall by the mining adventurers, is rateable to the relief of the poor in the hands of his lessee, although such lessee does not reside within the parish in which the mine is situated.

This was an action of trespass against the defendants for seizing the plaintiff's goods as a distress for a poor-rate. The Duke of Cornwall being entitled by custom to receive from the tin bounders of certain mines, a tenth part of tin in the ore, called toll tin, had demised to the plaintiff a tenth part of the same, arising from a mine in the parish of St. Austell. He had also demised to the plaintiff a mine in the same parish called Buckler's Mine, which the plaintiff had let to other parties, reserving to himself the sum of 1s. 4d. for every pound in value of ore raised by the adventurers. The plaintiff was rated upon an assessment of 1,516*l.*, 1,300*l.* being the value of the money payment in respect of Buckler's Mine, and 216*l.* the value of the tin ore; and having refused payment, his goods were distrained. The plaintiff was not an inhabitant of the parish of St. Austell, on behalf of which the present rate was made, nor had he any property in the parish except as has been above stated.

Judgment was entered up in the Queen's Bench without argument (1).

Sir W. W. Follett, S. G. (Bere and Swann with him,) for the plaintiff.—The subject of the present rate is, the toll tin payable by custom by the tin bounders to the Duke of Cornwall, and granted by him to one Smith, under whom the plaintiff claims. And the first question is, whether the plaintiff, who is not an inhabitant of the parish, is liable to be rated for the tin so received by him in kind. It is to be observed, that this ore is not payable by virtue of a bargain between the adventurers and the owners of the mines, but is payable by custom to the Duke of Cornwall. The plaintiff is not an inhabitant of the parish of St. Austell, nor is he an occupier of land; he is the lessee of tin tolls, and has granted no interest in the lands to the adventurers, but merely receives a certain portion of the ore raised by them. The early cases of Rouls v. Gells (2), and The Company for Smelting Lead v. Richardson (3) proceed on the ground, that profits received in the parish without risk are the subject of a rate, and that a landlord would have been rated for his rent, but that his lessee was rated also. But in those cases a distinction was not drawn between an inhabitant and a non-inhabitant; and these decisions, although founded on the risk incurred, have been since supported on a different ground, namely, that the receivers of these tolls were occupiers of land. But admitting, for the sake of argument, that the latter ground is the correct one, still it will not sustain the present rate; for, as in this case it is conceded, that the adventurers, who receive nine-tenths of the produce, are not occupiers, and not rateable, it would be a strange anomaly if the receiver of one-tenth were held to be an occupier of land, and therefore rateable. Again, it does not distinctly appear in Rouls v. Gells, whether the plaintiff was an inhabitant of the parish; and although Lord Mansfield there adverts to the absence of risk attending the payment of lot and cope, still his judgment may have proceeded on the ground of the plaintiff's being an inhabitant of the parish, for he certainly does not rest his decision on the ground of his being an occupier of land. That case, therefore, is not an authority in favour of the defendants, because here the plaintiff is not an inhabitant. Besides, that decision is not entitled to much weight, since it is there laid down, that under certain circumstances even a landlord is liable to be rated. It is true, that in The King v. St. Agnes (4), (4) 3 Term Rep. 480.

(1) See the case of The Queen v. Crease, 11 Ad. & El. 677; s. c. 9 Law J. Rep. (N.S.) M.C. 38.

Lord Kenyon is made to speak favourably of that case; but in that respect the report must be inaccurate, since, in The King v. Parrot (5), he reserves to himself the liberty of forming his own opinion upon it. The King v. Cardington (6) is not an authority against the plaintiff, for the Court expressed their opinion very shortly, and appear to have considered that tolls were rateable per se. But perhaps that decision may stand on the ground that the sluice, upon which the rate was made, was real property. Much inaccuracy prevails in the earlier decisions on the question of rates, until the cases of The King v. Nicholson (7) and Williams v. Jones (8), where it was distinctly laid down, that parties could be rated only as inhabitants or occupiers. The King v. the Baptist Mill Company (9) decides, that the lessees, under the lord of the manor, of lot and free share of calamine, are liable to be rated as occupiers of land in the parish where the manor lies, although not resident in the parish. That decision, however, was founded on a wrong principle. But admitting it to be an authority, still it does not decide this question; for the plaintiff, who receives tin ore, payable by the miners under a custom, cannot be considered an occupier of land. At all events, he is no more an occupier of land than the adventurers themselves, who receive the nine-tenths, and who are admitted not to be liable. In The King v. St. Austell (10), the party was held to be rateable for the ore reserved by him, on the ground of his being an occupier of the land, and of the reservation having operated as an exception out of the demise. In Rowls v. Gells, the party was held to be rateable for the ore that was "dressed and made marketable;" whereas in The King v. the Earl of Pomfret (11), the appellant was held not to be rateable for ore which was to be "smelted." It must be allowed, that the distinction between these two cases is a very refined one. In The King v. the Bishop of Rochester (12), the question, whether parties are occupiers of land is tested by the fact of whether they can bring an action of trespass for any injury done to the thing they are supposed to occupy. If that be the test here, the plaintiff is clearly not an occupier of land, for if his ore were taken away, he could only bring an action de bonis asportatis, and not for any injury to his real property.

[LORD ABINGER, C.B.—A landlord, reserving a corn rent, cannot be called an occupier of the land.]

Undoubtedly he cannot; nor would a reservation of three trees annually out of the land demised make a man an occupier of the land.

[ALDERSON, B.—A wood is not the subject of a rate, but the argument on the other side would make the owner rateable for it as an occupier of land.]

In this case the plaintiff is a total stranger to the land; he has not granted any lease to the adventurers who pay him toll; they hold under a demise from the owner of the mine. The plaintiff derives his interest from the customs of the stannaries; but if the plaintiff has any interest in the land as an occupier, it must be as the occupier of a mine, and in that character he is clearly not rateable. He also cited The King v. Fryer (13). The remaining question relates to the validity of the warrant and the form of proceeding against the goods of the plaintiff. This is a joint rate. The plaintiff is rated in 1,300*l.* for Buckler's Mine, which he has demised to adventurers, and for which he receives a money payment; and in 216*l.*, in respect of the toll that he receives in specie. Now, as the warrant is issued in respect of rates on both descriptions of property, for the former of which it is clear he is not rateable, not being the occupier, the warrant is bad. To assess a party, for what he does not occupy, is an excess of jurisdiction—Milward v. Caffin (14), The Governors of Bristol Poor v. Wait (15).

[Per Curiam.—There he had not, on the face of the rate, the property he was charged with: here the rate is good on the face of it, for the plaintiff has some toll. If he was rated for too much, he ought to have appealed against the rate. The other is the important point.]

Erle, (Montague Smith with him,) for the defendant. — Two positions are advanced on the part of the plaintiff: first, that he is in the enjoyment of a mere right to take toll tin, and is not an occupier; secondly, that if he is an occupier, he is in the occupation of a mine, and therefore is not rateable. First, the bound owner has a right to enter certain lands in search of tin, and to take away nine-tenths; and the owner of the soil has a right to the remaining tenth, not merely when the tin is severed, but whilst it remains in the land. For that tenth the owner is rateable. This has been decided from the time of Lord Mansfield down to the present period. Rowls v. Gells is the leading authority on the subject, and cannot be distinguished from the present case. That case was not decided on the ground of the plaintiff's being an inhabitant of the parish, for that fact nowhere appears in the report. The Earl of Bute v. Grindall (16) was determined on the authority of Rowls v. Gells. It was there held, that a party in possession of the immediate profits of land is, as regards those profits, an occupier of the land. The King v. the Baptist Mill Company, The King v. St. Agnes, The King v. St. Austell, The King v. the Bishop of Rochester, The King v. the Earl of Pomfret, and The King v. Tremayne (17), are in point. A distinction is taken in some of those cases, between the payment of a money rent or the manufactured article on the one hand, and the native produce of the land on the other. Secondly, although the plaintiff is the occupier of land, still he is not the occupier of a mine; he is not a miner, and has no right to enter the mine. The late constructions put upon the words of the 43 Eliz. c. 2. s. 1. have been erroneous. The words are, that the churchwardens are "to raise weekly or otherwise, by taxation of every inhabitant, parson, vicar, and other, and of every occupier of lands, houses, tithes impropriate, appropriations of tithes, coal mines or saleable underwoods in the said parish," in competent sums of money, a convenient stock for setting the poor to work. The word "inhabitant" is a word of wide signification, and ought not to be limited by the narrower words that follow. It is not put in contradistinction to the word "occupier," but was intended to comprehend every person of ability in the parish. The persons and property following the word "inhabitant," and mentioned as rateable, are put merely by way of examples. The clause abounds in tautology. Lord Coke, in his Commentary on the Statute of Bridges, 22 Hen. 8. c. 5, states the law thus: "Although a man be dwelling in an house in a foreign county, riding, city, or town corporate, yet if he hath lands or tenements in his own possession and manurance in the county, riding, city, or town corporate, where the decayed bridge is, he is an inhabitant both where his person dwelleth, and where he hath lands or tenements in his own possession within this statute." The same construction is put by Lord Hale on the word "inhabitant," in Leigh v. Chapman (18), on the construction of the 27 Eliz. c. 13. s. 5. Every holder of taxable property may be considered an inhabitant—Boston Town's case (19). He also cited The King v. the Manchester and Salford Waterworks Company (20), The Corporation of Wickham v. the Mayor (21), Doe v. Wood (22).

Sir W. W. Follett, in reply.—The plaintiff can be rated only as an inhabitant or an occupier. The special verdict finds that he is not an inhabitant, and he cannot be considered as an occupier, since he is merely grantee of the toll to the Duke of Cornwall, and in other respects a total stranger to the land. His interest bears no resemblance to that of the owner of the fee in Doe v. Wood. There can be no foundation for the refined distinction to be found in the cases of Rowls v. Gells and The King v. the Earl of Pomfret, between ore "dressed and made merchantable," and ore "smelted." The question of occupation cannot depend on so nice a distinction as this. But if the plaintiff be an occupier of land, he must be an occupier of mines, and, as such, cannot be rateable. This is clear from the judgment of Parke, B. in The King v. Tremayne. The cases of Rowls v. Gells and The King v.

Cur. adv. vult.

The judgment of the Court was now delivered by—

TINDAL, C. J.—The question raised by the special verdict in this case is, whether the plaintiff, who was the lessee under the Duke of Cornwall, and was entitled to the toll of tin in a mine belonging to and parcel of the duchy, was rateable to the poor in respect of that toll. The toll was a certain portion of tin ore raised within the tin bounds, and paid for by the workmen as tin in kind, without deduction, or charge, or risk to the receiver. If the plaintiff was rateable, it is not material, in this action of trespass, to consider whether he was actually rated as the occupier of the toll of tin, for a larger sum than he ought to have been rated at: the sole question in this action being, whether he was rateable in respect of the subject of the rate. The Court of Queen's Bench, in giving their judgment in favour of his liability, referring to the cases of Rowls v. Gells, The King v. St. Agnes, The King v. the Baptist Mill Company, and The King v. St. Austell, expressed their opinion, that they were bound by the authority of cases so often and so deliberately considered, so long as they remained unreversed by a court of error. We feel that we are equally bound by the same authorities; and important as it is in all branches of the law to abide by previous decisions, in none is it more important than it is in these cases. The rules which apply to the rateability of property, are everywhere daily acted upon in the management of parochial affairs, and materially affect the value of estates. It would be extremely inconvenient, and indeed mischievous, to overrule a class of cases, which have been much discussed and sanctioned by many eminent Judges, and which are now constantly acted upon, because we might not feel perfectly satisfied with the reasons assigned for their decision; and if we could permit ourselves to disregard those authorities on that account, we might feel disposed, on the same ground, to reject others who have put a construction on the statute of the 43 Eliz., which we might by no means be certain it ought to bear. If we were now for the first time called upon to explain the meaning of this statute, which would seem to have been framed with a view of rendering rateable occupiers of every description of real estate, it might be very questionable whether the occupier of mines of any description was exempt. But we think it wiser to abstain from the discussion of such questions, and to abide by the construction which the numerous decisions have given to the words of the statute, and which have been for a length of time constantly acted upon; and according to those decisions, unless we were to hold that the occupier of every mine, except coal mines, is exempt, we feel ourselves equally bound to hold, that he who receives a portion of the ore in an unmanufactured state, is liable to be rated. The judgment must, therefore, be affirmed.

Poor-Rate — Hampton Court Palace, Apartments in, Rateability of.

Hampton Court Palace was presented to King Henry VIII. in 1525, and has since constituted part of the royal demesnes of the Crown. It continued to be a place of the occasional residence of the sovereigns of England, till the 10th year of George II., since which it has ceased to be a place of the actual residence of the Crown. The palace contains a suite of rooms, called the "State Apartments," all of which contain a collection of pictures, the property of the Crown, to which the public are permitted to have access; also a room called "The Board of Green Cloth," and a gallery which the public are not permitted to enter, which is used as a depository for lumber. The state apartments are not assessed. A guard of honour is always on duty at the palace, and divine service is regularly performed by a chaplain, appointed and paid by the Crown. Sentinels are posted at the various entrances to the palace, which are opened and closed at the pleasure of the Crown. The housekeeper of the palace, (who is the only officer of the royal establishment resident in the palace,) formerly employed servants to shew the pictures, and received a fee for such view as a perquisite of office. There are several other apartments in the palace, which are in the occupation of private individuals. One of the parties, included in the rate appealed against, is a Mr. Grundy, the husband of the housekeeper of the palace, appointed and paid by the Crown, who, as such housekeeper, and for the proper performance of her duty, resides with her husband and children in the part of the palace set apart for her use, and in respect of which her husband is rated. With this exception, the several apartments are occupied by virtue of a written warrant from the Lord Chamberlain to the housekeeper, in the following form:—"These are to require you to deliver unto — the keys and possession of the following lodgings, in her Majesty's Palace at Hampton Court, viz. &c., which lodgings are to be inhabited by —, or some part of — family, a part of every year, or they will be considered vacant, and disposed of accordingly; and when the family are absent from Hampton Court, it is expected that one of their servants should be left in their lodgings, or that the keys thereof should be left with you, or the housekeeper for the time being." The occupiers of the apartments provide at their own expense any kind of household furniture and fixtures, requisite for the furnishing and fitting up of such apartments. Many apartments occupied by private individuals, communicate with the state apartments, and the doors of communication are kept locked during such occupation; but if, in the general care of the palace, the housekeeper finds it necessary to open these doors, she exercises the power of doing so, and of passing through the apartments which are so occupied:—Held, that the respective occupiers of these apartments were liable to be assessed to the poor-rates, in respect of their occupation, with the exception of Mr. Grundy, the husband of the housekeeper.

Upon an appeal against a rate or assessment for the relief of the poor, made the 14th of February 1839, upon the inhabitants of the district of the town of Hampton, in Middlesex, the Court of Quarter Sessions for the county of Middlesex dismissed the appeal, and confirmed the said rate or assessment, subject to the opinion of this Court upon the following—

CASE.

Hampton Court Palace, situate in the parish of Hampton, in the county of Middlesex, was built by Cardinal Wolsey, in the year 1514, and was presented by him to King Henry VIII., in the year 1525, since which period and up to the present time, it has constituted part of the royal demesnes appurtenant to the Crown of England. After the decease of that monarch, the palace continued to be a place of occasional residence of the sovereigns of England, until some time in the tenth year of the reign of King George II., who was the last sovereign who personally occupied it, from which time and up to the present date, (embracing a period of upwards of a century,) the palace has ceased to be a place of the actual personal residence of the Crown. The palace contains a suite of rooms, called "The State Apartments," all of which contain a collection of pictures, the property of the Crown, to which the public, under certain regulations, are permitted to have access: a room called by the name of "The Board of Green Cloth," and a gallery, which the public are not permitted to enter, and which are used as a depository for lumber. For the last sixty years, the state apartments have not been used for any other purpose, and are not included in the present assessment. A guard of honour is always on duty at the palace, and divine service is regularly performed therein by a chaplain appointed and paid by the Crown. The palace, as well as the gardens which surround it, are maintained and kept in order by the Crown, and the produce at the gardens (which gardens are not assessed,) is applied to Her Majesty's use. Sentinels are posted at the various entrances, and those entrances are opened and closed at the pleasure of the Crown. The housekeeper of the palace, (who is the only officer of the royal establishment resident in the palace,) formerly employed servants to shew the pictures, and received a fee or gratuity for such view, as a perquisite of office. Upon the decease of Lady Emily Montague, the late housekeeper, the state apartments were thrown open for the gratuitous admission and view of the public, under the superintendence of persons in the dress of police constables, but appointed and paid by the Crown.

There are several other apartments in the palace, which are in the occupation of private individuals; some consist of spacious drawing-rooms, dining-rooms, bed-rooms, servants' rooms, kitchens, and other domestic offices, suitable for the residence and accommodation of persons with considerable household establishments, and are now, and always have been, occupied by persons of rank and distinction, and others are occupied by persons of respectable station. One of the parties included in the rate appealed against, is a Mr. Grundy, the husband of the housekeeper of the palace, appointed and paid by the Crown, who, as such housekeeper, and for the proper performance of her duty, resides (with her husband and children,) in the part of the palace set apart for her use, and in respect of which her husband is rated. With this exception, and that of some other persons similarly situated, the several suites of apartments occupied by private individuals are not enjoyed by them as appurtenant or annexed to any office under the Crown, but are occupied by virtue of a written grant or warrant, made by the Lord Chamberlain of her Majesty's household, in the following form:—

(Copy)—“These are to require you to deliver, or cause to be delivered, unto —, the keys and possession of the following lodgings in her Majesty's Palace of Hampton Court, viz. (here follows a list of the apartments, together with a description of their situation in the Palace), which lodgings are to be inhabited by —, or some part of — family, a part of every year, or they will be considered vacant, and disposed of accordingly; and when the family are absent from Hampton Court, it is expected that one of their servants should be left in their lodgings, or that the keys thereof be left with you, or the housekeeper for the time being. And for so doing this shall be your warrant. Given under my hand and seal, this — day of — 18—, in the — year of her Majesty's reign.

“To —, Housekeeper of her Majesty's Palace of Hampton Court.”

In some cases the names of two or more individuals (members of the same family) have been included in one warrant.

The occupiers of these suites of apartments provide, at their own expense, any kind of household furniture and fixtures, requisite for the furnishing and fitting up of such apartments. Previously to occupiers taking possession of the apartments, such repairs as may be considered by the officers of the Crown as necessary to be done to such apartments, are done at the expense of the Crown; but in some instances, where the repairs desired for the accommodation of such occupiers have been of such a nature as to require a considerable outlay, such repairs have been effected at the joint expense of the Crown and occupiers, but all alterations or additional works, required by the occupiers, are done at their own expense, and in some instances such additional works and alterations have amounted to 1,000*l.* and upwards. Afterwards the occupiers themselves are bound, at their own expense, to do whatever internal works, alterations, and repairs, may be found necessary for keeping up and preserving the apartments in a proper and tenantable condition, or which they may consider essential to their greater convenience and enjoyment, but no works, alterations, or repairs are done, except under the directions of the officers of her Majesty's office of Woods, &c., and the government contracting tradesmen are employed, and paid by the occupiers of the apartments. A periodical survey is made of the apartments every second year by the officers of the Crown, and a report made of the repairs necessary for placing them respectively in tenantable repair; and notices (of which the following are copies) are given by the Crown to the occupiers, to have such repairs done, which are done by them accordingly.

(Copy)—“Office of Woods, &c., 20th of March 1841. In pursuance of the Queen's commands, signified to the Chief Commissioner of her Majesty's Woods, &c., an inspection of the several apartments at Hampton Court Palace, held by grace and favour of her Majesty, will take place in the ensuing summer, and in the summer of every succeeding second year, of which due notice will be given to such of the several occupiers, who, after each survey and inspection, will be required to execute whatever internal works and repairs may be found necessary for keeping up and preserving the apartments in a proper and tenantable condition.—(Signed)

“Duncannon, A. Milne, Chas. Gore.”

(Copy)—“Her Majesty’s office of Woods, &c., 22nd of September 1841. Referring to the notice of the 20th of March last, addressed to you by this board, I beg to inform you, that a survey has been made of the present state of the interior of the apartments you occupy, by the grace and favour of the Sovereign, in Hampton Court Palace, and the repairs (according to the statements on the other side) are reported as necessary, for placing your apartments in tenantable repair, I am, on behalf of the Commissioners of her Majesty’s Woods, &c., to request that you will, at your early convenience, give directions for executing the works enumerated, which must be done under the directions of the officers of this board. I am, your most obedient servant, (Signed) A. Milne.

“The apartments require a general repair, painting, and whitewashing, &c. (or, as the case may be, varying according to circumstances).”

The number of families now occupying such suites of apartments in the palace may be taken to amount to from sixty to seventy, and the number of servants in their employment may be computed, on an average, at between 150 and 200. Instances exist, in which the holders of warrants for such apartments derive considerable pecuniary emolument to themselves, by accommodating other persons with the use of the same, in consideration of sums of money paid in gross, and also by way of yearly rent; and instances have occurred where others have derived emolument by taking in inmates or lodgers, to board and lodge, or only to lodge with them in such apartments, and others by carrying on or exercising their several trades or professions therein; but none of these acts have been done with the sanction or privity of the Crown.¹ Many apartments, occupied by private individuals, communicate with the state apartments, and the doors of communication are kept locked during such occupation; but if in the general care of the palace, the housekeeper finds it necessary to open those doors, she exercises the power of doing so, and of passing through the apartments which are so occupied. Some of the apartments have exclusive outward entrances opening upon the public high-road and Barge Walk. In the sixth year of the reign of King William 3. and Queen Mary, the parishioners of Hampton, feeling themselves peculiarly aggrieved by the increased charges on the parish funds, arising from the relief of poor persons who followed the Court, and by workmen then engaged in the alterations making at the palace, petitioned the Crown for redress, when their Majesties were pleased to grant to them an annual pension of 50*l.*, payable out of the receipts of the Exchequer, by writ of Privy Seal, of which writ the following is a copy:

(Copy)—“October 1694, Anno Regis et Reginae Gulielmi et Mariae sexto.—Poore of the towne of Hampton Pension. A warrant into the Exchequer to pay out of monies (not appropriated to particular uses by act of parliament) to the churchwardens of the parish of Hampton for the time being, a pension of fiftie pounds yearly, during their Majestys pleasure for the support of the poore of that towne, at four quarterly payments, to commence from Michaelmas last, and to be distributed by the said churchwardens, as the vicar of the said parish and the under housekeeper of their Majesties Royal Palace of Hampton Court shall direct. Subscribed by Sir John Nicholas, by warrant under his Majesty’s Royal sign manual. Countersigned by the Lords Commissioners of the Treasury. Dated the 18th.”

This pension has from time to time varied in its amount, by reason of the land tax, and other taxes attaching on it. For some years immediately following the time of the grant, it was received by the under housekeeper of the palace, and distributed by him at his discretion. It has for many years last past been received by the churchwardens, and applied by them in aid of the funds created and established by and with the other charitable donations given generally by the donors to the use of the poor of the said parish of Hampton.

If the Court should be of opinion that the appellants were rateable in respect of their several occupations of the premises, then the said rate, and the order of Sessions confirming the same, were to stand confirmed; but if the Court should be of a contrary opinion, then the said rate, and the order of Sessions confirming the same, were to be quashed.

Erle, Kelly, and Adolphus, in support of the order of the Sessions.—The rate has been rightly imposed upon the appellants in this case, as the occupiers of rateable property for private purposes, and for their own benefit. The exemption of the Crown will not be extended to places that are not the residence of the Sovereign, which this has long ceased to be; and it will be no ground of exemption for these appellants, who occupy separately and exclusively, that a portion of the palace may still be in the occupation of the Crown. It may be admitted, that no rate can be imposed in respect of an occupation solely for public purposes, or where the profit is necessarily expended in public purposes, nor if the occupier is a mere servant; but the quantum of interest of the occupiers can make no difference; and although the parties are said to hold by the grace and favour of the Crown, yet the case shews that they are the exclusive occupiers of local visible property, and are therefore rateable, though they should be put in there from charity. The facts of the case in Lord Bute v. Grindall (1), furnished a much stronger claim for exemption from rate, but it was not allowed. It may, perhaps, be difficult to contend that Mr. Grundy should be rated in respect of his occupation, as that appears to be connected entirely with service, and probably the rate should be amended by striking his name out of it. They referred to the following authorities—The King v. Terrott (2), The King v. Hurd (3), Ayr v. Smallpeace (4), The King v. the Commissioners of Greenwich Hospital (5), The King v. Mathews (6), The King v.

Sculcoates* (15), The Queen v. the Inhabitants of Exminster (16), The King v. the Commissioners of the Navigation of Salter's Load Sluice (17), The Queen v. the Justices of Worcestershire (18).

Sir F. Pollock and Hodges, contra.—The facts found in this case, and from which it is sought to make the appellants rateable occupiers, shew, that the occupation is wholly that of the Crown, and that these parties have no more than a permissive use, which is not exclusive. This furnishes a distinction between the present and all the cases that have been relied upon. The occupation is that of guests of the Crown. What will constitute a royal palace, exempt from rates, and into which the sheriff cannot enter to execute process, appears from the case of Winter v. Miles (19). The ordinary warrant of a Justice would be insufficient to enforce the payment of this rate. The authority of the Board of Green Cloth would be necessary—The King v. Stobbs (20). There is nothing in the case to shew on what grounds these parties receive the royal grace and favour. It may be, that they fill certain offices in the other royal palaces, and have these residences assigned to them. When any change of occupation takes place, no notice is given to the occupant, but to the housekeeper, who has the general management and controul over the whole apartments. If the Crown were rateable, as a subject is, the Crown would be liable to be assessed for the occupation of all these apartments, upon the same principle that the master is rateable for rooms used by his servants in his coach-house or laundry, and not the actual occupiers—The King v. St. Mary the Less (21). The cases of Lord Bute v. Grindall, and The King v. the Chelsea Waterworks Company, might at first appear against these appellants; but in the first case the party was expressly found to be an occupier, which is not so here, and in the second a beneficial and exclusive occupation was shewn in the company.—They also cited 1 Nolan, 175, as shewing what was necessary to constitute a rateable occupier.

LORD DENMAN, C.J.—The Justices have found in this case, that there was an occupation of the apartments by the persons named in the rate; and indeed it is very much a question of fact, although they have referred the question to us. In considering the case, we may either suppose, that the Justices have formed an opinion, and referred to us, asking us whether there was any evidence to support it; or we may be considered as placed in their position, and called upon to judge of the effect of that evidence. Supposing them to have decided it, I am of opinion, that they have come to the right conclusion, namely, that these are separate tenements as regards the persons named who occupy them; and if the facts were put to us, and I were on the jury, if I may so say, I should come to the same conclusion. It is clear, that the place in respect of which this question arises was a royal palace, and that it has ceased to be so for the purposes of residence of the sovereign. The facts of some of the cases referred to were stronger than in this, especially those in Lord Bute v. Grindall, where there was a sort of joint occupation between the Crown and the ranger of Richmond Park; but as there was a benefit and advantage from it to the ranger, he was held rateable. In this case, the Crown for many years have not taken personal possession. There are pictures of the Crown there, and some state apartments; but neither by them, nor by the sentries, whom it is stated are on duty there, is any personal occupation by the Crown retained. Then, the apartments are in fact occupied by the parties who use them, unless the statement in the case as to the keys prevents such a conclusion; but looking at all the other circumstances, that appears to be no more than a particular condition in the terms on which the grant or permission is made, and will not exclude a beneficial occupation in those who use the apartments. That is the strongest fact in the case against the rateability of these parties; but, it appears to me, that it is properly disposed of in this way. One argument of the Attorney General requires an answer. It was asked, supposing the Crown could be rateable at all for its occupation, and was not by law exempt from all rate, would not the Crown be properly rateable in this case for the whole, and not the respective parties? My answer is in the negative, and that the Crown would not be rateable. The case of The King v. St. Mary the Less comes near to this. There, the owner of the house was held to be an occupier, and liable to the poor-rate; and, I think, he was so. But that case has no application on behalf of the appellants, unless it had been shewn that those who occupied the kitchen were not rateable. It does not appear how that was. They were probably very poor persons, (as it is stated they were put in from charity,) and therefore not worth the rating. Upon the whole, I am of opinion, that these parties are beneficial and exclusive occupiers, and as such are properly rateable.

PATTESON, J.—I am of the same opinion. I confess I felt no doubt in the case, until it was urged, that if the Crown could be rated at all, it would be properly rateable for the whole, and not the parties who have the use of these apartments. But I am not aware that the statute of Elizabeth has ever been held to mean, that the same party must be rated for the whole of a house. On the contrary, the cases seem to shew, that there may be a rating for a part only. In Ayr v. Smallpeace, the Comptroller of Chelsea College was held rateable for having apartments distinctly and separately to his use. So, from The King v. St. Mary the Less, it appears, that different persons may be rated for distinct parts of a house. A house, therefore, may be divided into several different holdings. There might be some difference in alleging the ownership of such a house in case of burglary; and while the argument was proceeding, I turned to the case of The King v. Williams (22), where some parties having broken the lodgings of Sir H. Hungate, at Whitehall, it was advised, that the indictment must be drawn for breaking the King's mansion house, called Whitehall, and stealing the goods of Sir H. Hungate; but it is clear, that though Sir H. Hungate occupied apartments in the palace, that the King also had his residence there at the time: and so in The King v. Peyton (23). But these cases do not establish that several persons may not be rated for distinct parts of a house. Then, have these appellants an exclusive occupation of what they occupy? The warrant shews that they have, and that they also possess the keys. When they go out, they are either to leave their servants in the occupation, or else to leave the keys of their apartments with the housekeeper. The respective apartments are assigned exclusively to the persons named in the warrant. There appeared to be some little difference as to those apartments immediately adjoining the state apartments, that there might be some doubt whether they might not be considered as still in the occupation of the Crown; but, I apprehend, on consideration of the statement relating to them, it is merely a condition annexed to the terms on which the parties hold, which does not touch the question of exclusive occupation for the purposes of rating. Then, if that is so, all the cases shew, that these parties are in a situation to be rated. (His Lordship referred to Lord Bute v. Grindall). There, to a certain extent, there was a joint occupation with the Crown, but still Lord Bute was held rateable. That is a very strong case; and a fortiori these parties are rateable.

WILLIAMS, J.—It seems clear, in this case, that there is a beneficial occupation; and even if the parties occupying could be taken to be public servants of the Crown, (for which, excepting the housekeeper, there is no pretence,) still, if there is a beneficial occupation ultra the service, that is the subject-matter of rating, as appears from The King v. Terrott. With regard to the quantity of interest the appellants may have, there appears no difficulty, as, even supposing the occupation were strictly permissive, that circumstance will not relieve the occupants from the rate. In The King v. the Chelsea Waterworks Company, Lord Denman, in giving the judgment of the Court, states, (speaking of an interest merely at will,) "But a tenant at will, is until the will be determined, an occupier of the land." So that even if these parties were in that situation, still a beneficial occupation appears in them, within the construction that has been put upon the act of parliament. The only doubt appeared to me to be, whether this could still be considered a palace of the Queen. If it is so, that would be an answer to the rate, by these appellants, and the rate would then be misconceived. But no such presumption arises from the facts. The only part of the case bearing upon that is, that the housekeeper, who is found to be the only servant, may go into some of the apartments. As to them, there is a diminished quantity of occupation, but there is a rateable occupation still. With regard to the case of the husband of the housekeeper, perhaps it was better, under the circumstances, to consent that his name should be struck out of the rate.

WIGHTMAN, J. having been consulted in the case, when at the bar, gave no opinion.

Rate to be amended, by striking out the name of the husband of the housekeeper, and as to the other parties, confirmed.

April 27. } OF NORTH BOVEY.

Appeal, Grounds of—Examination—Removal.

The examination of a pauper disclosed a settlement in the parish of N. B. and proceeded to state that "he afterwards agreed to serve E. S. of the parish of A. for a month, at 3s. a week; that when the month was up, he agreed to live on at the same wages by the month; that the bargain was to be at an end at any time by a month's warning from either party; that he continued under that agreement nearly two years, and left on giving a month's notice."

The ground of appeal was, that the pauper acquired a settlement in A, "by hiring and service with one E. S, of G. T, in the said parish, subsequently to that acquired by him in our parish."—Held, that the ground of appeal was insufficient, as the hiring and service was not stated to be for a year; and that the defect could not be mended by referring to the examination, there being no words shewing the hiring and service relied on, to be the same with that mentioned in such examination.

Upon an appeal against an order for the removal of James Langworthy, his wife and children, from the parish of North Molton to the parish of North Bovey, both in the county of Devon, at the Easter Quarter Sessions for that county, 1841, the Court confirmed the order, subject to the following

CASE.

The removal was made upon the examination of the pauper, which stated as follows:—That he was bound a parish apprentice to Richard Heyward, of North Bovey, in the said county; that when he had served him there about five years, he removed with his master into the parish of Chagford, and served him there about six years, then went back with his master to North Bovey, and served him there about three weeks; that there was then about six months to come of his apprenticeship, and his master gave him leave to serve whom he could; that he was not assigned to any other person, nor did he serve any other person with the particular consent of the said Richard Heyward; that he afterwards agreed to serve Edmund Stooke, of the parish of Ashton, in the said county, for a month, at 3s. a week; that when the month was up, he agreed to live on at the same wages by the month; that the bargain was to be at an end at any time by a month's warning from either party; that he continued under that agreement nearly two years, and left his place by giving a month's notice, and that he has not done any other act whereby to gain a settlement, and that he is now chargeable to the parish of North Molton.

The ground of appeal was stated as follows:—"That the said James Langworthy, the pauper, acquired a settlement in the parish of Ashton, in the said county of Devon, by hiring and service, with one Edmund Stooke, of George Leign, in the said parish, subsequently to that acquired by him in our parish."

On the trial of the appeal, the respondents objected that the ground of appeal was insufficiently stated: first, inasmuch as there was no sufficient statement of the time at which the pauper was hired, and served with Edmund Stooke; secondly, inasmuch as it was not stated that the hiring and service was for a year.

The counsel for the appellants, on the contrary, contended, that the ground of appeal taken in connexion with the written examination of the pauper, was sufficiently explicit to enable the respondents to meet the case on the merits, and that all was stated as to time which it was bond fide in the power of the appellants to ascertain; in support of which, they tendered evidence to shew that inquiries as to that point had been made by them, but without success. They also further contended, as to the statement of the hiring and service, that the Sessions were not bound by any fixed general rule of construction, but, regard being had as well to the written examination of the pauper, as to the grounds of appeal, were themselves the judges of the requisite particularity of the statement, according to the particular circumstances of each case; and that in this case the particularity was sufficient.

The Court did not deem it necessary to hear evidence on the first point, but on the whole objection, gave the following judgment in writing:—"The Court, finding that the appellants have set forth all that was within their knowledge as to time bond fide, do not admit the first objection to the notice; but, on the second objection, they think that it is necessary that the appellants should have set forth the hiring and service to have been of the nature and description of a yearly hiring; and that not having been done, the Court admit the second objection, and confirm the order, subject to the opinion of the Court of Queen's Bench, as to the sufficiency of the notice of appeal on both the above points."

If the Court of Queen's Bench should be of opinion, that the grounds of appeal were sufficiently stated, then the Sessions to be directed to enter continuances, and hear the appeal; if the Court should be of a contrary opinion, then the order of the Sessions is to be confirmed.

The case was argued this term, by—

Greenwood and Merivale, in support of the order of Sessions.—The ground of appeal is insufficiently stated, for both the reasons alleged. First, because no date is given. If it be contended that this deficiency is cured by the words, “subsequently to the settlement acquired in your parish,” and by construing the hiring and service with Edmund Stooke set up to be the same with that mentioned in the pauper’s examination, the answer is, that there are no words of reference pointing it out to be the same; and that upon this ground, if it be sufficiently stated, the appellant parish might just as well have set up some new hiring and service, of which the respondents had never before heard. Therefore, the formal rule applies, that the date of the service, as well as the name of the master, ought to be in general given—The King v. the Justices of Derbyshire (1), The Queen v. the Inhabitants of Bridgewater (2). It will be contended, on the authority of some expressions of Lord Denman and Littledale, J. in the latter case, that the Sessions may dispense with such particularity, if it appear that the appellants were really unable to ascertain the time. But if so, this ought, at all events, to be stated on the face of the grounds of appeal: information ought to be given to the respondents, of the appellants’ want of knowledge of the date; it cannot be rightly left to the Sessions to allow the defect to be cured by evidence given at the trial. Secondly, the ground of appeal does not state that the hiring or service was for a year, and consequently does not in terms set out a settlement. This it ought to do; for it has been repeatedly said by this Court, that great strictness is to be applied in construing examinations and grounds of appeal; and in examinations, a settlement, in all its essential particulars, must be set forth—The Queen v. the Inhabitants of Middleton in Teesdale (3), The Queen v. the Justices of the West Riding (4). In The Queen v. the Inhabitants of Middleton in Teesdale, a ground of appeal similarly stated to this, was admitted in the argument to be bad. (On this point they were stopped by the Court.)

Elliott and Beavan, contra.—It is true that examinations and grounds of appeal are to be construed with great strictness, but that is to be understood with reference to their several objects. The examinations must state a settlement in full, in order that it may appear that the Justices had sufficient grounds for removing. The object of grounds of appeal is simply to give notice, to the removing parish, of the points intended to be relied on; for instance, of the subsequent settlement intended to be set up in answer. It is therefore essential to define the settlement in respect of time and place; but it cannot be essential to describe it with all its formalities. A removing parish, being informed that a particular settlement “by hiring and service,” is to be set up against it, has ample notice, and would have no more if the words “for a year” were added. And it may as well be contended, that all the other essential circumstances must be stated: e. g. that the pauper was unemancipated, and so forth.

LORD DENMAN, C.J.—It is undoubtedly difficult to lay down any rules which parish officers may not elude, if they are desirous to mislead their antagonists; but the general principle, upon which we have proceeded in the decision of cases on the law of settlement since the recent act, is, that each party is bound to give the other all the information they possess. I do not see, in the first place, how the Magistrates in this case came to the conclusion that proper diligence had been used to find out the date of the hiring and service. But that question need not be considered. When an appellant parish gives a subsequent settlement as a ground of appeal, it ought to be stated in terms as a settlement. It may be, that the abridged statement given in this instance would be understood by the other side; but why should anything be left to inference? It should have been set out, that the hiring and service were for a year. The case is within the authority of The Queen v. the Inhabitants of Middleton in Teesdale.

PATTERSON, J.—The Sessions were right in considering the ground insufficiently stated, if it stood alone; and we must regard it as standing alone. It is not professed, on the face of it, that the hiring and service set up by it were the same with those mentioned in the examination. If, indeed, the words, "as in the examination stated," or any other words of reference, had been introduced, a different question might have been raised; because, although it may be true that the hiring and service, stated in the examination, are not such as would give a settlement, yet with a very little variation in the evidence they might become so, and a question might be raised on the facts before the Sessions. But this may be some other hiring and service, for aught that appears. Then it is defectively stated.

WILLIAMS, J. and WIGHTMAN, J. concurred.

Indictment — Misdemeanour — Statement of Offence.

A count charging, that two persons, in a certain open and public place, unlawfully did meet together, for the purpose and with the intent of committing and perpetrating with each other, openly, lewdly, and indecently, divers nasty, wicked, filthy, lewd, beastly, unnatural, and sodomitical practices, and then and there unlawfully, wickedly, openly, lewdly, and indecently, did commit and perpetrate with each other, in sight and view of divers of the liege subjects, &c., in the said public place there passing and being, divers such practices as aforesaid, is too general, and bad in point of law.

The indictment charged, that Michael Rowed, late of, &c., and John Clark, late of, &c., being persons of nasty, wicked, filthy, lewd, beastly, and unnatural dispositions, and wholly lost to all sense of decency and good manners, heretofore, to wit, on &c., at &c., in a certain open and public place there, called Kensington Gardens, frequented by divers liege subjects of our said Lady the Queen, unlawfully and wickedly did meet together, for the purpose and with the intent of committing and perpetrating with each other, openly, lewdly, and indecently in the said public place, divers nasty, wicked, filthy, lewd, beastly, unnatural, and sodomitical practices; and then and there unlawfully, wickedly, openly, lewdly, and indecently did commit and perpetrate with each other, in the sight and view of divers of the liege subjects of our Lady the Queen, in the said public place, there passing and being, divers such practices, as aforesaid; to the great scandal, &c.; in contempt, &c.; to the evil example, &c., and against the peace. This indictment was found at the Westminster October Sessions, 1841, and removed by certiorari by the defendant into the Court of Queen's Bench.

Upon the trial, before Lord Denman, C.J., at the Sittings after Hilary term, 1842, it was objected, at the close of the case for the prosecution, that no sufficient offence appeared upon the face of the indictment. The learned Judge declined to stop the case, but stated, that the defendant's counsel, upon an application to the Court, should be considered in the same situation in point of time, as regarded taking the objection, as if it had been taken and disposed of before verdict. The defendant was found guilty, and upon being brought up for judgment this day,—

Thesiger and Clarkson moved in arrest of judgment.—No indictable offence is sufficiently stated upon the face of this record, to give the requisite information to the defendant, of the matter which he is called upon to answer. There is no charge of a conspiracy; or that the parties met together openly and indecently to expose their persons; or to solicit one another to the commission of any offence. No reasonably certain interpretation can be put upon the terms used; nor could the defendant upon a subsequent indictment for an indecent exposure of his person, arising out of the same transaction, support a plea of autrefois acquit, or autrefois convict, by this indictment. In Bac. Abr. 'Indictment,' (G), it is stated, "that in indictments, as well as in appeals, the special manner of the whole fact ought to be set forth with such certainty, that it may judicially appear to the Court, that the indictors have not gone upon insufficient premises;" for which proposition is cited Cro. Eliz. 147, 2 Hawk. P.C. c. 25, s. 57. And in section 60, it is further stated, "that in an indictment, nothing material shall be taken, by intendment or implication." An indictment for a conspiracy to cheat and defraud a party of the fruits and advantages of a verdict obtained, is too general and bad—The King v. Richardson (1). It hath, indeed, been held sufficient to charge a man as a common barrator or a common scold—Bac. Abr. 'Indictment,' (G), but the reason is given in Hawk. P.C. book 2, c. 25, s. 59, namely, that these are words of art appropriated to this purpose. They also referred to The King v. Biers (2) and The King v. Gill (3).

The Attorney General (Sir F. Pollock), The Solicitor General (Sir W. W. Follett), and Bodkin, shewed cause, in the first instance.—This being a motion in arrest of judgment, if any expressions are used in the indictment, which charge a distinct and specific offence, the indictment will be good after verdict, as it will be presumed that that charge was proved; and other statements, if too general, may be rejected. It is enough to set out a crime, without stating the particular acts or means for its accomplishment. The question is, whether there is not a sufficiently specific statement to inform the defendant and the jury of the offence charged. In The King v. Horne (4), Lord Mansfield states, "It is the duty of the jury to construe plain words, and clear allusions to matters of universal notoriety, according to their obvious meaning, and as everybody else who reads must understand them." There is no uncertainty in the charge of sodomitical practices, or of meeting to perpetrate them; nor is it contended that the evidence did not support the description.

The indictment is taken from a form long in use, and a precedent for it is contained in Chitty's Criminal Law, but it is there put as the precedent of a commitment, which requires, however, the same certainty as an indictment. In 1 Stark. Crim. Plea., 'Indictment,' 144, it is stated, "There are, however, many instances in which, though the crime rests in tendency only, it may be described by general words, without specifying the means; this happens when the offence is a conclusion of fact arising from a variety of circumstances, incapable of any precise definition. These, therefore, are to be regarded as exceptions to the general rule, from the necessity of the case"—The Queen v. Daniell (5), The King v. Lady Lawby (6), The King v. Vaughan (7), The King v. Higgins (8).

[PATTESON, J.—In those cases the solicitations are to commit some specified offence.]

In The King v. Richardson, Lord Denman, C.J. observes, "The allegation does not convey any specific idea which the mind can lay hold of, to judge whether any unlawful act has been done or attempted." And again, in The King v. Biers, all the expressions used were uncertain, and conveyed no information. But the meeting to commit sodomitical practices, and a statement that they were committed, sufficiently specify an illegal offence. In 2 Chitty's Crim. Law, 48, are precedents of indictments for keeping a room for the exhibition of indecent prints, and for disturbing a congregation; but no acts or means are set out. This case differs from The Queen v. Peck (9).

Thesiger, in reply.—The indictment is not better after verdict than before, as the statute 7 Geo. 4. c. 64. ss. 20, 21, has no reference to objections of this nature. It may be, that this form of indictment is old, but no authority has been adduced to shew that it is sufficient. It is not contended that the means need be set out, but that there must be some certain charge. It is submitted, that an indictment against a person for keeping a room for the exhibition of indecent prints, would not of itself be sufficient. The word that has been referred to in this indictment as sufficiently specific, is not a technical term, as barrator or scold, or used in the acts of parliament, though the substantive is to be found—6 Geo. 4. c. 19.

LORD DENMAN, C.J.—I am of opinion, that this indictment is insufficient. If a long course of precedents of indictments in this form had been shewn, the case might be different, and we might be bound to hold that such a statement was a sufficient charge of an indictable offence, but we do not find such to have been the case.—[His Lordship read the indictment.] If any act at all were charged, perhaps, it might be supported; but this statement appears to me to be too general.

PATTESON, J.—I am of the same opinion. I cannot distinguish a general charge of the kind stated in this indictment, from one of treasonable or felonious or other practices. The language of the indictment contains a mere general allegation, without specifying any act which the parties committed. It appears to me to be in such general terms, as to be insufficient in a legal sense, to let the defendant know what offence he is charged with, although a person reading it might form some probable conjecture of its meaning. If any instances had been adduced of such a general indictment having been held good by the Court, that would be binding upon us; or if a course of precedents of indictments in this form had been shewn, that would certainly have formed the foundation of an argument as to its insufficiency, as it might be supposed, that an objection similar to the present had been taken, and not considered tenable. But we do not find that that has been the case.

WILLIAMS, J.—I am also of opinion, that the indictment is insufficient. Do the words used, necessarily imply an offence in terms so specific and distinct, as are consistent with the general law relating to the statements in indictments, and in conformity with which this can be supported? I think that they do not, and that the indictment, therefore, is insufficient.

Statute—Local Act—Church Rate.

By the local acts, 41 Geo. 3. c. 131. s. 37, and 43 Geo. 3. c. 139. ss. 25 and 26, the commissioners of pavements are authorized to levy and assess one or more rate or rates for the purpose of repairing, cleansing, lighting, and watching the streets and squares within certain districts, upon every person inhabiting and occupying any house, shop, warehouse, &c. in any of such streets and squares, such rate not exceeding, in any one year, 2s. 6d. in the pound on the yearly rental; and also one or more rate or rates for the purpose of inclosing and embellishing the centres and areas of the squares in such districts, upon the houses and buildings to be erected and built and to encompass the said squares, such rate not exceeding, in any one year, the sum of 1s. on such yearly rental. Neither of these acts contains any provision for the purpose of rating parish churches. By 57 Geo. 3. c. 29. s. 30, the commissioners are empowered to include in any rate an assessment for paving and repairing the streets within such districts, either separately or jointly with any other objects and purposes, and from time to time to rate and assess any cathedral, collegiate, or other church and churches, &c. within such district. The commissioners, under the above acts of parliament, in a rate made by them, "for the purposes of the said acts," rated and assessed the parish church of St. Pancras, as well as the houses and other buildings in the district upon which the rate was made:—Held, that as there were some purposes in the said acts for which the church was not rateable, the rate being a joint rate for various purposes, in respect of some of which purposes some of the property included in the rate was not rateable, the rate was altogether bad.

Semble, also, that the rate was bad, by reason of its being ante-dated; and also by reason of its being made for a period antecedent to the date.

A commitment in execution under the Vagrant Act, 5 Geo. 4. c. 83, which charged that the prisoner "did go about and endeavour to procure charitable contributions, under a false pretence of being able to abstain from food for the space of five years and six months:"—Held, bad, as not specifying any offence within the act;—and that the prisoner was entitled to his discharge under a writ of habeas corpus.

The prisoner, Bernard Cavanagh, was committed to Reading gaol under the following commitment:—

Given under my hand and seal this 18th of November 1841.—Sam. Chace, Mayor."

On a former day—

James moved for a habeas corpus to bring up the prisoner, in order that he might be discharged, on the grounds, first, that the prisoner had not committed any offence within the act of parliament; and secondly, that the offence was not properly stated in the commitment. As to the latter point, he cited The King v. Perrott (2), The King v. Gourlay, (3), Chitty's Burn, tit. 'Commitment.'

A rule nisi was accordingly granted, with a view of having the point discussed without bringing up the prisoner. And now—

The Solicitor General and Cowling shewed cause.—This is not a conviction, but a commitment founded upon what must be considered a valid conviction, till quashed on certiorari—Brass Crosby's case (4). The prisoner is in execution by the judgment of a Court having competent jurisdiction. It must be assumed that the jurisdiction has been properly exercised. If the conviction was irregular, it should have been quashed on appeal, under section 14. of the Vagrant Act; and even supposing the conviction to be informal, the Magistrate might draw it up correctly previously to making any return to a certiorari—The King v. Barker (5). This Court will not sit as a court of appeal, or of error, to review the regularity of proceedings before Magistrates—The King v. Suddis (6). They also referred to The Canadian Prisoners' case (7).

James, contra.—The commitment is the only document the Court has before it, and from that it would appear that the prisoner has been improperly committed. If that be clear, the Court will grant the writ. The right of appeal ought not to affect the question as to granting the writ, since before the appeal can be heard the prisoner would have suffered the full term of his imprisonment. The very case of The King v. Hobhouse (8), where the prisoner was remanded, goes to the full extent of shewing that the Court will grant the writ as matter of right, when it clearly appears that the objections to the commitment are well founded. The whole question then resolves itself into the sufficiency of the commitment—whether enough appears to shew that the offence is brought within the meaning of the act of parliament. The sums paid by the public cannot be considered as “charitable contributions,” any more than money paid to see an actor at a theatre, or any mountebank performer, can be so held. The act of parliament on which the commitment is founded does not apply to cases of persons who merely make false statements of what they have done or can do: besides, the statement is not shewn to be false. This is not a commitment for safe custody, but a commitment in execution; and the distinction is pointed out in The King v. Gourlay, and Dr. Greenvelt's case (9), The King v. Jukes (10).

WILLIAMS, J.—It seems to me, that I am not called on peremptorily to decide whether this is an offence within the act of parliament, but to give an opinion, with reference to the present motion, on the form of the commitment itself, for nothing else is now before the Court. Now, the arguments urged against granting the present application principally resolve themselves into this—non constat, but that there is a good conviction. Such an argument might have been used in many cases of defective commitments, and it is only necessary to refer to a decision on a previous Vagrant Act, which contained an enactment precisely similar to that in 5 Geo. 4. c. 83, and in which the objections to the form of the commitment very much resembled the present; and if the Court were at liberty to assume that such a commitment was founded on a valid conviction, it might in that case have been so assumed. I allude to the case of The King v. Brown (11), where the commitment not only stated that the prisoner had been convicted of being a rogue and vagabond by his own confession, but also the circumstances were set forth on which that description was founded, namely, that he had picklock keys, &c. in his possession. What then was the objection? Simply this, that it did not appear that these instruments of housebreaking were found upon him at the time of his apprehension. That case was discussed at the bar, and Lord Kenyon expressed himself very strikingly on the point—that he yielded with great reluctance to the objection. It is not necessary for me to say that there was no Judge on the bench whose mind was more alive to such points, and yet he, though anxious to sustain the conviction, felt bound to discharge the prisoner. What are the circumstances here? The commitment commences like the commitment in the case referred to; and if it were unnecessary to use any further particularity, it is clear that there is a distinct finding that the party is a rogue and vagabond; but as the reason for his being so adjudged are set forth, as was the case in The King v. Brown, we must further see if the reasons given are adequate to the purpose; and we find that it is stated as a reason for his being adjudged to be a rogue and a vagabond, “that he, the said B. C, did go about and endeavour to procure charitable contributions, under a false pretence of being able to abstain from food for a period of five years and six months.” And the Court is called upon to say if the circumstances as stated amount to a going about to procure charitable contributions. The opinion I have formed will give an opportunity for the case being heard again. I confess it seems to me in the greatest degree equivocal; and that it is very doubtful whether, upon any construction, that which the prisoner is charged with could be brought within the meaning of the act of parliament. There are many cases within the direct and obvious scope of the act of parliament, such as going about with false characters and fictitious tales of distress, which apply themselves directly to the charitable feelings of the public; but it is doubtful whether the sums raised by such a pretender as this are not

Order of Removal—Appeal—Case.

The Court of Quarter Sessions dismissed an appeal against an order of removal, where the grounds of appeal appeared not to have been served in sufficient time, subject to a case. The appellants tendered no case, but, at the same Sessions, obtained an order for entering and adjourning an appeal against the same order of removal. At the following Sessions, the Court, having these facts before it, dismissed the appeal:—Held, that the Court was right in doing so, on the ground that the appellants were not entitled to enter another appeal under the circumstances.

Semble, (per Patteson, J.,) that the statute 9 Geo. 1. c. 7. s. 8, (which enacts, "that if it shall appear to the Sessions that reasonable time of notice was not given by the appellants, the appeal shall be adjourned,") does not apply to the case where notice of appeal has, but the statement of grounds of appeal has not, been served in time.

This was an appeal against an order for the removal of Jane Peers, widow, and her four children, from the parish of Titchmarsh to that of Oundle. The Court of Quarter Sessions for the county of Northampton, at the Easter Quarter Sessions, dismissed the appeal, subject to a case, in which the following facts were stated.

An appeal against the order in question was entered for hearing at the Epiphany Sessions, 1841. It appeared, that the appellant parish had given their notice of appeal in due time, but not their grounds of appeal. The Court refused to hear or to respite the appeal, and confirmed the order, subject to a case to be stated on the point. Subsequently, at the same Sessions, another order was made, on the application of the appellants, entering and respiting a fresh appeal against the same order to the next General Quarter Sessions.

This appeal accordingly came on to be tried at the April Quarter Sessions. It did not appear, at this time, that any case had been tendered by the appellants to the respondents, in pursuance of the said first-mentioned order, at any time since the previous Sessions.

On the trial of this appeal, the only evidence given by the respondents was the entry, in the clerk of the peace's book, of the order of Sessions made at the Epiphany Sessions first before mentioned; the order of the previous Sessions secondly before mentioned was also read; and it appeared to the Court therefrom (as the fact was), that the order of Justices now appealed against was the same as that referred to in the first order of the previous Sessions. The Court considered that the said order of Justices had been absolutely confirmed by the judgment of the previous Sessions; and that such judgment was still in full force, effect, and virtue, and in nowise revoked or altered by the said second order of the said previous Sessions; and therefore refused to hear any evidence on the part of the said appellants, although required so to do, and dismissed the appeal, with costs.

The question stated for the opinion of the Court of Queen's Bench was, whether the Sessions were right in considering the order of Justices as absolutely confirmed, and in dismissing the appeal. If the Court of Queen's Bench should be of opinion that the said Court of Quarter Sessions was right, under the circumstances hereinbefore mentioned, then the said order dismissing the said appeal was to be confirmed; if otherwise, the said order, and the said order of the said two Justices, to be quashed.

The Attorney General (Sir F. Pollock), Miller, Mellor, and Wing, in support of the order of Sessions.—They cited St. Andrew's Holborn v. St. Clement Danes (1), The King v. the Justices of the West Riding (2).

Kelly, S. Flood, and Barlow, contra.—The first proceeding amounted to nothing. In The King v. the Justices of Pembroke-shire (3), there was an application to this Court for a mandamus to the Justices to state a case, they having confirmed an order subject to one; Lord Tenterden said, "The Justices have confirmed the order, subject to a case. That is no confirmation, unless a case be stated. All we can do under the circumstances is, to require them to enter continuances and hear the appeal." In this instance, they were wrong, therefore, in referring to their own first order at all; the second, that for entering and respiting the appeal, was the only one properly before them—The King v. the Justices of Norfolk (4), The King v. Hartfield (5). It is not suggested here, that the second order was obtained ex parte; and it must be assumed that the Sessions, in making it, were cognizant of the first. The King v. the Inhabitants of Kimbolton (6) is directly to the point, that the Court can review its own judgment in the course of the Sessions.

LORD DENMAN, C.J.—This is a case of some confusion; nor is it clear what the Sessions intended to ask of us. But I think we must presume their question to mean, what are the legal consequences which result from the proceedings on the whole of the case? It appears, that an appeal was dismissed for the cause that sufficient notice of the grounds of it had not been given, but that the dismissal was subject to a case. This case was agreed upon, and intended to be drawn up in form. Then another step is taken, which we cannot avoid seeing was taken ex parte; the appellants enter and respite a new appeal, going, probably, merely through the form of putting in a paper. It is impossible not to see that this was intended by them as a substitute for their old appeal, and done without consulting the other party. That they had no right to do. Then the Court of Quarter Sessions, at the next Sessions, finds an appeal entered against an order which had been already placed entirely in a different train for disposal. The Court puts its own construction on what has taken place, and considers the last Sessions as having already dismissed the appeal, subject to conditions of which the appellants had not chosen to avail themselves. The order stands, therefore, as originally confirmed.

(6) 6 Ad. & El. 603; s. c. 6 Law J. Rep. (n.s.) M.C. 90.

PATTESON, J.—The Sessions seem to ask us, whether they did right in dismissing the appeal. In the first instance, an appeal was entered, and brought on for hearing. It appeared, that notice of grounds had not been given in sufficient time. The statute 9 Geo. 1. c. 7. s. 8, on which the practice of entering and adjourning appeals, where no sufficient notice has been given, rests, appears not to apply to cases where notice has been given, but grounds of appeal have not been served. The appeal, therefore, was dismissed, subject to a case. That, it is contended, was no confirmation of the order until the case was heard. That may be; but the proceeding to enter a second time, pending the case, was not the less irregular. Then the next Sessions, finding that it was the same order which was thus twice appealed against, refused to recognize the second entry, and were quite justified in doing so.

WILLIAMS, J.—The discussion whether the Sessions were right in considering the first order as absolutely confirmed, is, at the utmost, merely nugatory. The real question is that which the Sessions have secondly submitted to us, namely, whether they were right in dismissing the second appeal; and I think they were so, for the reasons assigned.

THE WEST RIDING OF YORK-SHIRE (CHURCHWARDENS AND OVERSEERS OF DRIFHLINGTON,

Justice of Peace—Mandamus—Appeal.

An application for a rule nisi, calling on Justices to enter continuances, and hear an appeal against an order of removal, where they have dismissed such appeal at the trial, on a preliminary point, should be made in the term following the Sessions at which such judgment was given; and it will be too late if made afterwards, unless under special circumstances.

Where a ground of appeal is, that the pauper gained a settlement by renting a tenement, it is not sufficient to state that he occupied such tenement, even in the case of a dwelling-house; there must be a distinct averment that he resided forty days.

A rule had been obtained this term, calling on the Justices aforesaid, to enter continuances, and hear this appeal, which was against an order for the removal of Ann, the wife of John Moorhouse, and their two children, from Pudsey to Drighlington.

The appeal came on for trial at the Epiphany Sessions in this year. The appellants had given the following ground of appeal:—"That the said John Moorhouse, the husband of Ann Moorhouse, the pauper, in or about the years 1828, 1829, or 1830, or some or one of them, or some parts of some two of such years, did rent and occupy, for the space of twelve months and upwards, a house and land at and in the parish of Pudsey aforesaid, as tenant to one Mr. Charnock, of Woodhouse, gentleman, of the yearly rent and value of 10*l.* and upwards, and did pay upwards of 10*l.* rent for the same, and did thereby gain a settlement in your said township of Pudsey."

Counsel for the respondents objected, that no evidence could be gone into under this ground of appeal, inasmuch as it contained no express allegation of the residence of the pauper's husband in Pudsey. The Court of Quarter Sessions was of that opinion, and confirmed the order.

Sir G. Lewin and Drinkwater, in shewing cause, relied, in the first place, on a preliminary objection.—The rule for a mandamus ought to have been applied for earlier. The Sessions were held on the 6th of January, and therefore the whole of Hilary term was open to the appellants for that purpose.

R. Hall and Pashley, contra, relied on an affidavit, from which it appeared that the West Riding Sessions are ambulatory, and that, after leaving Wakefield, when this case was tried on the 6th of January, they were held at other places in the district. The attorney for the appellants thought it his duty, before he instructed counsel, to consult with the parish officers and inhabitants. Shortly after the sessions, he desired the assistant overseer to convene a meeting of the inhabitants, which took place, but was thinly attended, and the attorney was only authorized to consult counsel. This he accordingly did at the York Lent Assizes; and, on the 1st of April, another parish meeting took place, at which he was authorized to proceed. At the very earliest, the rule could only have been obtained at the end of Hilary term, when there would have been no time left for shewing cause, so that the respondents have lost nothing by the delay.

[LORD DENMAN, C.J.—There is no absolute rule on the subject; at the same time, it is clear that any such application ought to be in due time. I have had great doubts, whether this ought to be allowed, and therefore have paused to consider the question. But, upon the whole, we shall allow the discussion to proceed in this instance.]

Sir G. Lewin and Drinkwater then shewed cause.

R. Hall and Pashley.—The words, "did occupy a house," sufficiently imply residence. "The word 'occupation,' as applied to a house, undoubtedly implies personal residence"—Littledale, J., in The King v. the Inhabitants of Ditchheat (1)—especially when coupled with the allegation, that the pauper's husband "did thereby gain a settlement." But even if this legal implication be not held to apply in the present case, at all events it is certain, that, in popular language, to occupy a house, means to live in it. And it is submitted, that in construing instruments of this description, drawn up by unlearned men, and directed to unlearned men, the popular meaning is that which should be recognized by this Court. In Hill v. Graunge (2), the words, "appertaining to a messuage," were held to signify "usually occupied with the messuage, or lying to the messuage," on account of their collocation.

[PATTESON, J.—In other cases, the distinction between "appurtenant" and "occupied therewith," has been pointedly taken.]

That renders the case in Plowden stronger; for there the word had a meaning, not legally its own, given it, in order that it might "have such signification as was intended between the parties." So in Jeffrey's case (3), a person "manuring land" in a parish, was held to be an "inhabitant," for the purpose of the repairs of a church. So in regard to the Statute of Bridges (4). The certainty required in such documents as these cannot be "certainty to a certain intent in every particular"—Dovaston v. Payne (5); but, at most, certainty to a certain intent in general—The King v. the Inhabitants of Lyme Regis (6). The words, "occupying a tenement," are given as a sufficient description of the settlement in the Poor Law Amendment Act itself, 4 & 5 Will. 4. c. 76. s. 66. And it must be remembered, that here the ground of appeal states a settlement in the respondent-parish, concerning which that parish must have accessible information. It has been often said, that conveying information is the essential requisite. See particularly Ex parte Broseley (7).

[LORD DENMAN, C.J.—Not that it is the only requisite. We think it not very unreasonable, when a statute requires grounds of appeal to be stated, to require that the statement should express all the ingredients of a settlement.]

PATTESON, J.—The question simply is, whether the Sessions were right in taking the ground they did in rejecting the evidence tendered on this appeal. I quite concede, that when any one is said to occupy a house, the prima facie meaning of the phrase is, that he resides in it. Perhaps ninety-nine out of a hundred persons would so understand it. But it does not follow that such is its meaning, under the statutes relating to this head of settlement. It would not be so, even if the words were "actually occupy," according to the statute 1 Will. 4. c. 18, which was subsequent to the settlement acquired in this case. For a person might actually occupy a house, and yet not reside in it. He might rent two houses, one in one parish and one in another, residing in one and carrying on his business in the other by his servants. He would then actually occupy the latter, and yet not reside in it. Therefore some other words ought to have been inserted here, in order to convey, beyond the possibility of a doubt, the fact, that the pauper's husband resided. This may be a strict construction, but it is consistent with all our decisions; the object being to make parties take care, if possible, that they give sufficient information, by stating such facts as necessarily import a settlement.

WILLIAMS, J.—This Court has laid down rules on this subject for some time past, which savour much of strictness, the object being to force both respondents and appellants, in the examination and grounds of appeal, to give the opposite parties entire information. With this view we have held, that it is not enough to give the legal result of the facts, but to specify the constituent parts of a settlement. Therefore the question really is, whether or not the term "occupation" implies personal residence. I do not think it does so of necessity; therefore, in conformity with former decisions, we think that fact should have been expressly alleged.

WIGHTMAN, J.—The word "occupy" is ambiguous. Its meaning is clear as to land; not quite equally so as to a dwelling-house. But a person may reside elsewhere, and yet occupy a dwelling-house by means of his servants; and the use of unambiguous language is clearly desirable.

PATTESON, J. added, that Lord Denman, C.J. (who had left the Court at the close of the argument,) entirely agreed in the judgment.

(7) 7 Ad. & El. 423; s. c. (as The Queen v. the Justices of Salop.) 7 Law J. Rep. (N.S.) M.C. 3.

The defendant was indicted in the court of Quarter Sessions for the borough of Portsmouth. The following was the form of the indictment:—"The jurors for our Lady the Queen, upon their oath, present, that George Edward Silversides, late of, &c., labourer, on the 19th day of May, A.D. 1842, with force and arms, at the parish aforesaid, within the borough aforesaid, in the said county, unlawfully, willingly, and knowingly, had in the custody, possession, and keeping of him, the said George Edward Silversides, certain naval stores of our Lady the Queen, that is to say, 19lb. weight of copper spike nails, each of the said spike nails being marked with the broad arrow, and being new, &c. &c., he the said George Edward Silversides not being a contractor with the principal officers and commissioners of our said Lady the Queen of the Navy, Ordnance, or Victuallers, for the use of our said Lady the Queen, or employed by any contractor with the principal officers and commissioners of our said Lady the Queen of the Navy, Ordnance, or Victuallers, for the use of our said Lady the Queen, and not being a contractor with the Commissioners for executing the office of Lord High Admiral of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, for the use of our said Lady the Queen, or employed by any contractor with the Commissioners for executing the office of Lord High Admiral aforesaid, for the use of our said Lady the Queen, to make any stores of war or naval stores whatsoever, to the diminution of the naval stores of our said Lady the Queen, against the form of the statute in such case made and provided, and against the peace of our said Lady the Queen, her crown and dignity."

Second count.—That the said George Edward Silversides, on the said 19th day of January 1842, with force and arms, at the parish aforesaid, within the borough aforesaid, in the said county, unlawfully did conceal certain other naval stores, marked with the mark usually used to and marked upon such like naval stores of our said Lady the Queen, that is to say, &c., to the diminution of the naval stores of our said Lady the Queen, against the form of the statute in such case made and provided, and against the peace of our said Lady the Queen, her crown and dignity.

The prisoner pleaded guilty, and was sentenced to be imprisoned and kept to hard labour for twelve calendar months.

Poulden, for the prisoner.—This indictment is founded on the 39 & 40 Geo. 3. c. 89, entitled 'An Act for the better preventing the embezzlement of His Majesty's Naval, Ordnance, and Victualling Stores.' This statute provides, that every person, "not being a contractor," &c., who shall willingly and knowingly have in his possession any of the stores or goods specified in the act, "shall be deemed a receiver of stolen goods, knowing them to be stolen." The second count is clearly bad, as it does not negative the prisoner's being a contractor, or otherwise employed as specified in the act. The first count does, indeed, negative these exceptions, but it does so without any specific and sufficient averment of time. It does not positively set out, that the prisoner was not a contractor, &c. at the time when the offence was committed. This allegation is clearly a material one, and, as such, requires the averment of time and place—2 Hawk. P.C. b. 2. c. 25, 1 Chitty's Criminal Law, 219, 221; The King v. Hollond (1), The Queen v. Brownlow (2).

Shepherd, contra.—The averment is, that the prisoner on a specified day committed the offence, "not being a contractor," which must mean, not being then a contractor.

[COLERIDGE, J.—If the words were transposed, and read, that the prisoner on such a day, not being a contractor, committed the offence, the effect would be obvious.]

Per Curiam.—We think the indictment sufficient on that point. The allegation "not being a contractor," must necessarily be connected with the averment of the time when the offence was committed.

Poulden.—The judgment is bad, on account of its imposing the punishment of hard labour. As a misdemeanour at common law, the offence would clearly not be punishable in that manner. Under 9 & 10 Will. 3. c. 41. s. 2, it was so; but 39 & 40 Geo. 3. c. 89. ss. 2, 7, impliedly take away the power—The King v. Bridges (3). The Court called on—referred to enacts, that persons guilty of this offence "shall be deemed receivers of stolen goods." By 3 Geo. 4. c. 114. s. 1, receivers of stolen goods are rendered punishable with hard labour.

Poulden.—That portion of 3 Geo. 4. c. 114. is expressly repealed by 7 & 8 Geo. 4. c. 27. Receiving of stolen goods is now a felony by 7 & 8 Geo. 4. c. 29. s. 54, where the original taking is a felony, and in that case punishable by hard labour. The sentence, therefore, exceeds the jurisdiction; and that being so, this Court is bound to reverse the judgment, and discharge the prisoner—The King v. Ellis (4), The King v. Bourne (5).

Shepherd.—The 7 & 8 Geo. 4. c. 27. s. 2. provides, that nothing in the act contained shall alter or affect parts of any acts relating, among other things, to the public stores of his Majesty. As to the course to be pursued by this Court, in The King v. Ellis, the prisoner had been sentenced to transportation for fourteen years, whereas seven was the limit; it was necessary, therefore, to alter the judgment, which the Court would not do. Here, it is only necessary to strike out the portion of the sentence which relates to hard labour.

LORD DENMAN, C.J.—The argument for the prisoner must prevail. The only way in which it is contended that he can be subjected to hard labour, is by bringing him within the provision of 39 & 40 Geo. 3. c. 89, which enacts, that a person guilty of this offence shall be deemed a receiver of stolen goods. But 3 & 4 Geo. 4. c. 114, which enables receivers to be sentenced to hard labour, is repealed by 7 & 8 Geo. 4. c. 27. s. 1, and though section 2. of the same act contains an exception from the repealing clause, in respect of acts relating to public stores, there are a great many acts which will satisfy the meaning of that clause, without extending it to such a case as the present. The sentence was consequently beyond the power of the Court to pronounce. With respect to the course to be pursued by this Court, we are bound by the authorities cited.

Judgment reversed, and ordered that the defendant be discharged.

Appeal—Case—Mandamus.

Where the Sessions dismiss an appeal on a preliminary point, at the same time tendering the appellants a case, which they decline to accept, the appellants are not thereby precluded from applying for a mandamus to enter continuances and hear it.

An appeal had been lodged at the West Riding Sessions, against two orders of Justices, for executing a suspended order of removal, and for payment of intermediate expenses. The respondents objected, that the notice of appeal, under the circumstances, was given too late. The Court thought the appellants out of time, and confirmed both orders. At the same time, the Court informed counsel for the appellants, that they were willing to grant a case upon the point. The appellants, on consideration, refused to take up a case, but stated that they should resort to the remedy by mandamus.

A rule nisi having been obtained accordingly,—

Sir G. Lewin and Hall, in shewing cause, contended, that the appellants had no right to a mandamus, having refused the remedy tendered them. In The King v. the Justices of the West Riding (1), the Court refused a mandamus, where the defeated party had applied for a case, and had not brought it up. Here, it is true that they have not, by their own act, accepted the case; but the principle of that decision was, that the Justices having granted a complete remedy, this Court would not interfere; and that is equally applicable here.

Sed per Curiam.—It is the constant practice of Courts of Sessions to grant a case when prayed for; but it is not usual to volunteer one. And when a case is so offered, we cannot say a party is bound to take it, and abandon the right to apply for another remedy.

The rule for a mandamus was made absolute on argument.

The next Sessions were on the 29th of March; but, no notice of appeal having been given, the pauper was actually removed on the 12th of April. At the Midsummer Sessions, which were held on the 28th of June, an appeal was entered and respited; and on the 2nd of October a notice of appeal was given, to be tried at the then next Sessions, October 18th:—Held, that the Court of Quarter Sessions was bound to hear the appeal.

An order of removal was made on the 22nd of February 1841, and on the 25th, a copy of the order and examinations, together with notice of chargeability, was sent by post by the overseers of the respondent parish to the overseers of the appellant parish; and, according to the course of post, they would be received by the latter on the following day (the 26th). The next Quarter Sessions were on the 29th of March. The overseers of the appellant parish did not give notice of appeal within the twenty-one days, and the pauper was actually removed on the 12th of April. At the following Sessions, which were held on the 28th of June, the appellants, without notice to the respondents, entered and respited an appeal, and on the 2nd of October gave notice of trying this appeal at the following Sessions, which were held on the 18th. It was objected, that they were too late. The Magistrates having allowed the objection, and refused to hear the appeal,—

R. V. Richards obtained a rule nisi for a mandamus, commanding them to enter contingencies and hear the appeal, on the authority of The Queen v. the Justices of Middlesex (1).

(1) 9 Dowl. P.C. 163.

Townshend shewed cause.—It is not disputed that a parish may appeal against the actual removal, as well as against the original order of removal; but the appeal should be tried at the next Sessions after such removal. They had no right to enter and respite an appeal behind the backs of the respondents. The real grievance appealed against was the decision come to by the Magistrates when they made the order. The appeal is, in reality, against that order; and it was admitted at Sessions, that it was for a defect apparent on the face of the order. It was also admitted at Sessions, by the appellants' counsel, that the appeal was too late. Such an admission is fatal to the rule—Robinson v. Cooke (2), Simpson v. Clayton (3). Admitting that the case of The Queen v. the Justices of Middlesex was rightly decided, the appellants should have tried at the next practicable Sessions after the removal—The King v. the Justices of Cornwall (4).

R. V. Richards, contra.—There is no distinction in principle between this case and that of The Queen v. the Justices of Middlesex. That case decides, that a parish still has its right to appeal upon the actual removal of the pauper. If so, the appellants were in time, for they did enter and respite at the next Sessions after such removal.

WIGHTMAN, J.—It certainly appears to me, that the actual removal of the pauper does not interfere with any previous right of appeal which the parties had before, under the New Poor Law Act, but only gives a new one; and that, after the judgment of Patteson, J., in The Queen v. the Justices of Middlesex, the case is free from doubt. On the authority of that case, I think that the circumstance of the order being made before the March Sessions, would not preclude the parties from entering and respiting the appeal.

1842. { THE QUEEN v. THE GREAT May 28. { WESTERN RAILWAY COMPANY, in re WOOLLEY.

Coroner—Inquisition—Death per infortunium—Cause and Place of, in different Jurisdictions.

The venue of a coroner's inquisition was "borough of Reading," and it stated an inquisition, taken, &c. "in the parish of St. Giles, in the said borough of Reading," before J. B., one of the coroners for the said borough, on view of the body of R. W., now in the parish of St. Giles, in the borough aforesaid, lying dead, upon the oaths, &c. of &c., good and lawful men of the borough, duly sworn, &c. to inquire how and by what means R. W. came to his death, &c., and that they found, that R. W., on &c., "at the parish of Sunning, in the county of Berks," then and there being in a certain carriage, attached to a certain engine, it happened that R. W. was then and there casually, accidentally, and by misfortune, overturned and violently thrown out of the carriage against the ground, by means whereof R. W. then and there received a mortal fracture, &c., of which, from &c., until &c., at the parish and county last aforesaid, and also at the parish of St. Giles, in the borough of Reading, to wit, in a hospital there, he did languish, and languishing did live; on which day, &c., in the hospital aforesaid, at the parish last aforesaid, in the borough aforesaid, R. W. of the mortal fracture aforesaid did die. And so the jurors say, that R. W., in manner and by the means aforesaid, accidentally, casually, and by misfortune, came to his death, and not otherwise, &c. It then proceeded to find the deodand.

Inquisition quashed, for want of jurisdiction appearing upon the face of it; as the coroner for the borough had no jurisdiction to take an inquisition, in a case of an accidental death, where the cause of death occurred in the county, and out of his jurisdiction, although the death took place within the borough.

Semble—That although by statute 2 & 3 Edw. 6. c. 24, in cases of felonious killing, the death may be inquired of in the county where it has taken place, although the stroke was given in a different county, the provision is not applicable to boroughs.

Talbot obtained a rule in Easter term last, upon reading certain affidavits, and the inquisition taken before John Jackson Blandy, Esq., one of the coroners for the borough of Reading, on the 31st of December, then last, on view of the body of Richard Woolley, then and there lying dead, requiring the said coroner, and the solicitors for the affairs of her Majesty's Treasury, to shew cause why the said inquisition should not be quashed. The inquisition was as follows:—

"Borough of Reading, to wit.—An inquisition indented, taken for, &c., at the Royal Berkshire Hospital, in the parish of St. Giles, in the said borough of Reading, and from thence continued by adjournment to the public office in the parish of St. Lawrence, in the said borough, on the 31st day of December, in the fifth year of the reign, &c., before John Jackson Blandy, Esq., one of the coroners of our said Lady the Queen, for the said borough, on view of the body of Richard Woolley, now in the parish of St. Giles, in the borough aforesaid, lying dead, upon the oaths of William Ferguson, (and eleven others whose christian and surnames were set out at full length,) the several persons whose names are hereunder written and seals affixed, good and lawful men of the said borough, duly chosen, and who being then and there duly sworn and charged to inquire for our said Lady the Queen, when, how, and by what means the said Richard Woolley came to his death, do, upon their oaths say, that the said Richard Woolley, on the 24th day of December, in the year aforesaid, at the parish of Sunning, in the county of Berks, then and there being in a certain carriage, then and there attached to a certain engine, then and there drawing the same, it so happened that the said Richard Woolley was then and there casually, accidentally, and by misfortune, overturned and violently thrown out of the said carriage, to and against the ground, by means whereof the said Richard Woolley did then and there receive one mortal fracture, in and upon the hinder part of the head of him the said Richard Woolley, of which said mortal fracture the said Richard Woolley, from the said 24th day of December, in the year aforesaid, until the 29th day of December, in the same year, at the parish and county last aforesaid, and also at the parish of St. Giles, in the said borough of Reading, to wit, in a certain hospital there called the Royal Berkshire Hospital, did languish, and languishing did live, on which said 29th day of December, in the year aforesaid, in the hospital aforesaid, at the parish last aforesaid, in the borough aforesaid, the said Richard Woolley of the mortal fracture aforesaid did die. And so the jurors aforesaid, upon their oath aforesaid, do say, that the said Richard Woolley, in manner, and by the means aforesaid, accidentally, casually, and by misfortune, came to his death, and not otherwise; and that the said carriage and engine were moving to the death of the said Richard Woolley, and are of the value of 100*l.*, and are the goods and chattels, and in the possession of the Great Western Railway Company. In witness whereof, as well the said coroner as William Ferguson, the foreman of the said jurors, and the rest of the said jurors, have to this inquisition set their hands and seals, the day and year first above written."

This case was argued in Easter term last, (April 30,) by Kelly, for the railway company, and Waddington, for the Crown, but as the principal point, and that upon which the opinion of the Court proceeded, is so fully considered in the judgment, the arguments are omitted. The following authorities were cited in addition to those referred to in the judgment—The Queen v. the Grand Junction Railway Company (1), The King v. Evett (2), The King v. Clark (3), 5 & 6 Will. 4. c. 76. s. 62, as to exclusive jurisdiction of borough coroners. The form of stating the death upon the face of the inquisition was also objected to; and it was also objected, that there was no sufficient finding of the deodand.

Cur. adv. vult.

LORD DENMAN, C.J.—The first and principal objection to the inquisition is, that it appears to be taken before the coroner of the borough of Reading, upon the view of a body lying dead within that borough, and upon the oaths of men of that borough; while upon the face of the inquisition itself, it is found, that the accident which occasioned the death, occurred in the parish of Sunning, in the county of Berks, not saying within the borough of Reading; yet the jury have found the cause of the death, and that a certain carriage and engine were moving thereto, and that they were of the value of 100*l.* For the railway company it was urged, that the want of jurisdiction appears upon the face of the inquisition. For the Crown it was contended, that there is no such want of jurisdiction, and that on two grounds: first, that at common law, the coroner of the place where a dead body is lying, has a jurisdiction to inquire into the death, and the cause of it, though both the one and the other should have happened out of his jurisdiction; and secondly, that at all events such jurisdiction is given by the statutes 4 Edw. 1, De Officio Coronatoris, and 2 & 3 Edw. 6. c. 24. It may be convenient to examine the second ground in the first place. The statute of 4 Edw. 1, is said by Serjeant Hawkins, book 2, cap. 9, sect. 21, to be wholly directory, and in affirmance of the common law. It contains no provision whatever, respecting the jurisdiction of the Crown, as regards place, nor any expression which can be construed into an extension of its powers. The statute of 2 & 3 Edw. 6. does expressly provide, by section 2, "that where any person shall be feloniously stricken, or poisoned in one county, and die of the same stroke or poisoning in another county, that then an indictment thereof founden by jurors of the county where the death shall happen, whether it shall be founden before the coroner upon the sight of such dead body, or before the Justices of Peace, or other Justices or commissioners which shall have authority to inquire of such offences, shall be as good and effectual in the law, as if the stroke or poisoning had been committed and done in the same county where the party shall die, or where such indictment shall be so founden." The statute then contains similar provisions respecting appeals of murder, and the trial of accessories as well in murder as in other felonies. The words of the 2nd section are confined to cases of felonious killing; and the preamble of the act, and all the other sections in it, plainly shew, that the mischief intended to be remedied was the escape of felons, from want of jurisdiction, and nothing else. But it is said, that as the jury must determine whether there has been a felonious killing, and as in all cases of violent death, such felonious killing may exist, the statute incidentally gives power to the coroner to pursue an inquiry into the cause of death, in all cases where he has once begun it. This argument justly applies, where there is any suspicion and charge of felony before the coroner, upon which the jury would have to exercise their judgment; but it is observable that the act of parliament seems to assume the existence of the felony, for it makes good an indictment found for feloniously striking or poisoning, but is silent entirely as to what is to be done by coroner or jury, if no such indictment be found. The effect of any other finding seems to be left entirely as it stood at common law. It is further objected, that the statute of 2 & 3 Edw. 6. speaks only of counties, and that, however it may empower the coroner of the county in which a dead body lies, to inquire into the cause of death arising in another county, it does not empower the coroner of a borough or other limited jurisdiction so to do. In support of this objection, the case of The King v. Welsh (4) was cited, where the Judges held, that the statute 7 Geo. 4. c. 64. s. 12, giving jurisdiction in cases of offences committed within 500 yards of the border of a county, does not extend to offences committed within 500 yards of a borough. The language of the two acts is very similar in the use of the word "county," and we see no reason for putting a different sense upon it in this case, from that which the Judges adopted in the case cited. For this reason, therefore, as well as the other above mentioned, we think that the statute of 2 & 3 Edw. 6. does not apply. It remains to consider what jurisdiction the coroner had at common law. It is laid down in 1 Hale's Pleas of the Crown, 426, "that at common law, if a man had been stricken in one county, and died in another, it was doubtful whether he were indictable or triable in either; but the more common opinion was, that he might be indicted where the stroke was given, for the death is but a consequent, and might be found in another county," and he cites the 9 Edw. 4. c. 48, and the 7 Hen. 7. c. 8, "And if the party died in another county, the body was removed into the county where the stroke was given, for the coroner to take an inquest, super visum corporis," under the 6 Hen. 7. c. 10, but now by the statute of 2 & 3 Edw. 6. c. 24, the Justice or coroner of the county where the party died shall inquire and proceed as if the stroke had been in the same county where the party died. Again in vol. 2, page 66, Lord Hale says, "And, therefore, in ancient times, if a man were hurt in the county of A, and died in the county of B, the coroner of the county of B. could not take an inquisition of his death, because the stroke was not given in that county, nor could the coroner of the county of A. take inquisition, because the body was in the county of B, but they used to remove the body into the county of A, and there the coroner of that county to take the inquisition;" and for that he cites 6 Hen. 7. c. 10, a; as before. Again, the statute of 2 & 3 Edw. 6. in the preamble, distinctly states, that in such case, "it hath not been founden by the laws or customs of this realm, that any sufficient indictment thereof can be taken in any of the said two counties, for that by the custom of this realm, the jurors of the county where such party died of such stroke, can take no knowledge of the said stroke, being in a foreign county, although the same two counties and places adjoin very near together, ne the jurors of the county where the stroke was given cannot take knowledge of the death in another county, although such death must apparently come of the same stroke." The same law is laid down very pointedly in 1 Hale's Pleas of the Crown, 426, as to the jurisdiction of the Admiralty at common law, in such cases: "if a mortal stroke be given on the high seas, and the party comes to land in England, and die, the Admiral shall not have jurisdiction in this case to try the felon, because the death that consummated the felony happened upon the land, nor the common law shall not try him, because the stroke that made the offence, was not infra corpus comitatus," and he cites 5 Rep. 106, b, Sir Henry Constable's case, Co. P.C. 48, Bingham's case (5), and Lacy's case (6), cited in the latter case. After these authorities, it is startling to hear it asserted broadly at the bar, that if a mortal stroke be given in county A, and the party go to and die in county B, and the body after death be taken into county C, the coroner of county C. may hold an inquest, and inquire into the whole matter, and that by the common law. No authority is cited for such assertion, and in truth there is no foundation for it. The mere fact of a body lying dead, does not give the coroner jurisdiction, nor even the circumstance that the death was sudden; "there ought, at least, to be a reasonable suspicion that the party came to his death by violent or unnatural means"—1 East's Pleas of the Crown, 382, citing three MS. cases; and also see 11 East, 229, The King v. the Justices of Kent, The King v. the Justices of Norfolk (7), which is one of the cases cited in East's Pleas of the Crown. The coroner must, therefore, before he summons a jury, make some inquiry; and if on that inquiry he finds that the circumstances which occasioned the death have happened out of his jurisdiction, and that there is no reasonable suspicion of murder or manslaughter, he ought to abstain from summoning a jury, and the body, in order to an inquest being holden, must be removed into the county where the circumstances took place. If, however, the coroner has no reason to suspect murder or manslaughter to have been committed, or if it appears on inquiry by him, that the circumstances occurred out of his jurisdiction, and no murder or manslaughter is suspected, the coroner must stop the proceeding, and discharge the jury. This is what he would have been obliged to do before the statute 2 & 3 Edw. 6, in all cases where such circumstances appeared; and this he must do still, unless it be a supposed case of murder or manslaughter, when he must proceed until the jury find their verdict. If the verdict be, death by the visitation of God, nothing more is done, for in truth it appears that there was no occasion for an inquest. If the verdict be murder or manslaughter, then the want of jurisdiction at common law, if any, is cured by the statute 2 & 3 Edw. 6. If the verdict be per infortunium, then the coroner (that is, by the jury) is to inquire of the deodand, and the value, and in whose hands, and is to seize and deliver the same to the township, to be answerable for the same to the King, by the statute 4 Edw. 1, De Officio Coronatoris. See Hale's Pleas of the Crown, 62. But this supposes that the circumstances which occasioned the death, happened within his jurisdiction, and that the deodand to be seized, is also within his jurisdiction. If the facts be otherwise, as in this case, then the finding of the deodand, at all events, is merely void; but, as a want of jurisdiction appears upon the face of the proceedings, we are of opinion, that the whole inquisition is void. We do not enter into any question as to the validity of the inquisition in other respects, but on the ground of want of jurisdiction, the rule to quash it must be made absolute.

1842. { THE QUEEN v. THE INHABITANTS OF TIPTON.

Bastard—Settlement—Parish—Division into Townships—Birth in one of.

In 1822, the pauper was born a bastard in one of several townships in a parish, which had then only one set of overseers, for the common purposes of the whole parish. From 1832, each of the townships had had its own overseers, and separately maintained its own poor:—Held, that the pauper had not gained a settlement in the township of her birth, so as to be removable thither from a foreign parish after the townships had been separated.

An order was made by two Justices, for the removal of Elizabeth Shaw, single woman, from the parish of Tipton, in the county of Stafford, to the township of Hales Owen, in the county of Salop. Upon appeal against this order, at the Quarter Sessions for Staffordshire, it was quashed, subject to the opinion of this Court upon the following—

CASE.

The parish of Hales Owen, at the time of the birth of the pauper, (which took place about twenty years ago, in the workhouse, situate in the township of Hales Owen, in the county of Salop,) consisted of the appellant township of Hales Owen, the township of Oldbury, and ten other townships, in the county of Salop, and three other townships in the county of Worcester. The three Worcestershire townships had always had separate overseers, and supported their poor, and managed their parochial affairs apart from each other, and also apart from the rest of the parish; but the other part of the parish of Hales Owen, which is in Shropshire, and which includes the appellant township of Hales Owen, the township of Oldbury, and the ten other townships in the county of Salop, formed a distinct parish from time immemorial, up to the year 1832, and never had but one set of overseers, who were annually appointed overseers of the poor of the parish of Hales Owen, in the county of Salop, and who, with the churchwardens, made a joint rate, which formed one common fund for the relief of the poor, and other parochial disbursements, and of which a joint account was kept and annually audited, in the usual way. In the year 1832, an application was made to the Justices of the county of Salop, to appoint overseers of the poor of the township of Oldbury, and upon their refusing to appoint overseers, the inhabitants of that township applied to the Court of King's Bench, and obtained a rule for a mandamus to compel them to appoint overseers for the township of Oldbury, which rule, after argument, was made absolute, and the Justices accordingly appointed separate overseers of the poor for the township of Oldbury, and each of the other Shropshire townships, and from that time ceased to appoint overseers of the poor of the parish of Hales Owen. The pauper, Elizabeth Shaw, was born a bastard, in the workhouse, which was situate within the appellant township, about ten years before the division of the parish of Hales Owen, in 1832, which workhouse was then and always previously had been, used for the reception and accommodation and maintenance of the poor of the whole of the said parish of Hales Owen, in the county of Salop, then consisting of all the said townships; but the pauper's mother, at the time of the birth of the pauper, Elizabeth Shaw, was legally settled in that part of the parish of Hales Owen, which subsequently became, and now forms the distinct township of Oldbury, and at the time of the pauper's birth she was maintained in the said workhouse as a pauper of the parish of Hales Owen. The question for the opinion of the Court was, whether upon the foregoing facts, the pauper was settled in the township of Hales Owen, in the county of Salop, by reason of her having been born in the said workhouse, under the circumstances before stated. If she was, the judgment of the Sessions to be quashed, and the order of removal affirmed; if not, then the judgment of Sessions to be affirmed.

Corbett, in support of the order of Sessions.—The pauper gained no birth settlement in the now separated township of the borough of Hales Owen. It is not a matter of necessity, that a birth settlement should have been gained anywhere, as would be the case where the birth had been in an extra-parochial place—The King v. St. Nicholas, Leicester (1). But even admitting that prior to 4 & 5 Will. 4. c. 76. s. 71, prima facie, the birth-place of a bastard was its place of settlement, that presumption is rebutted by the facts of this case, upon two grounds:—first, the present township of Hales Owen will not now be the place of settlement of the pauper, merely because she was born within its limits in 1822, prior to any separation into separate townships, and when Hales Owen was a member of the whole parish. Any settlement acquired or charge created from locality of birth in 1822, would rest upon the whole parish, and not upon any district of it. When then did the special liability of Hales Owen only attach? The townships, which were united, and but one parish until 1832, having then become separate with separate officers, the separate districts would thenceforward be in the same position separately, as they were previously in collectively, but no alteration would be made in individual rights or local liabilities. Although, therefore, the separation may deprive a third parish of a remedy for an accidental charge, it would not create a liability in the separate township of Hales Owen which it had not before. Here, therefore, the pauper having no settlement in Hales Owen only, prior to its separation from the other townships forming the parish, has not acquired one there by the fact of the separation; or in other words, the separation has no retrospective effect—The King v. Oakmere (2). But, secondly, if the separation is to have a retrospective effect, and the case is to be considered as if Hales Owen had been a place maintaining its own poor in 1822, then a question arises, whether the circumstances under which the mother of the pauper was resident in the workhouse in Hales Owen at the time she was born, would not give her a settlement in the township of Oldbury, and not in that of Hales Owen. By stat. 54 Geo. 3. c. 170. s. 3, it is provided, "That whenever any person shall be born of the body of any poor person in any house of industry, or house for the reception and care of the poor of any district, parish, township, or hamlet, which shall be locally situated in any district, parish, township, or hamlet, contributing to the expenses of maintaining the poor in such house, or in any other district, parish, township, or hamlet not contributing to such expense, such person shall, so far as regards the settlement of such person, be deemed and taken to be born in the district, parish, township, or hamlet, by whom the mother of such person was sent to, and on whose account the mother of such person was received and maintained in such house." The case finds, that "the pauper's mother, at the time of the pauper's birth, was legally settled in that part of the parish of Hales Owen which subsequently became and now forms the distinct township of Oldbury." This case is within the spirit, if not the letter, of the act, as the mother must be considered to have been sent to the place where the workhouse was situated. In The King v. Oldbury (3), Lord Denman, in speaking of this township of Oldbury, says, "It seems to me, therefore, that if this township is an ancient division, which might formerly have maintained its own poor, then, when it obtained the right to have officers of its own, and to provide for its poor separately, it became liable to maintain those paupers whom it would have supported if it had been a separate division at an earlier period." If, therefore, Oldbury, had been a separate district in 1822, and had sent the pauper's mother to the parish workhouse of Hales Owen, and the pauper was born there, she would have been settled in Oldbury; and then, upon the authority of the above case, that place is now her place of settlement.

V. Lee, contra.—It may be true, that under some peculiar circumstances no settlement may be acquired by birth; but the two cases cited to support that proposition have no application here. In The King v. St. Nicholas, Leicester, no settlement could be acquired in the place of birth, as that place formed part of no parish or district maintaining its poor; and in The King v. Oakmere, a district was created into a parish de novo, by an act of parliament; but this was always a place maintaining its poor, and where, consequently, a birth settlement could be gained, and was distinguished by Lord Denman from The King v. Oakmere, in his judgment, which has been referred to. If, then, a settlement was acquired by birth, that settlement was in Hales Owen. But, secondly, it is said, that by virtue of the statute of the 54 Geo. 3, since the separation of these townships, the settlement will be in Oldbury, and not Hales Owen; and section 3. is relied upon. But it is found, as a fact in the case, that at the time of the pauper's birth, her mother was maintained in the workhouse, as a pauper of the parish of Hales Owen. She was, therefore, received into the workhouse on account of Hales Owen, and not on account of the township of Oldbury.

Cur. adv. vult.

LORD DENMAN, C.J.—The question in this case arises upon the removal, by order of two Justices, of a pauper, Elizabeth Shaw, from the parish of Tipton to the township of the borough of Hales Owen, in the county of Salop. The Sessions quashed the said order, and stated a case for the opinion of the Court of Queen's Bench, which is in substance as follows:—Previous and up to the year 1832, the parish of Hales Owen consisted of fifteen townships, twelve of which are in the county of Salop, and three in the county of Worcester. The three latter were always independent of the other twelve townships, and of each other, for the purpose of maintaining their poor. The former twelve, "from time immemorial, (until the year 1832,)" constituted one parish, having one set of overseers, and maintained their poor, as such parish. In the year 1832, by virtue of a writ of mandamus, (on the application of one of the said twelve townships, Oldbury,) the said parish of Hales Owen became divided, and all the said twelve townships in the county of Salop have since maintained their poor apart, have had separate overseers, and none have since been appointed for the parish of Hales Owen. About ten years before such subdivision, the pauper was born a bastard, in the parish workhouse, in the township of the borough of Hales Owen; and the question is, whether she gained a settlement in the latter township by such birth; and that must depend upon this, how far, before such subdivision, each township ought to be considered as connected with or independent of the parish, for purposes of settlement. Generally speaking, they are not so connected: any act, by which a settlement may be gained, has no reference to the township in which it may be acquired, but to the parish only. Whether that settlement was gained in the township of the borough of Hales Owen, or Oldbury, or any other of the townships constituting the parish of Hales Owen, was before the separation wholly immaterial; it was not a settlement in township A. or B, but in the district, where alone it could be gained—the parish. This point has been, to a certain extent, under the consideration of the Court, in respect of the same parish and townships. In the case of The King v. Oldbury, there was an order of removal into that township (Oldbury); and in support of it, a former order was produced, removing the pauper into the parish of Hales Owen, against which there had been no appeal. Such latter order was relied upon as conclusive against the township of Oldbury, and was held so to be by the Court of Quarter Sessions. This Court, however, decided, with some hesitation, that it was not; which decision could only have been upon the ground, that a settlement in the parish is not a settlement in the whole, and also in every part or township in it; because, if it had been, the Sessions were unquestionably right: for if, as was then contended, the proof of a settlement there given applied to the parish, and to every township equally and to the same extent, the order of removal unappealed against would have been conclusive, and all evidence against it inadmissible. The decision in the case of The King v. Oakmere, cited in the argument, was to this effect, that the birth of a pauper in the forest of Delamere, whilst extra-parochial, gained no settlement in the township of Oakmere, which was constituted such township by act of parliament long after; or, in other words, that the state of things at the time of birth was to be considered, and then no settlement could of course be gained: so here, by 54 Geo. 3. c. 170. s. 3, the settlement of the pauper at her birth was in the parish of Hales Owen, that being the “district on whose account the pauper’s mother was received and maintained in the house.” The locality, therefore, of the township of the borough of Hales Owen is excluded, and all the townships contributing to the workhouse, stand on the same footing. Indeed, independent of the statute, the settlement by birth would have been in the parish; that being so, to sustain the order of removal into the township of Hales Owen, we must hold, that a settlement by birth was gained equally in the parish, and each of the townships composing it, for which we can find no warrant, or direct authority or analogy, in the law of settlement. It has been suggested, as a difficulty, that, unless we so hold, the parish by subdivision will get rid of settlements, and that persons who would otherwise have gained them may have none. A similar result happened under circumstances nearly the converse of the present, in the case of The King v. the Inhabitants of Saighton-on-the-Hill (4). There, the pauper had gained a settlement in Saighton, and afterwards in Gloverstone, then a township; afterwards, by certain alterations in the castle of Chester, all the houses in Gloverstone were pulled down, and it ceased to exist as a township. The removal was accordingly into Loughton, as the last practicable place of settlement. The Court, however, decided, that the settlement in Saighton was extinguished by that in Gloverstone, though the necessary effect of the decision was to leave the pauper without any settlement at all.

Upon the whole, we are of opinion, that the decision of the Sessions was right, and that their order must be confirmed.

Order of Sessions confirmed.

ment, the Court of Quarter Sessions confirmed the rate, subject to the opinion of the Court of Queen’s Bench on the following—

CASE.

The London and South-western Railway Company are established and act under a certain act of parliament passed in the 5th year of the reign of his late Majesty King William the Fourth, entitled, ‘An act for making a railway from London to Southampton,’ and four other acts of parliament respectively passed in the 1st, 2nd, and 4th years of the reign of her present Majesty, and respectively entitled, ‘An act to alter the line of the London and Southampton

Railway, and to amend the act relating thereto;’ ‘An act to amend the acts relating to the London and Southampton Railway Company, hereafter to be called the London and South-western Railway Company, and to make a branch railway to the port of Portsmouth;’ ‘An act to amend the acts relating to the London and South-western Railway Company,’ and ‘An act to amend the acts relating to the London and Southwestern Railway Company, and to authorize an agreement between the said company and certain inhabitants of Wandsworth and Battersea, respecting an alleged loss in their supply of water.’ Copies of these acts accompany this case, and are deemed to constitute part thereof, and may be referred to by the Court or either party at the hearing thereof. Under the powers contained in these acts, or one of them, the company have formed and completed a line of railway from Vauxhall, in the county of Surrey, to Southampton, being a length of seventy-seven miles, and this railway, for four and a half miles thereof, passes through the parish of Mitcheldever aforesaid; and, in pursuance of the powers and provisions of the acts, especially those contained in the 150th to the 161st sections of the first-mentioned act, the company have caused lists to be made of the several rates, tolls, and sums which the company have appointed to be taken and received by virtue of the said first-mentioned act. And the said company have duly kept, and do duly keep, a separate account, shewing the amount of rates or tolls which would have been received by them for the use of the said railway, in respect of passengers, cattle, or other animals, goods, wares, &c., if carried by any other party or parties; to which said account the overseers of the poor of the several parishes and townships through which the railway passes, have free access, and have liberty to inspect, in the manner by the said act provided. The sum which should have been so received by the company for the use of the railway by such other parties, in the year next immediately before and up to the time of the making of the said rate, in respect of so much of the railway as lies in the said parish, amounts to 3,470*l.* 13*s.* 9*d.*, being such portion of the tolls as is earned by the company in the parish of Mitcheldever. The whole sum, however, received by the company for the conveyance of passengers, &c. by the company, in carriages provided, manned, and worked by the company, at their own sole expense, including the said sum of 3,470*l.* 13*s.* 9*d.*, amounts to 13,880*l.* per annum, in respect of so much of the railway as lies in the said parish. The former sum of 3,470*l.* 13*s.* 9*d.* constitutes the proportionate sum for the said parish, which any individual who contracted with the company for the exclusive right to take tolls for the use of the railway, by persons using the same under the powers, and subject to the regulations of the aforesaid statutes, for the transmission of goods, cattle, and passengers along the line, in carriages provided by such persons, would receive from such persons; and the sum of 1,295*l.* constitutes the rent which a tenant from year to year would give to the company, for the exclusive right to receive tolls for the conveyance of goods, cattle, and passengers in the manner mentioned in section 157 of the said first-mentioned act, along so much of the railway as lies in the said parish, free of all usual tenant's rates and taxes, and tithe commutation rent-charge, and making allowance and deductions for the average annual cost of repairs, insurances, and other expenses, necessary to maintain the way, its fixtures and appurtenances, in a state to command such rent. The respondent parish contends, that the annual value is not to be estimated on the basis of the tolls alone, nor is to be limited to such tolls, or their value; but that the advantage which a lessee of the railway may be expected to derive from his lease, by supplying power, and by carrying upon it, may be taken into account: that if a lessee is to be supposed capable of deriving from the use of the railway all the profits which now accrue to the company from the conveyance of passengers, cattle, and goods, under the powers of their acts, such lessee finding locomotive power, carriages, &c., and paying all expenses incidental to working the railway, then the whole railway, with its fixtures and appurtenances, might be reasonably expected to let from year to year, at a rent which, for the purposes of this rate, may be assumed at 70,000*l.* per annum at the least, free of all usual tenant's rates, and taxes, and tithe commutation rent-charge, and making allowance and deductions for the average annual cost of repairs, insurance, and other expenses necessary to maintain the way, its fixtures and appurtenances, in a state to command such rent: that supposing such rent to be given for the whole line, the proportion thereof, in respect of so much of the railway as lies in the respondent parish, is to be assumed to be the net sum of 4,320*l.* per annum, being the amount at which the appellants were rated in the above rate.

The questions for the opinion of the Court were, whether the company are rateable upon the principle contended for by them, or upon that contended for by the parish; that is to say, whether upon an estimate of the net annual value obtained from the statement of the tolls, which would be received by the company, as aforesaid, forming the basis of the rent which a tenant would give as before mentioned, subject to proper deductions; or upon an estimate of the net annual value as ascertained by a rent given by a tenant under the circumstances, and for the purposes above stated, as contended for by the parish. Lastly, whether the annual value, upon which the parish rate is to be made, should be such proportion of the estimated rateable value of the whole line, whichever basis is adopted by the Court, as the length of the part situate in the parish bears to the whole line, or such proportion thereof as the receipts actually derived from or in respect of the carriage of passengers, cattle, and goods, or from tolls, upon so much as lies in the parish, bear to the same receipts throughout the whole line. If the rateable value is to be proportioned to the length of the railway in the parish, and not to the receipts, then the estimate, as contended for by the company, should be the sum of 1,400*l.* If it is to be proportioned to the receipts as above, and not the length of the railway in the parish, then the estimate, as contended for by the parish, should be 3,800*l.* The rate was to be confirmed, quashed, amended, or the appeal sent to be re-heard by the Sessions, according to the opinion of the Court upon the above points.

The case was argued in Hilary term, this year, by—

The Solicitor General (Sir W. W. Follett), Cresswell, and Smirke, in support of the order of Sessions, (on behalf of the parish).—First, the ordinary basis of rating is, the rent which might be obtained from any person occupying the premises, and carrying on the business for which they are adapted—The King v. the Birmingham Gas-light Company (1), The King v. the Oxford Canal Company (2), The King v. the Trustees of the Duke of Bridgewater (3), The King v. Tomlinson (4), The King v. Lower Mitton (5), The King v. Woking (6). And therefore, in the particular case of this railway, the sum to be assessed should be that which a tenant would give for the occupation of the railway, he having the means of conducting the carrying trade upon it; that is, the sum which, after the necessary deductions, is estimated in the case at 4,320*l.*, dividing the whole line according to the length in each parish respectively. But it will be argued, against this view of the case, that any one of the public who should think proper to run carriages and engines on the line, as by these and other railway acts they are permitted to do, could not realize this sum, because that which gives the means of realizing so large an amount as that which the parish have taken as the criterion of rent, is not only the use of the railway itself, but the use of the stations and other conveniences erected by the company on the land; and therefore, it will be contended, the tolls really paid, form the more proper criterion. But, in point of fact, this supposed right of the public to convey themselves on the line, is altogether illusory. It is perfectly notorious, that no one can really conduct the carrying trade on a railway, excepting those who can command the various advantages here referred to. That being so, the annual rateable value of the land is the rent at which it would let, with the buildings, the iron rails laid down, and the other conveniences on it—The King v. the Liverpool Exchange (7), The Queen v. Guest (8), The Queen v. the Cambridge Gas-light Company (9). If, indeed, the supposed right of the public were really available, the effect would only be this—to diminish, pro tanto, the value of the occupation of the railway to the company itself, and of course equally to diminish it in the hands of such a lessee as is above supposed, and consequently the rent he would pay. There is no difficulty in the way of such a demise of the railway by the company. By section 108. of the first act, they are empowered to demise the tolls; and that they have power to demise the land, follows from the fee simple being vested in them. The real profit is, the tolls plus the use of the railway. The view here taken of the rateability of the company, is consonant with the provisions of the Parochial Assessment Act, 6 & 7 Will. 4. c. 90. s. 1, which was passed subsequently to the company's first act. Second, they further contended, that the estimate ought to be proportioned to the length of the part of the railway in the parish, not to the actual earnings in the parish.

M. D. Hill, Kelly, and Gunning, contra. —First, the railway company have two distinct characters; they are occupiers of land for the purposes of their railway; and they are also carriers, conducting trade upon it. In the first capacity they are rateable; in the second, they are not. And the appellants by no means controvert the applicability of the Parochial Assessment Act; they only contend that their profits, in their latter quality, are no part of the net annual value of the hereditaments, but are strictly profits of trade, and as such not the subject of a rate on the tenements themselves. The tolls are, directly and in the first instance, that which is paid for the use of the land, and that which the appellants contend to be the proper subject of the rate. The only way in which it can be contended that anything beyond the tolls can be brought into the account, is by mixing up that something ultra with the tolls, so as to constitute one gross profit. That has been endeavoured to be done, by fixing the amount which a tenant would give for the use of the railway plus the peculiar advantages which the company possesses for the carrying trade. This, the appellants maintain, cannot be done. If a building, or land, possesses certain peculiar advantages for a particular employment, (as by act of parliament in such cases as The King v. the Liverpool Exchange, The Queen v.

Guest, The Queen v. the Cambridge Gas-light Company, relied on by the other side,) those advantages enhance the value of the land for the purpose of rating. But if the occupier of buildings or land does, in fact, realize considerable profits by an employment of his capital there, such employment being not necessarily connected with the land itself, those profits are not the subject of assessment, as part of the annual value of the tenement. The King v. Adams (10), where Parke, J. says, "A rate ought not to be made according to the profits derived by the occupier himself; for, if that were so, the rate must vary according to the occupier's interest." So it was held in the case of canal proprietors, who were also carriers on the canal—The King v. the Trustees of the Duke of Bridgewater,—and of lighthouses—The King v. Fowke (11), which are not rateable for the tolls paid by vessels passing at a distance. The profits of the company, made by carrying, are to be considered in this latter character of separable advantages: and this is equally the case, whether the company are considered as having practically the monopoly of the carrying trade on the line or not. It is, however, contended on their part, that they have no such monopoly in law, or in effect. Any one may carry on the line, on payment of tolls. If it be said, he cannot do so with effect, from not enjoying the use of the stations, &c. belonging to the company, the answer is, that those are advantages belonging to the company as traders, for the use of which some additional remuneration might be paid by a lessee, but that remuneration would not fall under the description of rent for the railway. But if there were a monopoly, the profits of such monopoly would not be the more rateable. Any occupier of a house may possess a monopoly for carrying on a particular business there; his profits would form no part of the rateable value of such house. That would be the sum at which the house would let to a person possessing no such privilege. In like manner, it is here contended, that the rateable value of the railway is the sum at which it would let to a lessee not possessing the company's peculiar advantages; in other words, the tolls, after the proper deductions. Section 157. of the first act is important. It provides, "that in all cases in which the said company of proprietors shall carry, for their own profit, any passengers, cattle or other animals, goods, wares, or merchandise, articles, monies, or things, a separate account shall be duly kept, shewing the amount of rates or tolls which would have been received by the said company for the use of the said railway, in respect of such passengers, cattle, &c., if carried by any other party or parties; and the overseers of the poor of the several parishes and townships through which the said railway shall pass, shall have free access to, and liberty to inspect the same, at any time during the first fourteen days in the months of July and January in each year." When the legislature compelled the keeping of this separate account, and gave the overseers this form of half-yearly inspection, it was obviously with the intention that this sum, so estimated in the separate accounts, should form the basis of the rate. Secondly, the rate ought to be imposed according to the proportion of the earnings in the parish, not according to the relative length of the line—The King v. Kingswinford (12), The King v. Woking, The Queen v. the Bristol Dock Company (13). (This point was, in effect, given up by the other side.)

Curr. adv. vult.

LORD DENMAN, C.J. now delivered the judgment of the Court.—This case has stood over for consideration for some time, on account of its novelty, and its supposed application to the rating of railway companies in general to the relief of the poor. It must, however, be determined on its own state of facts; and the question raised is, whether this company, being in the occupation of its own railway, and at present in the exclusive use of it, in fact, for the purpose of a large carrying trade, the rateable value of such occupation is to be taken only on the amount of certain tolls which have been fixed under the statute hereafter mentioned, as payable generally by all carriers for the use of the way, but which are, in fact, never paid, or on the amount of the general profit which the company in fact receive from the occupation so devoted to such carrying trade. Another question was undoubtedly raised, as to the mode of measuring the rate—on which of two principles it was to be calculated—whether it was to be measured according to the proportion which the mileage of the railway in the respondent parish bears to the whole length of the way, assuming the profit to arise equally through the whole, or according to the actual earnings in the parish. This question, however, was not much argued, it being conceded ultimately, that the latter was the proper mode, and the result was agreed to be, that the rate ought to be on 3,803*l.*, if the parish be right; on 1,293*l.*, if the company can limit their liability to a rate, in fact, on tolls only. The railway has been formed, and is regulated under the authority of several statutes. By the first of these, the 4 & 5 Will. 4, the proprietors were incorporated, and were authorized to purchase lands in fee simple, subject to certain qualifications not material to be noticed. On the land so purchased, they are to make and maintain a railway, with warehouses, stations, and landing-places, for the purpose of locomotive engines, carriages, &c., and for loading, unloading, and landing of goods, and the approach and departure of passengers for conveyance. For the tonnage of goods, and in respect of passengers, beasts, cattle, and animals, conveyed in carriages on the railway, and also for carriages conveyed on it, they may demand certain tolls, of which the maximum is fixed, and not the minimum; and further, they may themselves provide power for propelling persons and things, or they may themselves convey such persons or things on their railway; for which, in addition to the before-mentioned tolls, they may charge such sums as they may from time to time think fit. The company, may, therefore, be simply the owners of the way, on which others may place steam power and carriages, and convey persons and goods, and these two parties would then stand much in the same relation to each other as the trustees of a turnpike road, and the coach and postmasters conveying passengers on it. In this case, they would receive the tolls only—the owner of the steam power and carriages the fares or remuneration for conveyance; and it would be of course the interest of the company to raise the tolls to the maximum, or as near to it as the competition of the ordinary mode of travelling would allow. On the other hand, the company may avail themselves of the latter clause, and unite both the characters of owners of the way and carriers on it—they will then receive both the tolls and fares. In both cases, the persons or owners of goods conveyed must pay both the tolls and the fares; but in the latter, the company would be the first and last receivers of both; they would be charged as well as paid in one undistinguished sum; there could be no division; and supposing the company to be the only carriers, there could be no necessity for fixing any rate of toll at all; the whole payment might just as well be considered as fare. This appears, in fact, to be the existing state of things. But the statute (section 157,) has provided, that when the proprietors shall convey for their own profit, a separate account shall still be kept, shewing the amount of tolls which would have been received by them, merely for the use of the railway, if such conveyance had been by other parties, to which account the overseers of the parish shall have access during the first fourteen days in July and January in every year; but the act makes no provision for such an account being kept, and open to the same inspection, when other parties do, in fact, convey on the railway, where it would be equally necessary. It may be thought, that the framers of the act did not seriously contemplate, what, in truth, has not happened, and probably never will happen, that any parties but the company would ever become carriers on the railway. By the second act, which passed in 1837, this 157th section is referred to, as if it directed that the separate accounts should be kept in both cases and be open to inspection; and the neglect to keep it, or the refusal to permit its inspection, is subjected to the very heavy penalty of 300*l.*, and 50*l.* per diem for its continuance. The effect of this clause on the argument, we must consider in the sequel. By the 172nd section of the first act, all persons have free liberty to use the railway with carriages properly constructed, on payment only of the rates, tolls, and sums demanded by the company, and subject to the rules and regulations which they shall from time to time make; the construction of such carriages must also be agreeable to the order of the company, and approved by their engineer or agent: but although the railway itself is thus under certain qualifications thrown open to the public as a highway, no corresponding provision appears to have been made with regard to warehouses, wharfs, stations, or landing-places. Both of the statutes before mentioned contain powers for the purchase of forty additional acres, eighty in the whole, for the erection of additional stations, yards, wharfs, warehouses, and other similar erections and conveniences for receiving, depositing, loading, and unloading goods, and other purposes connected with the undertaking. But as to these lands, neither statute gives the public any right of access, or user, adverse to the company, and the use, for anything that appears, might be denied to any individual desiring to become a carrier on the railway.

These are the material facts and provisions which the case states, and to these we are now to apply the rule of rating prescribed by the 6 & 7 Will. 4. c. 96. The 3 & 4 Vict. c. 89, was referred to in the argument; but it has in truth little or no bearing on this question. It prohibits the rating of any inhabitant as such inhabitant, in respect of his ability derived from the profit of stock in trade, or any other property, to the relief of the poor; but it expressly leaves unaffected the liability of any occupier of lands or houses to be taxed under the provisions of the 43 Eliz. and the 13 & 14 Car. 2. Under the 6 & 7 Will. 4. c. 96, the rate must be made on an estimate of the "net annual value," and that value is declared to be "the rent at which the hereditaments might reasonably be expected to let from year to year, free of all usual tenant's rates and taxes, and tithe commutation rent-charges, if any, and deducting the probable annual amount of repairs, &c., if any, necessary to maintain them in a state to command such rent." To this enactment is added a proviso, that nothing in effect shall be construed to alter or affect the principle, according to which different kinds of hereditaments were at the time of its passing by law rateable.

The argument for the company may be stated shortly; it is clear, and, if it be applicable to the circumstances, convincing. It is, that in order to apply the statute, it is always necessary to suppose the property in respect of which the rate is imposed, let from year to year. The portion of the railway in the respondent parish, must, therefore, be supposed to be so let; and in order to estimate the rent, it must be asked, what the tenant would take by the demise? The answer to which would be, the portion of the railway itself, and the perception of the tolls as before fixed by the company. He would have a right to place his own carriages on the railway, not by virtue of the demise, but in common with all the world. The gross rent, therefore, would be something less than the amount of the tolls, by the allowance of a tenant's profits; and after making from these the statutable deductions, the residue will be the net annual value on which the rate is to be imposed. If, because the lessee in occupation should place carriages on the railway, and derive therefrom a profit, you are to rate him in respect of that profit, you would equally rate any other carrier using the railway, but having no interest in it; for the share in the case of the lessee is not referable to his occupation under his demise: that, therefore, would be in violation of the statute. We forbear to notice at present the subsidiary parts of the argument. It is obvious, that the case here supposed, which is that of a lessee in exclusive perception of the tolls on a railway, practically open to rival carriers, is one very different in fact from the case before us—one, moreover, which not only has not occurred, but, from the nature of things, it may be safely said never can occur. The supposition of a lease of a portion of a railway, without any demise of the stations, warehouses, approaches to it, or any provision for the use of them, is merely absurd. Such a lessee would be a mere toll-collector for the company, without even, as it should seem, any convenient mode of collecting toll. The supposition, again, of a fair competition of carriers on the same railway, is practically absurd. If all difficulties were removed as to stations, warehouses, &c., and all these were supposed as much laid open to the public as the railway itself, the very nature of the mode of conveyance forbids a fair competition of rival carriers. But how can we suppose this competition possible with the company, now the carriers; or, indeed, any free use of the railway, even by a private carriage, the company retaining the independent occupation and controul over all the existing approaches? Nay, a lease which should include the stations, warehouses, and approaches, and place the lessee, as to the extent of occupation, in the same position exactly in which the company now are, would not be without its difficulty, for the act is framed, whether quite effectually or not, with some regard to the interests of the public as well as of the company. The travelling and conveyance by carriages, drawn or propelled by locomotive engines, are attended with peculiar and very alarming risks, and many regulations of police, therefore, are enacted, which the company are charged to enforce: and it is very questionable whether the lessee could be by them delegated as to this trust, while it is certain that the company out of possession could not discharge the duties so conveniently or perfectly as they now can. These are considerations which make us pause in giving our assent to the arguments which suggest them.

The proviso in the 6 & 7 Will. 4. declares, that the principles of rating are not to be altered or affected by it. It is, therefore, important to consider, how, under the circumstances stated in the case, the company would have been rated if that act had not passed. They would then have been found occupying buildings and lands on an entire line of railway, and carrying on a trade, not merely therein and thereon, but thereby,—a trade inseparably connected with such buildings and such lands,—a trade which could have no existence without the buildings and lands, and but for which, the buildings would not have been erected or occupied; and for the using of which, in a great measure, the lands themselves are occupied in a particular manner. The profits of this trade would be included in the fares received for the conveyance of goods and passengers; and the question would be, whether that profit ought, in any or in what degree, to affect the rateable value of the lands. There is a class of cases often cited, which have established the principle on which this question is to be answered: we allude, among others, to The King v. St. Nicholas Gloucester (14), and The King v. Bradford (15). In the first, a steelyard, part of a machine, in a street leading by a house, was in the house; sums were paid by persons for weighing their waggons and carts, but those persons were not compellable to weigh them. Without this profit, the house was worth 5*l.* a year; this profit was worth about 40*l.*, and this, after due deductions, was included in the rate, as embracing the rateable value of the house; and the Court thought rightly so. Lord Mansfield considered the house and machine as an entire thing:—"The principal purpose of the house," said he, "is for the weighing,—the steelyard is the most valuable part of the house." "If," said Willes, J., "a billiard table stands in a house, and the house should, in respect of such table, let at a higher sum, it is rateable, while the table continues there and it is so let, at the advanced rent." Buller, J. said, "There is an extraordinary profit arising from the modification of the enjoyment. The only question, therefore, is, whether a man shall be rated for the property he has. If a house to-day is let for 30*l.* a year, and to-morrow, if turned into a shop, would let for 50*l.*, when it is turned into a shop it shall be rated at 50*l.*" The Court clearly regarded neither the nature of the source of profit, nor its permanence. They looked only to the existing value of the subject-matter of the rate—the house, and rated it according to that value.

This principle became so well established by the time The King v. Bradford came before the Court, that it was then sought not to deny it, but to evade it, by demising the canteen, and privilege of using it as such, and selling liquors therein, at two distinct rents, in the hope of successfully contending that the rate should be on the rent of the house only. The Court, however, looked to the substance and not to the form, and held both sums to be parts of one entire rent, paid for the occupation of the house and enjoyment of the advantages which for the time belonged to it, and for the time enhanced its value. As in the former case, people might cease to weigh at the engine, or the engine might be removed, so in this, the barrack might cease to be occupied, the customers be all removed, the licence to sell liquors might be withheld or forfeited; still, while these remained, and so the additional value was sustained, that value, it was held, must come into the rate. And as Le Blanc, Justice, expressly said, this was not rating the canteen man "in respect of the property of his trade, but only in respect of the rent which he paid." The occupation of the house was, indeed, necessary for the earning of the profits of the trade, but the house became more valuable because it enabled the profit to be earned. How it became valuable the overseer was not bound to inquire: finding it so, he was to rate the occupier according to that value.

We are now to consider a case on which much reliance was placed by the appellants; it has always been considered a leading one, and we think will not, on examination, be found to conflict with the preceding,—the case of The King v. the Trustees of the Duke of Bridgewater. The question there, was simply this:—whether, when the other occupiers of land in the parish were rated on four-fifths, not of the actual value, but of their rents taken as the value, the appellants ought, being the owners as well as the occupiers of land covered by water and used as a canal, from which the case found that they derived no profit, except from the tonnage of goods carried on it, to be rated at four-fifths of the gross receipts of such tonnage. The Court determined, as might have been expected, that equal allowance must be made in both cases. The rent, or sum at which the land will let, is the proper criterion; but the rent, they said, is not supposed here to be the value of the land, or of its produce, minus the expense of producing it, but the value after deducting the expense of cultivation and the farmer's subsistence. And on this supposition it is clear, that the rate was unequal. This was all that was decided. The trustees were also rated as the occupiers of warehouses, &c. adjacent to the canal; but as to these, by arrangement, no question came before the Court. They were also carriers on their own canal, and received freight as such for goods carried, of which the tonnage was included in the rate on the canal. The question being thus confined to the canal, and the trustees, as carriers, merely using it as any other person might have done and did their characters of occupiers of land, and of carriers were quite distinct. The tonnage strictly represented their profit in the one, the freight their profit in the other. This last was unconnected with the land, and did not add to its value, and was therefore properly excluded from the rate.

Now, let the principle which these cases establish be applied to the facts before us. If we wish to know whether the fares would have been properly included in the rate before the Assessment Act passed, we apprehend that, according to that principle, the only question to be asked would be, do they increase actually the value of the buildings and the lands on which the rate is to be made? If they do, and to whatever extent they do, to that extent, due allowance being always supposed, they must, directly or indirectly, be included. It would be no answer to say, that by law the railway is a highway—that all the world may carry goods and passengers on it; that it is an accident that the company alone monopolize all the trade, and that their monopoly may cease to-morrow. These circumstances, so far as they lessen the value of the buildings and land, would be proper to be taken into account as to the quantum of rate, but they would not affect the principle. But do the fares increase the value of the buildings and lands? No one can doubt it. Indeed, the case has answered that they do; that a higher rent for the buildings and lands would only be obtained in consequence of the facility afforded by the occupation of them to the carrying on of a lucrative trade, and earning the profit on those fares. The case thus supposed, would be exactly the same in principle as that of the house and engine, the house and billiard table, the house converted into a shop, the canteen; and it would be distinguished from the canal case, because there, by agreement, the warehouses, &c. were left out of consideration. The trustees were, in fact, only carriers in common with all the world, and, to the extent by which their trade on the canal did augment the value of the canal, it was brought into account. But it may be observed, that so far we have supposed the lands and buildings, the railway and the stations, &c., all in one parish and included in one rate. Will it make any difference in the principle, that the railway is necessarily in more parishes than one, and that we are now dealing with a parish in which, so far as appears, there is no station-house or other appendage to a railway? We think not. The subject-matter of rate in each particular parish is, no doubt, the beneficial occupation of the land there, and you cannot draw into the rate the value of the occupation of buildings elsewhere; yet, as you are to rate on the value in the parish, however occasioned, you cannot strike off any portion, because it would not have existed but for the occupation of buildings in another parish: still it exists, and in the parish, and therefore cannot escape the rate there. Suppose A. B. occupying an entire tenement, as an inn, in two parishes, C. and D; the lodging part of the building in C, and the tap and stables in D. There would be two rates; but could the owner say in C, "true it is that which I occupy here is de facto more valuable than a mere dwelling or boarding-house; but that is in a great measure because it is connected with the tap and stables in D; you must reject what is referable to that connexion, and rate me here as if I occupied an inn, without a tap or stables; you must suppose a demise only of the parts in C. and rate on the rent to be given only for what that demise would pass to me." The answer would be, if the occupation of the part is, in fact, of a certain increased value, whether that increase be derived in part, or in the whole, from the other, is immaterial; but wherever the valuable occupation is, there the occupier must be rated in respect of it. Then, in the present case, it would become a question of fact: is the land occupied in the respondent parish, by the railway, more valuable in fact to the occupier by reason of its occupation, together with the stations, &c. elsewhere, and the general purposes to which they, altogether, are applied? We suppose that, without doubt, this would be answered in the affirmative. Sever it from them, and three or four miles of railway, without approaches, leading from and to no place—having no connexion with any termini, one would be absolutely useless and unproductive; give them the connexion, which in fact exists, you give them a value increased indirectly from the stations, warehouses, and portions of the entire line in other parishes, and directly by the general traffic, to the profit derived from which every where they are indispensable contributors, and through one part of which they directly pass.

We are thus led to the conclusion, that if this case had been to be considered before the passing of the Parochial Assessment Act, the principle of rating on which the respondents have proceeded, would have been found the true one. Has, then, the statute made any difference in this respect? Now, without having recourse to the express language of the proviso, it is clear, that the enacting part introduced no new principle of rating. From the time of the decision in the case of The King v. the Trustees of the Duke of Bridgewater, before referred to, it has been understood generally, that, fraud apart, the rent, whether the occupier was the owner or only the tenant, in the former case supposed, in the latter real, was to be the criterion of rateable value. Both parties in the present case appeal equally to this criterion. The difference between them is, there being no real demise, what is to be brought into the supposed demise? and as to this, it is obvious that the statute can make no difference, the only question between the parties being, as to the proper mode of applying the admitted principle. In cases upon rating, in which the great object is to procure equality, and to bring every thing into contribution which ought to share the public burthen, it is essential, as Lord Ellenborough says in The King v. Bradford, to regard the substance and not the form. We must judge of things as they really are, and not as they appear to be; and, therefore, we are to consider here, whether this be not substantially one entire rent in respect of one entire subject, "although artificially divided into several payments." If we deal with this case in the same sensible and just way, we shall be at no loss to see, that to break up this entire line into parochial portions, and then, in imagination, sever all and each from the buildings which the occupiers occupy together with it, de facto exclusively and under the authority of the same statutes passed in furtherance of one great scheme, and then again, in imagination, to sever both from the traffic which the occupiers carry on, in, by, and throughout the whole, de facto exclusively, and for the using of which they have made, built, and occupied the whole, is to apply the principle of the statute in form and not in substance, and so as to lead to a mere evasion of its object. If it be said, that not only by law, but in fact, the company may lease this line and become mere carriers upon it, or that they may demise their buildings and carriages and cease to be traders, and become mere occupiers of the railway, the answer is, that the present rate, with which alone we have to deal, is not made on either of those states of facts, but when either shall arise, the rate must be altered to meet it; but that, even then, in all probability, the result to the parishes would be much the same. The rate would only become apportionable between two classes of occupiers, instead of being charged upon one.

But it is said, that the private statute concludes this question by the clause referred to in the earlier part of this judgment, directing, under a severe penalty, a certain account of the tolls to be kept, for the benefit of the overseers of the poor. It is asked, what object can be conceived for that proviso as to the tolls alone, unless the tolls alone be the funds with which the overseers have to do? Some answer was attempted to be given to this question in the argument, but not, we think, very successfully. The truth is, that the counsel for the appellants very much overrated its importance in the argument. The framers of this statute (which must not be dealt with, when we are talking of intention, exactly as if it were a public general act, but rather as the mode of carrying into effect the bargain between certain individuals and the public), no doubt, intended to limit the rate, if by law they could, to the tolls alone; and these clauses were inserted to effect the working of that mode of calculating the assessment, if it should prevail. We have already noticed an omission, remarkable enough, in the first act, and the awkward mode by which it is attempted to be supplied in the second; but we are not now construing these clauses, but only considering the collateral bearing on the argument which their insertion in the act has: all that need be said, therefore, is, that that bearing is not strong enough to prevent the application of the general principle of the law to the rating of the company's property in their occupation. We conclude, therefore, in favour of the respondent's principle. The sums are agreed to between the parties, and we decide in favour of the larger, by the application of admitted principles to the facts, thinking that that represents truly the actual rateable value of the land occupied by the company in the respondent parish.

Rate amended, the estimate being fixed at 3,800*l.*, the Court being of opinion in favour of the respondent parish on the first point, of the appellant company on the second.

1842. { THE QUEEN v. BENJAMIN PARKER, JOHN PARKER, AND Conspiracy—Sufficiency of Indictment—Arrest of Judgment.

A count charged a conspiracy, by divers false pretences, and subtle means and devices, to obtain from divers liege subjects (naming them) divers goods and merchandise, and to cheat and defraud the said liege subjects of the same. It then set out various overt acts, and concluded with stating, that the defendants, in manner and by the means aforesaid, and in pursuance of the conspiracy, unlawfully did obtain from the said persons (naming them) the goods and merchandise aforesaid, and did cheat and defraud them thereof.

Another count charged the conspiracy to be to obtain goods, &c. from divers liege subjects (omitting to name them, and also omitting the overt acts), but it was in other respects similar to the count above set out:—Held, that these counts were bad in arrest of judgment, for not stating to whom the goods, &c. belonged.

Indictment for conspiracy. — The first count stated, that B. P., J. P., and M., &c., being evil disposed persons, and contriving and intending to cheat and defraud divers of the liege subjects of our Lady the Queen of their goods and merchandises, on &c., in &c., at &c., unlawfully, wickedly, and fraudulently, did conspire, combine, confederate, and agree together among themselves, and with divers other persons to the jurors unknown, by divers false pretences, and subtle means and devices, to obtain and acquire, of and from divers liege subjects of our Lady the Queen, then carrying on business in the said city (London), to wit, Thomas Tam and David Law, of &c., in the said city, warehousemen and co-partners; and of Edmund Fennell and Richard Fennell, of &c., cotton yarn manufacturers and co-partners; and of John Holmes, of &c., lace-manufacturer; and of John Bradbury and Jeremiah Greatorex, of &c., general warehousemen and co-partners, divers goods and merchandise, of great value, to wit, &c., and to cheat and defraud the said liege subjects of the said goods and merchandise. The indictment then set out several overt acts, as to the obtaining goods from the parties above named, respectively, by Benjamin and John Parker, and the receipt of them by May, and concluded thus:—And so the jurors, &c. do say, that the said Benjamin Parker, John Parker, and May, in manner and by the means aforesaid, and in pursuance of the said unlawful, wicked, and fraudulent conspiracy, unlawfully and fraudulently did obtain from the said Thomas Tam and David Law, Edmund Fennell and Richard Fennell, John Holmes, and John Bradbury and Jeremiah Greatorex, respectively, the goods and merchandise aforesaid, and did cheat and defraud them thereof, to the great damage of the said Thomas Tam and David Law, Edmund Fennell and Richard Fennell, John Holmes, and John Bradbury and Jeremiah Greatorex, to the evil example of others in the like case offending, and against the peace, &c. The second count was similar, with the exception of omitting to state the overt acts. The third count charged the conspiracy to be, to cause it to be believed, that Benjamin Parker, who was then an uncertificated bankrupt, was not Benjamin Parker, but John Parker, and that he carried on an extensive shipping business, and was a man of large property, and had a large capital in the business, and by means of the said belief to obtain from divers liege subjects (not naming them), &c., divers goods, wares, and merchandises, of great value, to wit, &c., and to cheat and defraud the said liege subjects of the said goods and merchandise, to the evil example, &c., and against the peace, &c. The fourth count charged, that the two Parkers and May, being such evil disposed persons as aforesaid, afterwards, to wit, &c., unlawfully, wickedly, and fraudulently, did combine, conspire, confederate, and agree together among themselves, and with divers other persons to the jurors unknown, by divers false pretences, and subtle means and devices, to obtain and acquire of and from divers liege subjects of our Lady the Queen (not naming them), divers other goods and merchandise, of great value, to wit, &c., and to cheat and defraud the said liege subjects of the said goods and merchandise, to the great damage, &c., to the evil example, and against the peace.

This indictment, having been found at the Central Criminal Court, was removed by certiorari into this court, and tried at Guildhall, before Lord Denman, C.J., at the Sittings after Hilary term, when the defendant May was acquitted, and the defendants Parkers found guilty. Upon these defendants being brought up for judgment, in Easter term, a rule nisi was obtained to arrest the judgment for the insufficiency of the indictment, in not stating that the goods and merchandise, which the defendants were charged with conspiring to obtain, were the property of any person, it being consistent with the statement that they were the goods and merchandise of the defendants themselves.

Platt and Swann shewed cause.—The first count of the indictment contains a sufficient charge of conspiracy, and it is unnecessary to state, in terms, that the goods and merchandise were the property of the parties named in that count; as the necessary result of the averments is, that they were so. This is not analogous to an indictment for obtaining goods by false pretences, in which case it has been held, that the indictment must state to whom the goods belonged—The Queen v. Martin (1), as there, all the requisites of a charge of larceny must be included, so as to enable the prisoner to plead an acquittal or conviction in bar to an indictment for felony for the same offence—The Queen v. Norton (2).

[LORD DENMAN, C.J.—Is it not consistent with this count, that the goods were the goods of the defendants?]

The words “to cheat and defraud the said liege subjects of the said goods," excludes that supposition, and necessarily implies that they were the goods of the parties named. In The Queen v. Mackarty (3), it does not appear that the hats were described to be the property of Thomas Chowne, but the indictment was held sufficient.

[PATTESON, J.—There is no charge of conspiracy laid there in terms, but, both in the introductory part, and afterwards, the hats are said to be Chowne's, "intendentes Thomas Chowne, de diversis bonis, et merchandizis suis defraudare, insimul deceptivè bargainiraverunt ad commutandam, &c. quandam quantitatem vini, ipsius A. F, pro quadam quantitate, galeorum (Anglicè hats) ipsius Thomæ Chowne," &c.]

In Starkie's Criminal Pleading, 718, there is the form of an indictment for conspiring to charge a man with receiving stolen goods, and obtaining money for compounding the offence, but there is no statement of property in the money.

[LORD DENMAN, C.J.—The conspiracy there is falsely to charge the party.]

It is submitted, there might be a good charge of conspiracy to defraud divers persons.

[LORD DENMAN, C.J.—The particular persons are here named.]

Not in the fourth count, which merely charges a conspiracy to obtain from divers liege subjects divers goods and merchandise, and to cheat and defraud them of the same.

[PATTESON, J.—It seems difficult to distinguish this from The Queen v. Peck (4).]

But lastly, the jury having found the defendants guilty, it must now be taken that the goods belonged to the prosecutors, as the defendants could not cheat and defraud the prosecutors of the defendants' own goods. Such a supposition is excluded by the verdict; as proof by the defendants that the goods were their own, would have entitled them to an acquittal.

Humfrey and James (Montagu Chambers with them), contrà.—It has been conceded, that in general the property in the goods must be stated, as in larceny, and obtaining money or goods by false pretences—The Queen v. Martin, where the gist of the offence is obtaining the goods. This case cannot be distinguished.

[LORD DENMAN, C.J.—The words of the section relating to false pretences, are certainly very general, making the offence consist in the obtaining "by any false pretence, from any other person, any chattel, &c., with intent to cheat or defraud any person of the same;" but still, it has been held necessary to state the property.]

In The King v. Richardson (5), an indictment for a conspiracy to cheat and defraud a party of the fruits of a verdict, was held too general.

[PATTESON, J.—In The King v. — (6), it does not appear that the property was stated.]

The objection there was, that the particular goods were not specified, and probably only so much of the indictment as shewed that, appears in the report. In The Queen v. Wickham (7), an indictment for obtaining a note by false pretences was held bad, for not stating whose property the note was, and Patteson, J. stated, that, consistently with that indictment, the note might have been the defendant's own. The King v. Gill (8) is an authority for the defendants, as, although in that case a very general count for a conspiracy was held sufficient, yet the monies which the defendants were charged with conspiring to obtain, were expressly stated to be the monies of certain persons named. As a general test, an indictment will be bad, which is not sufficiently precise to enable a party to plead it as an acquittal or conviction upon a future indictment upon the same facts; and in that view, also, this cannot be supported.

LORD DENMAN, C.J.—I am of opinion, that the judgment must be arrested. The first count charges a conspiracy to defraud divers liege subjects, who are named. [His Lordship here read that count.] The first question is, whether this count contains a good charge of conspiracy; and, although doubts have been entertained as to the particularity requisite in indictments of this nature, yet where the charge is framed as this is, it appears to me to be essential to state whose goods have been laid hold of. Where the object charged is a conspiracy to obtain from certain persons named, divers goods and merchandise, and to cheat and defraud them of the same, and that they were obtained, and the parties defrauded, no precedent has been adduced to shew that an indictment is good which omits to state whose the goods were. The first count, therefore, is imperfect. Then as to the fourth count, the objection applies more forcibly, where the language is still more general. In The King v. Gill, where the indictment has been always considered of the most general kind, the monies which the defendants were charged with conspiring to obtain, were stated to be the monies of persons named. That is not so here.

PATTERSON, J.—The conspiracy charged is, by divers false pretences and subtle means, to obtain and acquire from certain persons named, divers goods and merchandise, and to cheat and defraud them of the same; not, with intent to cheat and defraud them of the same (though, perhaps, that would have made no difference), and afterwards states that goods were obtained. There is no statement to whom the goods belonged; and the charge does not, of necessity, import any offence, as it is consistent with an attempt by the defendants to obtain, by some means, their own goods, unlawfully detained from them. It is a charge to defraud divers persons, who are named, of divers goods and merchandise, without more. But then it is argued by Mr. Platt, that the use of the words, "to cheat and defraud," necessarily implies, that the goods belonged to the parties who, it is stated, were defrauded; but to hold that that is so, would be letting in a generality, which is not shewn ever to have been allowed.

WILLIAMS, J.—I am of the same opinion. It has been always thought, that in The King v. Gill, the extreme of laxity was allowed. But there the property was stated, and I believe there is an older case, of the same generality, but where the property was also stated. It is not so in this case; and I am inclined to look at this more strictly, from the general laxity of statement in these counts. [His Lordship referred to the indictment.] The statements, however, would upon the authorities have been sufficient, if a property in the goods had been stated. I see no reason why there should not be the same certainty in this respect, as in an indictment for larceny. As a general rule of criminal pleading, it is not sufficient to supply what is material, by intendment, but it should be accurately stated and laid.

 { SAME v. SAME.

Indictment for Felony and Misdemeanour, Proceeding upon—Election.

Where an indictment for a felony and an indictment for a misdemeanour had been found against the same person, in respect of the same subject-matter, and removed into this court, the Court refused to grant a rule, calling upon the prosecutors to elect upon which of the two indictments they would proceed to trial.

Wordsworth moved for a rule, calling upon the prosecutors of these indictments to shew cause why they should not elect upon which of the two they would proceed to trial. The affidavit of the defendant stated, that an indictment had been preferred against him at the Central Criminal Court, and found a true bill for a misdemeanour, for unlawfully disposing of certain French-Dutch bonds, alleged to have been intrusted to him as a banker, for safe custody, and deposited with him for securing advances made by him; and that at the same Sessions another indictment was preferred against him, and found a true bill, for stealing the said bonds, being the same bonds as described in the indictment for the misdemeanour, and in both alleged to be the property of the same persons; and that in the two indictments, the bonds were similarly described in every material particular, and were preferred and found at one and the same time, and were for one and the same identical offence, if any. It appeared that they had been removed into this court. The case of The King v. Doran (1) was relied upon.

LORD DENMAN, C.J.—We should require a very distinct authority, and a case clearly brought within it, to induce us to accede to such a suggestion as this; and even if such a case were shewn, I think we should be slow to do so. We cannot tell but that there was sufficient before the grand jury to warrant the finding of both bills. The case in Leach is not a sufficient authority for us to interfere in the way required.

1842. { THE QUEEN v. THE DIRECTORS, June 3. { ETC. OF THE POOR OF THE PARISH OF BRIGHTON.

Order of Removal—Appeal—Supersedeas—Costs.

An order of the removing Justices, obtained at the instance of the respondents, to supersede an order of removal, is too late, after the appellants have entered an appeal against the order.

But, where the appellants give neither notice nor grounds of appeal until after the removal of the paupers, and an entry of an appeal, and the respondents, on being afterwards served with grounds of appeal, seek to abandon their order, semble, that the Quarter Sessions should not give to the appellants the costs of the appeal.

Upon an appeal by the churchwardens and overseers of Henfield, in Sussex, from an order of Justices, for the removal of Elizabeth Lish, widow, and her two children, &c., from Brighton to Henfield, the Court of Quarter Sessions quashed the order, and further ordered the parish of Brighton to pay to the parish of Henfield, 9*l.* 18*s.* 8*d.* for costs, and the further sum of 7*l.* 17*s.* 6*d.* for the costs of the relief and maintenance of the paupers from the time of their removal to Henfield to the quashing of the order. A writ of certiorari having issued, this order was returned into court, and a rule was obtained to quash it for insufficiency.

The following facts appeared upon the affidavits:—The order of removal was made on the 17th of May 1841, against which, an appeal was entered and respited by the parish of Henfield, upon the 28th of June following, but notice of appeal was not given until the 1st of October. No notice of appeal having been received within twenty-one days, the paupers had been removed to Henfield in June. Upon the 4th of October, after receipt of notice of appeal, the parish of Brighton obtained an order of two Justices to supersede the order of removal, which, together with a notice of abandonment of the order, was served upon the 8th of October upon the parish of Henfield. It further appeared, that the parish of Henfield had paid to the parish of Brighton 2*l.*, for the relief and maintenance of the paupers, between the making of the order and their removal, but no offer of that sum appeared to have been made, when the notice of abandonment was served, or any sum in respect of the expenses of the appeal. Upon October the 18th, the appeal came on to be heard at the Sessions, when it was objected on behalf of the parish of Brighton, that the Quarter Sessions had no power to entertain the appeal, as the order of removal had been abandoned, of which the appellant parish had had notice. The Court, however, heard the appeal, and quashed the order with costs.

Sir F. Pollock and Creasy shewed cause against the rule to quash the order of Sessions.—The only question is, whether the Sessions had jurisdiction over this appeal. If they had, this Court will not review the decision which in their discretion they have come to. They had jurisdiction; and this case falls within the authority of The Queen v. the Justices of Middlesex (1). There the appeal having been entered before the order was abandoned, this Court compelled the Quarter Sessions to entertain it. Here also the appeal had been entered prior to the supersedeas, and it was then removed from the jurisdiction of the two Magistrates making the order.

[PATTESON, J.—No notice of intention to appeal is given within the twenty-one days, and the removal takes place. You enter and respite your appeal in June, to which the other side is no party, but you give no notice of appeal until October.]

[COLERIDGE, J.—Since the decision of The Queen v. the Justices of Middlesex, I understand, at the Middlesex Sessions, the Court have declined to give the appellants their costs, where the appeal has been entered, without notice of appeal having been first given: that seems a wholesome practice.]

That is in the discretion of the Court, and shews their jurisdiction. In The Queen v. the Justices of the West Riding (2), the order of supersedeas was prior to the entry of the appeal. Here too, an expense of 2l. had been incurred by Henfield, of which no tender was made by the parish of Brighton, when they abandoned the order. But it is also clear, from the authorities, that the removing Magistrates had no power to make an order of supersedeas at this stage of the proceedings.

Platt and Dowling, contra.—This was a manoeuvre upon the part of the appellants to get the order quashed, and conclude the respondents as between these two parishes, upon the merits. The appellants lead the other party to suppose that they intend to acquiesce in the order, by giving no notice of appeal within twenty-one days, and allowing the removal to take place, when, in the meantime, they have entered and respited an appeal behind the back of the respondents. The principle of the decision in The Queen v. the Justices of the West Riding, is applicable to this case.

[PATTERSON, J.—There the entry of an appeal was against an unexisting order; but here the order was in existence when the appeal was entered.]

Here, the respondents abandon the order a few days after notice of appeal, but if the practice of the appellants is to prevail, by thus entering an appeal, before giving notice, or grounds of appeal, they may effectually prevent the respondents from abandoning their order, as, after entry of an appeal, it is said to be too late.

LORD DENMAN, C.J.—The Queen v. the Justices of the West Riding is not applicable to this case, for the reasons pointed out, namely, that no appeal had there been entered, when the abandonment of the order took place. It has been rightly contended, that an entry of the appeal having taken place, while the order existed, the Sessions were bound to act. We cannot interfere with their discretion over the costs.

PATTERSON, J.—It is impossible to avoid the distinction that exists between this case and that against the Justices of the West Riding. This is really no more than a question of costs, and whether they should be allowed or not, with which we cannot interfere.

WILLIAMS, J.—I was not present when The Queen v. the Justices of the West Riding was decided, but I quite concur in the soundness of the decision. This case has no application to it. There, everything had been done by the respondents to abandon their order, prior to any entry of appeal, so there was no occasion for the appellants to go to the Sessions. But here, as argued by Mr. Creasy, the order of removal had been filed at the Sessions, who were then in possession of the appeal, and had power to deal with it.

COLERIDGE, J.—I quite agree with Mr. Creasy, that this is purely a question of jurisdiction. The Queen v. the Justices of Middlesex shews that. A good deal has been said about the hardship of the case on the side of the respondents—[His Lordship stated the facts.] The ultimate question between the parties, was one of costs only, and how the appeal was to be disposed of in that respect. It is a very common case to have that decided by the Sessions, where the parties cannot agree. But then the respondents, by procuring a special entry to be made, where the appeal is not disposed of on the merits, are enabled to avoid the consequences, which, it is said, must result from the course taken by the appellants.

Examination—Evidence, Insufficiency of.

Where an order of removal proceeds upon the ground that a former order was made between the same parishes, against which there was no appeal, that former order should be produced or accounted for upon the taking of the examinations. Where, therefore, the examinations merely stated the fact of such an order, and it was objected in the grounds of appeal, that that order was not produced, nor shewn to have been lost or destroyed,—this Court held that objection valid, and quashed the order of removal.

Upon an appeal made to the General Quarter Sessions for the town of Nottingham, in January 1841, against an order for the removal of Matilda Roper, widow, and two children, from the parish of St. Mary, Nottingham, to the parish of Mildenhall, in Suffolk, the Court confirmed the order, subject to the opinion of this Court, upon a case, of which the following are the material facts:—

The only examinations which were sent with the order, were those of Matilda Roper, the pauper, and Absalom Barnett.

Matilda Roper stated, "About fourteen years ago I was married to William Roper, who died two years ago, and by him I had two children, (naming them and their ages); about seven years ago, my husband's father, William Roper, a labourer, was, I believe, removed by order of Justices, from the parish of St. Mary aforesaid, to the parish of Mildenhall, in Suffolk, and I have not heard of him since; my said husband has not, since our marriage, to my knowledge, done any act by renting a tenement of 10*l.* a year, or otherwise, to gain a settlement, &c.

Absalom Barnett stated, that "William Roper, the father of Matilda Roper's said husband, was removed by order of Justices, from the parish of St. Mary aforesaid, on the 11th of June 1834, to the parish of Mildenhall aforesaid, against which order, there was no appeal."

By the grounds of appeal, it was objected, that the order and examinations were bad respectively on the faces thereof; that the order was made without any legal evidence; that the order of removal in the examinations mentioned was not produced, or shewn to have been lost or destroyed; that no settlement whatever appeared on the face of the examinations.

The question for the Court was, whether these objections ought to have prevailed. If they should have prevailed, then the orders of removal and of the Court of Quarter Sessions were to be quashed; but, if otherwise, the orders were to be confirmed.

Kelly and Whitehurst, in support of the order of Sessions.—The inquiry before the removing Magistrates, is an ex parte proceeding, and not like a cause in court; the rules, therefore, for the production of documents, which are either in the possession of the other side, or of a third party, are inapplicable, and ineffectual in this stage of the proceedings. What would be the best legal evidence upon a trial at Nisi Prius, cannot be looked for at the hands of the removing parish, when that evidence is in nowise under their controul, and they have no means of enforcing its production. Parol evidence of the former order will, under such circumstances, be the best evidence. That former order would not be in the custody of the removing parish.

[COLERIDGE, J.—It does not appear by the case, that any endeavour was made by the parish of St. Mary, Nottingham, to procure the former order.]

If the proceedings were in a court, where notices between the parties, or a subpoena duces tecum to a third party could operate, it would be reasonable to require that all should be done to obtain the best evidence, before that of a secondary nature was admitted.

[PATTESON, J.—The removing parish here, is the same that obtained the former order of removal. Will not that order be with them?]

It would probably have been sent to Mildenhall, when the former removal took place.

B. Andrews and Byles, contra, were not called upon.

LORD DENMAN, C.J.—The presumption is, that the order would have remained with St. Mary, Nottingham, the removing parish. The form in 4 Burn's Justice, 934, edit. 1831, of a general order of removal, requires the removing parish to convey the parties, &c., out of their parish, to the parish removed to, and to deliver them to the churchwardens and overseers of that parish, "together with this our order, or a true copy thereof, at the same time shewing to them the original."

PATTESON, J., WILLIAMS, J., and COLERIDGE, J. concurred.

Orders quashed.

Weights and Measures—5 & 6 Will. 4. c. 63.—Inspector—General Warrant.

The statute 5 & 6 Will. 4. c. 63. s. 28, empowers a Justice, by a general warrant, to authorize an inspector of weights and measures to enter shops, &c., at all seasonable times, and examine weights and measures; and a special warrant is not necessary upon each occasion of entry.

Trespass for breaking and entering the plaintiff's house, and carrying away ten pewter pots.

Plea—Not guilty (by statute).

At the trial, before Gurney, B., at the Westminster Sittings, in this term, the following facts appeared:—The plaintiff was the keeper of a beer-shop in Drury Lane, and the defendant was inspector of weights and measures for the district No. 3, of the county of Middlesex, having been duly appointed by the Quarter Sessions, pursuant to the statute 5 & 6 Will. 4. c. 63 (1). On

* This case is reported by H. Horn, Esq.

(1) The following sections of this act are important:—

Sect. 17. enacts, that county Justices at General or Quarter Sessions, "shall determine the number of copies of the imperial standard weights and measures, which they shall deem requisite for the comparison of all weights and measures in use within their respective jurisdictions, and shall direct that such copies verified and stamped at the Exchequer, shall be provided for the use of the same, and shall fix the places at which such copies shall be deposited, and shall appoint a sufficient number of inspectors of weights and measures, for the safe custody of such copies, and for the discharge of the other duties hereinafter mentioned, and shall allot to such inspector a separate district, such district to be distinguished by a number or mark."

Sect. 19. gives the same powers to grand juries in Ireland.

Sect. 28. enacts, "That in England and Ireland it shall be lawful for every Justice of the Peace of any county, riding, or division, or of any city or town, and in Scotland for every sheriff, justice, or magistrate of any borough or town, or for any inspector authorized in writing under the hand of any Justice of the Peace in England and Ireland, or of any sheriff, justice, or magistrate in Scotland, at all seasonable times to enter any shop, store, warehouse, stall, yard, or place whatsoever within his jurisdiction, wherein goods shall be exposed or kept for sale, or shall be weighed for conveyance or carriage, and there to examine all weights, measures, steelyards, or other weighing machines, and to compare and try the same with the copies of the impe-

the 31st of August 1841, the defendant Reeves, accompanied by the other defendant, entered the plaintiff's beer-shop, and having examined, by the imperial standard, several pewter pots, used by him in his business, fixed upon three as being deficient in capacity, and seized and carried them away. The defendant's warrant, signed by a Middlesex Justice, and dated the 1st of December 1840, was put in and read. This instrument, after reciting the 28th section of the act, and that application for the authority of the Justice had been made by the defendant, proceeded thus: "I do hereby authorize him, the said H. P. Reeves, to enter, at all seasonable times, any shop, store, warehouse, stall, yard, or place whatsoever, within his jurisdiction, wherein goods shall be exposed or kept for sale, or shall be weighed for conveyance or carriage, and there to require the production of all weights, measures, steelyards, or other weighing machines, in possession of any person or persons in any such shop, store, warehouse, stall, yard, or place whatsoever, and to compare and try the same, with such copies of the imperial standard weights and measures provided under the authority of the act of 5 & 6 Will. 4. c. 63. Given," &c. Some evidence was also given of the pots being afterwards in a more battered state than they were at the time of the seizure. For the plaintiff, it was contended, that the warrant, being general in its terms, was illegal, and gave the defendant no authority to enter the plaintiff's house. Gurney, B., reserving the legal question for the consideration of the Court, directed them to consider the amount of damage sustained by the plaintiff, and on their finding a verdict for the plaintiff, with damages 2*l.* 6*s.*, reserved leave to the defendants to move to enter a verdict for them.

A rule having been obtained accordingly, Platt and Bovill shewed cause.—The warrant under which the defendants acted, was illegal and void, for it was general in its terms, instead of being a specific authority to them to enter the house of the plaintiff. The law condemns general warrants, and is jealous of intrusting subordinate officers with large discretionary power—4 Black. Com. 291. There ought to have been a specific warrant to enter the plaintiff's house, grounded upon information, as in the case of a search warrant. Again, the warrant is bad, since, if construed by the 28th section, on which it is founded, it would give the inspector power to act in any place within the jurisdiction of the Justice, that is, in any place within the county. For the words, "within his jurisdiction," apply to the Justice and not to the inspector, to whom a "separate district" is to be allotted by the 17th section. Another consequence of this is, that the inspector might not know the boundaries of the Magistrate's jurisdiction. Lastly, the jury were not directed to say whether the measures taken away were sufficient according to the standard.

Whitehurst, (R. V. Richards with him,) contra.—The legislature intended to give the inspector the same power of entering houses without notice, as is possessed by a leet jury, and have placed in the hands of the Magistrates the power of punishing him for misconduct. The object of the act would be defeated, if the inspector were compellable to notify his visit to the parties whose weights and measures were to be examined. The words, "within his jurisdiction," mean within the district of the inspector, and the warrant gives him no authority to act beyond those limits. Secondly, it was not necessary for the Judge to leave to the jury the question, whether the measures were actually false; it is sufficient, if they appeared to the inspector to be false—Willcock v. Windsor (2). The defendant acted bonâ fide, and is entitled to protection—Cann v. Clipperton (3).

LORD ABINGER, C.B.—We will consult my Brother Gurney as to his having directed the jury on the question of the deficiency of the measures; but I think the measures must have been deficient, or the jury would have found larger damages. It is clear, that general warrants are void, but if the legislature think fit to authorize them, there is to that extent a repeal of the common law. At all events, it is clear, that in this case the legislature intended to give to inspectors the same power over weights and measures, as they gave to Justices, for the same words are used, and no distinction is made between them. The defendant in this case, therefore, was sufficiently authorized by the act. And with regard to the alleged improbability that the legislature would give such large powers to inspectors, I may observe, that the authority in question is not confined to county Magistrates, but is extended to the Justices of towns, in whose case the argument might be used with equal force as in the case of inspectors. The inspector is appointed in Quarter Sessions with a limited district, but his powers are not confined to any particular house to be named in his warrant. He possesses the same authority as a leet jury, and may enter shops and warehouses at all seasonable times.

PARKE, B.—The only point for present consideration is, whether the general authority given by the Magistrate to this defendant to enter houses and examine the sufficiency of weights and measures, be within the 28th section of the act. That section empowers the inspector to enter certain premises, and carry away such weights and measures as shall be light or otherwise unjust. Now, we need not enter into the question, how far the defendant is protected by having acted bonâ fide, or whether it was incumbent on him to shew that the measures seized by him were actually deficient; because, if the sufficiency of the measures in this case were left to the jury, or were so understood to be left by the Court and the counsel, or if it were waived, we need not grant a new trial; although, if it be otherwise, it may be necessary to send the case to another jury. Confining myself, however, to the 28th section, I think the general authority given by a Justice of the Peace to the inspector to enter houses at all seasonable times, is sufficient. No doubt, there is some obscurity as to whether the phrase, "within his jurisdiction," refers to the Justice or the inspector; but we need not determine that point, as in this case the jurisdiction of the Magistrate and the inspector coincide. Nor do I think, upon consideration, that much weight belongs to the ingenious argument of Mr. Bovill, that the inspector may not know the extent of the Magistrate's jurisdiction, for if we look to the words of the act, it will be clear that the "jurisdiction" referred to, although not used in its strict sense, is that of the sheriff, justice, or inspector, all of whom, at seasonable times, are authorized to enter shops, &c., and compare the weights and measures by a certain standard. Mr. Platt suggests, that great inconvenience would follow from putting this construction on the statute. He contends, that there ought to be a specific warrant in each case. Would he also contend, that there must be a summons, and that cause must be shewn against the proposed search? It is plain, that such a course as this would be a signal for every one who had false measures in his possession, to take such means that they should not be found in his house. Mr. Platt urges that this warrant is analogous to a search warrant, and that, therefore, there ought to be an affidavit of there being just grounds of suspecting that false weights are in the house. But such affidavit could seldom be obtained; the inspector would rarely be able to make it; and it is not too much to say, that if it were required, the statute would become a dead letter. The intention of the act of parliament is, that the shop-keeper's measures should be inspected when he least expects a visit for that purpose. The meaning of the 28th section is, that the Justices shall, by their warrant, appoint a trustworthy person to search all suspected houses at seasonable times. I think, therefore, that the rule for entering a verdict should be made absolute, subject to the question as to the sufficiency of the weights and measures having been left to the jury, or to its having been waived, on the understanding that the simple question to be decided was, the validity of the warrant.

(2) 3 B. & Ad. 43.

(3) 10 Ad. & El. 582; a. c. 8 Law J. Rep. (n.s.) Q.B. 268.

ALDERSON, B.—I am of the same opinion. The power given to the inspector was meant to be a general power, and the security against abuse was intended to consist in the discretion of the party who was substituted for the Justice: that is, that as the Justice was at liberty to enter houses at all seasonable times, he should be able to communicate the same power to the inspector, by a warrant in writing. It seems to me, that the statute 35 Geo. 1. c. 102. throws much light upon the construction of the present act. There, the inspectors who are directed to be appointed by the Justices, were to take an oath for the due performance of their duty, and once a month, at periods not fixed beforehand, were to visit shops, to examine weights and measures. It is not likely that a subsequent statute made in pari materid, would make a specific warrant necessary for each visit, when, under the old act, the same class of persons could enter once a month without any notice whatever. It seems to me, that as, under the former statute, the inspectors might enter in the day time, so, under the present act, the Justices might themselves enter, and give others the same power. It would be a monstrous thing, that search could be made only after information given, when it is plain that such information could seldom or never be obtained. I think, therefore, that this general form of warrant was sufficient, and that the defendants were authorized to enter.

ROLFE, B.—I agree in thinking, that the former act throws much light upon the present.—[His Lordship here read the 2nd section of the 35 Geo. 3. c. 102.] The act 5 & 6 Will. 4. has mitigated the former statute, by requiring the inspector's visits to be made, not monthly, but at such times as the Justices shall direct. The argument, that these warrants amount to general warrants, is quite out of the question; and as to requiring a special warrant, it is clear, that if that were made necessary, the statute could never be acted upon. Mr. Platt asks why a special appointment of inspectors at the Quarter Sessions is made necessary, if a special warrant is not required. The answer is, that the inspector is appointed, under the 17th section, for the performance of various duties, which are mentioned in the subsequent parts of the act, as, for instance, to attend at certain market towns, for the purpose of stamping weights and measures; and it may well be, that before the party is to have the right of entering houses, the additional authority of a Justice may be required by the act. This observation, although applicable to England, is more so as regards Ireland, where the inspectors are appointed by the grand jury, a body so peculiarly constituted as to make it necessary for inspectors appointed by them to have the authority of a Magistrate, vouching for their responsibility, before they can be allowed to enter houses. I may be wrong in my construction of the intention of the legislature, but ita lex scripta est, and we must uphold it. I think, therefore, that the inspector was authorized, and that the only remaining question is, whether the jury were rightly directed, as to the sufficiency of the measures.

Poor-Rate—Theatre—Private Box.

The lessee of a private box at a theatre is rateable for the relief of the poor in respect of it, under a local act, by which the rate is to be laid on every person who shall inhabit, hold, occupy, possess, or enjoy any land, house, shop, wharf, warehouse, or any other building, tenement, or hereditament: although the proprietors of the theatre are also rated for the theatre.

Miss Angela Burdett Coutts, having appealed against a rate made on or about the 16th of April 1840, for the relief of the poor of the parish of St. Martin in the Fields, and for other purposes chargeable thereon, whereby the appellant was assessed to the said rate, the Court of General Sessions for the county of Middlesex amended the said rate by consent, by striking out the said assessment, subject to the opinion of the Court of Queen's Bench, on the following

By the rate in question, the proprietors of the Theatre Royal, Drury Lane, were assessed as follows: "The Theatre Royal, Drury Lane Company, for the Theatre Royal, 1,800*l*." And the appellant as follows: "Angela Burdett Coutts, for box in Ditto, 100*l*." The appeal was brought in respect of the above assessment; and it was agreed, that the box in question is in the parish of St. Martin in the Fields, and that the rate was duly made, allowed, and published pursuant to a local act of parliament, 10 Geo. 3. c. 75, whereby the churchwardens, overseers of the poor, vestrymen, constables, and other ancient inhabitants of the parish of St. Martin, in vestry assembled, are empowered and authorized to make rates or assessments, for and towards the relief of the poor, and for the several purposes of the act, "upon all and every person or persons who do or shall inhabit, hold, occupy, possess, or enjoy any land, house, shop, wharf, warehouse, or any other building, tenement, or hereditament, or any other person or persons who, by law, is or are chargeable and assessable for and towards the relief of the poor."

By indenture of the 21st of February 1795, Richard Brinsley Sheridan and Thomas Lindley, proprietors of the New Theatre Royal, Drury Lane, in consideration of 6,000*l*., paid by the late Thomas Coutts, Esq. did grant, bargain, sell, and demise, for the term of 100 years, at a peppercorn rent, unto him, the said Thomas Coutts, his executors, administrators, and assigns, all that box, &c. on the south side, or Prince's side, of the theatre, being directly and immediately underneath the box called the stage-box, or His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales's Stage-Box; which said box thereby demised or expressed so to be, contained, in length, from east to west, 10 feet and 10 inches, a little more or less, and in depth, from the front to the door, 7 feet 11 inches, a little more or less; and also all that vacant space or passage, containing 8 feet 4 inches, or thereabouts, lying immediately between the back part of the same box thereby demised, and the wall of the theatre; the said vacant space so lying behind the said box to be made and converted into a room, and fitted up, and furnished by, and at the expense of, the said Richard Brinsley Sheridan and Thomas Lindley, their executors, administrators, and assigns, for the sole and exclusive use of the said Thomas Coutts, his executors, administrators, and assigns, as thereafter mentioned and expressed, and also full and free liberty of ingress, egress, and regress, way, and passage, to and for the said Thomas Coutts, his executors, administrators, and assigns, and his and their company, friends, and attendants, and any other person or persons, by his or their order or authority, or who should be intrusted with or have the possession of a key of the said box or room, from time to time, and at all times, at his and their free will and pleasure, to go and return to and from the said box or room, over and across and along the stage of the said theatre, by and through a private door, separate from that of the performers, and to have his and their carriages stand, and take up and set down at the said private door; and all rights, privileges, and appurtenances whatsoever to the said box, room, and premises thereby granted and demised, or expressed so to be, belonging, or in anywise appertaining, with free ingress and regress at any other usual or convenient door or place, into and from the said theatre. The said indenture also contained covenants by the said Richard Brinsley Sheridan and Thomas Lindley, within two months, to cause the said vacant space to be converted into a room, and completely finished and fitted up with proper and necessary conveniences, as the said Thomas Coutts should desire, and to deliver the key of the said room, when finished, to the said Thomas Coutts, &c.; a covenant for quiet enjoyment, and a covenant for exclusive enjoyment by the said Thomas Coutts and his friends of the said box and room, and for repairing and ornamenting the same by the said Richard Brinsley Sheridan and Thomas Lindley; and there was also a proviso, whereby it was provided, that the said Thomas Coutts, his executors, administrators, or assigns, should be at liberty at any time to surrender the said box, &c. or one moiety thereof; and if he should surrender the whole, or one moiety thereof, he, his executors, administrators, or assigns, should receive, out of the profits of the theatre and premises, or there should be paid to him or them, by the lessors, &c. for the residue of the term of 100 years, an annuity of 500*l.* or 250*l.* per annum. The said indenture having been duly executed, the said Thomas Coutts took possession of and occupied and enjoyed the said box, pursuant to the terms, conditions, and covenants of the said indenture until the year 1809, when the said New Theatre Royal Drury Lane was destroyed by fire. In the year 1812, a new theatre was erected, under the powers of two acts of the 50 and 52 Geo. 3, by which the proprietors of the theatre were incorporated, and, on the 27th of August 1812, an indenture was executed between the committee of the proprietors and the said Thomas Coutts, by which, after reciting the destruction and re-erection of the theatre, under the provisions of the acts 50 and 52 Geo. 3, and the power of the said committee to grant leases of any boxes in the new theatre, in the nature of private boxes, with an exclusive right of admission to such boxes on every night of theatrical performance, and reciting the claims of the said Thomas Coutts to a private box in the said new theatre, and the agreement of the committee, that in lieu and compensation of all claims in respect of such former box so purchased by the said Thomas Coutts, and in consideration of 3,000*l.*, to be paid by the said Thomas Coutts, a private box should be granted and demised to him, his executors, &c., it was witnessed, that in pursuance of the said agreement, and in consideration of the premises, and of 3,000*l.* to the said committee paid by the said Thomas Coutts, the said committee, in pursuance of the powers to them given by the said act of parliament, and of all other powers enabling them in that behalf, did bargain, sell, demise, and lease to the said Thomas Coutts, his executors, &c. all that newly erected whole and entire box, in the said newly erected Theatre Royal, Drury Lane, situate and being on the ground tier next adjoining to the stage on the prompter side of the same theatre, and also the lobby and the small room adjoining and communicating therewith, situate behind the said newly erected private box, and the free and exclusive use and enjoyment thereof, and of every part thereof respectively, together with the full and free liberty of ingress, egress, and regress, way, and passage into and from the said theatre, &c. every evening upon which any public entertainment should be exhibited, to and for the said Thomas Coutts, his executors, administrators, and assigns, or for any number of persons by his or their order or authority, not exceeding in any one night or time of performance, the number of eight, and who should be entitled to admission thereto upon producing to the door keeper at the private box of the said theatre a ticket belonging to such box, or a note or order in writing, under the hand of the said Thomas Coutts, his executors, &c. for his, her, or their admission respectively, and also all rights, &c. excepting and always reserving out of his demise unto the said company of proprietors, their successors and assigns, free liberty at all times to paint, decorate, and make such alterations in the front of the said private box, for the purpose of making the same uniform and like the front of the other private boxes in the said theatre, as the committee of management for the time being of the said company of proprietors should from time to time think proper; and excepting always and subject to such regulations from time to time to be made by such committee of management for the time being as should be made by them respecting other private boxes in the said theatre, but so as such regulations did not prevent or hinder the said Thomas Coutts, his executors, &c. from enjoying the exclusive liberty and use of the said private box and room, with all rights and privileges thereto belonging or appertaining, in the manner thereby intended and expressed to be granted and demised, to hold the same, except as before excepted, unto the said Thomas Coutts, his executors, &c. from the 1st of October then next, for eighty-two years and a quarter, to commence from the 29th of September then next, yielding and paying the yearly rent of one penny. The said last-mentioned indenture also contained covenants for quiet enjoyment, and by the lessors, at their own expense, during the said term, to preserve the said box and room thereby demised for the sole and exclusive use and accommodation of the said Thomas Coutts, his executors, &c. and such other persons as therein-before named, and to repair, ornament, and finish the same in the same manner as the private boxes and rooms adjoining thereto; and in case of destruction by fire of the said new theatre, or any other theatre to be erected on the site thereof, or that it should be necessary to make any alterations in the same, which should interfere with the full and free use and enjoyment of the said box, room, and premises, then, upon the re-edification of such theatre, and in the mean time and during the progress thereof, a box and retiring room, with all proper conveniences, in the said theatre, or such newly erected theatre, and also a box, with such accommodations as should be in the power of the said company to provide in such other theatre as, during the erection thereof, should be opened for public performances, should be appropriated for the exclusive use of the said Thomas Coutts, his executors, &c. in lieu of the said box, room, and premises thereby demised, and be held by him and them under the same privileges as were granted in respect of the said demised box and room and premises. The indenture also contained a covenant from the said Thomas Coutts, his executors, &c. not to line or hang the front of the said box, or do anything to interfere with the uniformity of the said theatre.

After the execution of the said last-mentioned indenture, the said Thomas Coutts took possession of the said last-mentioned box, room, and premises, and, according to the terms, conditions, and covenants of the said indenture last mentioned, the said Thomas Coutts, during his life, had the use and enjoyment thereof, and the said appellant, at the time of the making of the rate, had, and now has, the use and enjoyment thereof, according to the terms, covenants, and provisions of the said indenture. The said box and room are placed on a level with the stage, and form a component part of the theatre, which is in the occupation and under the management of parties to whom it is let by the company of proprietors. The occupiers and managers have access to the said box and room from the other parts of the building, by internal doors, of which they keep the keys. The approach to the box and room from the street, is by an outer door, which opens to a staircase, by which staircase persons going to other private boxes in the theatre, some of which are let nightly by the occupiers and managers of the theatre, ascend to those boxes. The outer door, next to the street, and also the staircase, are under the controul of the occupiers and managers of the theatre, and the door is closed and fastened by them at all times, excepting during the hours of performance. The performances usually continue from 7 o'clock in the evening, until 12 at night. The question for the opinion of the Court was, whether the appellant was liable by law to be assessed to the said rate, in respect of the said box. If the Court should be of opinion that she was, the order of Sessions to be quashed: if otherwise, to be affirmed.

The case was argued in Easter term, this year, by

position of a lodger, and, therefore, not rateable, and cited 1 Nolan, 176, The King v. Watson (1), The King v. Ditchet (2), The King v. Agar (3).

Cur. adv. vult.

LORD DENMAN, C.J. now delivered the judgment of the Court.—The question is, whether Miss Burdett Coutts is liable to be rated under an act of 10 Geo. 3. c. 75, in respect of a private box at the Theatre Royal, Drury Lane. This box was demised to the late Mr. Coutts, under an act for rebuilding the theatre, for a long term of years. The lease granted an exclusive right to occupy the box, and a small room adjoining, whenever any performance took place; and a private entrance to the same, in common with other private boxes. [His Lordship then read the words of 10 Geo. 3. c. 75, set out in the case.] We are of opinion, that the box in question is a tenement, within the meaning of this act, and that it is held and occupied by the appellant, so as to make her liable to be rated. The words are too large to admit of any other construction; and none of the cases referred to at the bar lead to any different conclusion. It is urged, that the proprietors are rateable for the whole theatre; and that, if the appellant be also rated, the same premises will in effect be rated twice over; but this consequence by no means follows. The proprietors are rated in respect of their general possession of the theatre, of which the box in question forms a very small part, the rent being only one penny per annum, and may fairly be considered as not taken into account in the rating: whereas the appellant is rated in respect of this particular box. If, however, the consequence did follow, it would shew only, that the proprietors were rated too highly, not that the appellant was not rateable at all, which is the question submitted to us (8). We think that the order of Sessions must be quashed.

Appeal, Grounds of—Insufficiency—Settlement.

The grounds of appeal set up a settlement subsequent to that contained in the order and examination, and stated, "that the father of the pauper, in 1832, rented a house and orchard at Easington, in the parish of Easington, in the county of Warwick, from William Marshall, servant to Evelyn John Shirley, Esq., of the same place, at the rent of 10l. a year and upwards, and occupied the same under such renting or hiring from that time until Michaelmas 1836, and paid the rent for the same; and also was assessed to, and paid the poor-rates for the same, during the whole of that time." It was objected, that the statement was insufficient, for not alleging that the father resided forty days in Easington. The Quarter Sessions held the statement sufficient, subject to the opinion of this Court, which held the statement to be insufficient, and quashed the order of Sessions.

An order for the removal of John Taylor, his wife, and two children, from Old Stratford to Whatcote, both in the county of Warwick, was quashed by the Court of Quarter Sessions, upon appeal, subject to the opinion of this Court upon the following

CASE.

The appellants admitted a settlement by birth of the pauper in the appellant parish; and set up a subsequent settlement of his father in the parish of Easington, by renting a tenement, and a derivative settlement from him to the pauper. The grounds of appeal as applicable to this part of the case, were as follow :—And also that the said John Taylor, the father of the said John Taylor, the pauper, in November 1832, rented a house and orchard at Easington, in the parish of Easington, in the county of Warwick, from William Marshall, servant to Evelyn John Shirley, of the same place, at the rent of 10*l.* a year and upwards, and occupied the same under such renting or hiring from that time until Michaelmas 1836, and paid the rent for the same, and also was assessed to and paid the poor-rates for the same during the whole of that time." It was contended, for the respondents, that this statement of the grounds of appeal was insufficient, inasmuch as it was not stated therein that John Taylor, the father, resided in the parish of Easington, for forty days, during the time of his occupation of the premises mentioned therein ; but the Court of Quarter Sessions were of opinion, that this statement of the grounds of appeal was sufficient. One of the questions for the opinion of the Court was, whether this statement of the grounds of appeal was sufficient.

Daniel and Gale, in support of the order of Sessions.—It sufficiently appears by the statement of the grounds of appeal, that the requisites of the statutes relating to settlements by renting tenements, were complied with. It is not, indeed, stated in terms, that the pauper's father resided forty days in Easington, but that fact will be included in the word "occupied," as the Sessions have found it was. If this Court should decide that, on account of the omission of the word "residence," the appellants were not at liberty to prove this settlement, or, in other words, that the statement of the grounds of their appeal is informal and insufficient, then the order of removal on the birth settlement will be confirmed, and the appellants will be concluded from litigating this question with the present removing parish, or any other. An insufficient order, or examination on the part of the respondents, has no such result, as it only operates between the two contending parishes ; nor are the respondents concluded on the merits by an informality, as they may procure a special entry of the grounds for quashing the order to be made for their protection. In The Queen v. the Justices of the West Riding (1), the Court below having decided, that the word "occupation" did not necessarily imply residence, this Court refused to interfere with that decision ; and for the same reason they will not interfere here, where the Quarter Sessions have found that residence is included.

[LORD DENMAN, C.J.—The Sessions have only so found, subject to our opinion.]

But, secondly, a notice of appeal must be read with reference to the directions respecting it, contained in section 81. of the Poor Law Act. It is submitted, that that section has been complied with. The "grounds" of appeal are to be sent. Are those grounds to be stated with such absolute precision as to preclude every intendment against them ?

[COLERIDGE, J.—Suppose this were an examination, and in the grounds of appeal it was not objected, that there was no statement of residence, would not the respondents satisfy the word "occupy," without proving any residence ?]

That might be, but this is the appellant's statement, who is to send the grounds of his appeal only, and it would seem that in construing thus strictly the notice of appeal, as distinguished from the examination, the act of parliament has been departed from. This section does not require any particulars to be sent, though at the Sessions it would be incumbent upon the appellants to prove a settlement. The appellant is in a worse situation in this respect than the respondent, as all defects of form in the order or examination, must, to be taken advantage of, be made grounds of appeal, and an opportunity is thus given to abandon the order, or obtain a special entry ; but the appellant has no intimation of any defects in his statement, until the hearing of the appeal, when they cannot be amended.

Mellor and Spooner, contra, were not called upon.

LORD DENMAN, C.J.—The Quarter Sessions have granted a case, and asked our opinion upon this matter. They thought the statement of the grounds of appeal sufficient, subject to our consideration. The grounds of appeal are intended to shew a settlement subsequently gained to that upon which the removal proceeded. But they do not shew a settlement subsequently gained. It is a correct principle to establish, that where either party sets up a settlement, they shall distinctly shew a settlement, and what that settlement is. They are not to be at liberty to use equivalent words, which may be the means of introducing fraud. By adhering strictly to this rule which we have laid down, much expense will be saved, and sometimes, perhaps, against the inclinations of the parties. It is urged by Mr. Daniel, that if this statement be held insufficient, there will be a difference in the mode of dealing with this case and that of The Queen v. the Justices of the West Riding; but the way in which this case is submitted to us, gets rid of that apparent difference.

Poor Rate—Rateability—Beneficial Occupation.

A tenant is rateable for the beneficial occupation of land, although such occupation be not profitable.

Therefore, where, by a local act of parliament, the burden of the maintenance of a sea-wall and drains, in a certain district, was fixed on particular lands in it, called "Third Acre Lands," to the amount of their full rent, if necessary, and the Sessions found, that in point of fact, the whole of the gross estimated rental of a farm (owned and occupied by a tenant who had given no purchase-money for it, in consequence of this liability,) was exhausted by this expense:—Held, that the tenant was nevertheless rateable in respect of the farm.

By a rate made for the relief of the poor of the parish of Vange, in the county of Essex, and allowed on the 23rd of March 1841, William Hilton was assessed as follows:—

Name of Occupier.	Name of Owner.	Description of Property.	Name or situation of Property.	Estimated Extent.	Gross estimated Rental.	Rateable Value.	Rate at 1s. 6d. in the pound.

Upon an appeal of William Hilton, against the rate or assessment, at the Easter Quarter Sessions, 1841, for the said county, the Sessions amended the rate, making the assessment on the appellant as follows:—

Name of Occupier.	Name of Owner.	Description of Property.	Name or situation of Property.	Estimated Extent.	Gross estimated Rental.	Rateable Value.	Rate at 1s. 6d. in the pound.

Subject to the opinion of this Court on the following

CASE.

The appellant was the owner and occupier of the property for which he was assessed, being a farm called "Scar House," lying in that part of the parish of Vange which is situated in Canvey Island. This island contains altogether about 4,000 acres, and is situate in, or forms detached parts of the parishes of Vange and eight others. A considerable portion of the lands of the island are called and known by the name of "Third Acre Lands," of which description the farm before mentioned entirely consists.

In the year 1621, Sir Henry Appleton and others, being the owners of certain lands lying in Canvey Island, which lands were at every spring tide overflowed by the River Thames, by indenture, dated the 9th of April 1621, contracted and agreed with Joas Copenberg, for the inning, and inclosing and fencing of all the grounds in the island, and the same, at his own proper costs and charges, maintaining and keeping from all inundations and overflowing of the said River Thames for ever. And it was in and by the said indenture covenanted and agreed, that the said Joas Copenberg, in consideration thereof, and of his great pains, hazard, and charge, in and about the inning and fencing of the said grounds from the inundation and overflowing of the said waters, should have and enjoy to him and his heirs in fee simple for ever one full third part of all and singular the lands of the said parties, situate in the said island.

Joas Copenberg, having inned, gained, recovered, and fenced the lands of the island, the said indenture was, in Hilary term, 1622, by consent of all parties thereto, made a decree of the Court of Chancery, and the third part of all the same lands so inned was thereby decreed and established to Joas Copenberg, his heirs, and assigns for ever, upon the conditions in the said indenture mentioned.

The lands thus vested in Joas Copenberg, his heirs and assigns, were and are called the "Third Acre Lands," and are known by that name; and the farm before mentioned, belonging to and occupied by appellant, comprises a part thereof. Those lands which remained in Sir H. Appleton and other persons, were and are called the "Free Lands;" and those lands which have been, since the embankment of the island, recovered, at different times, from the sea by different individual proprietors, are called "Outsands."

By the statute 32 Geo. 3. c. 31, intituled, 'An act for more effectually embanking, draining, and otherwise improving the Island of Canvey, in the county of Essex,' and which is declared a public act, certain commissioners, therein named, and they and their successors, to be appointed as in the said act is mentioned, were thereby directed and required to maintain the walls and banks and other works of drainage in the island, except such as were erected and made around those parts called the Outsands; and to make and erect such other walls and banks, &c. and to cut such other drains, in, upon, through, and over the island, except as aforesaid, as should be necessary for the more effectually protecting, preserving, and draining of the island; and all such works from time to time to repair, maintain, &c.

The act then gave the commissioners power for the above purposes from time to time, and at all times thereafter, to tax and charge the owners or occupiers of the Third Acre Lands, to the full annual rent or value of such lands respectively, if necessary. And the commissioners were by the act further empowered, if the monies to be raised upon the owners or occupiers of the Third Acre Lands should not amount to the sums which the exigencies of the several years might require, to supply such deficiency, by taxing and assessing the several other lands within the island, except the Outsands.

Since the passing of the act, the several works therein mentioned have been and are vested in the commissioners and their successors for the purposes of the act: and they have in the exercise of the powers given them by the act repaired and kept in repair the walls, embankments, and other works mentioned in the act; and have in three recent years (viz. in the years 1837, 1838 and 1839) in consequence of the proceeds of the Third Acre Lands being insufficient for the exigencies of those years, and in pursuance of such powers, assessed and raised certain sums of money on the free lands to supply such deficiency. The whole of the sums assessed and raised upon any particular portion of land is applied to any particular portion of the works. There are no more or other Third Acre Lands within the parish of Vange than the farm before mentioned. The other land in the island, situate within Vange parish, consists of the free lands. The appellant paid nothing for the purchase of the Scar House Farm, which he has occupied as the owner thereof, subject to the liabilities imposed on it by the above-mentioned decree and act of parliament. The quantity or extent at which the Scar House Farm was estimated in the original assessment, includes the portion occupied by that part of the sea wall or embankment vested in the commissioners, which is contiguous, and upon which the farm is abutting. And the extent at which the said farm is estimated in the rate as amended by the Sessions, is the extent of that portion which belongs to and is occupied by the appellant, exclusive of the same sea-walls, embankments, and other works vested in the commissioners.

For several years since, the sums assessed and raised by the commissioners upon the Third Acre Lands for the purposes of the act, have been equal to the rack rent or full annual value of these lands; and the sum which has been assessed upon and paid by the appellant in respect of the Scar House Farm, has been, for the current and preceding years, 123*l.* per annum.

The annual outlay and expenditure in and about the repair and maintenance of the sea-walls, embankments, and other works mentioned in the act, has been and is an expense necessary to maintain the lands within the island in a state to command any rent from a tenant, or to be capable of occupation for any purpose by the owner.

No deduction whatever is made to the appellant in the rate appealed against, in respect of the sea-wall rate or embankment tax, paid by him as before mentioned.

The question for the opinion of this Court was, whether the said sum of 123*l.*, so assessed upon and paid by the appellant, ought to be deducted from the assumed gross rental, in estimating the annual or rateable value of the same farm and lands, in assessing appellant to the poor-rate.

The case was argued in Easter term, this year, by

support of the order of Sessions.—This is a farm subject to a large outlay, essential for the purposes of the occupation, not of the farm itself only, but of all lands within the parish; and the consequence is, that there is no rateable value at all. The net annual value is the proper subject of rating—The King v. Adams (1); and the Parochial Assessment Act, 6 & 7 Will. 4. c. 91, is framed on the same principle. The occupier of this land is compelled to pay, for the purpose of his own enjoyment of the land, and for the protection of the rest of the island. The consequence of his doing so is, that the other land in the island, being thus protected, is of more value, and contributes more to the poor-rate. This is, in reality, a case in which there is no beneficial occupation by the tenant whatever. The whole value of the land is taken under an act of parliament, and applied to another purpose.

Erle, E. James, and Marsh, contra.—The appellant should be rated at least to the amount of two-thirds of the rack rent found by the Sessions. The repairs of the sea-wall, although thus specially provided for under the local act, stand, in reality, on the ordinary footing of a sewers rate. Such an outgoing is not one of those which are to be expected in taking account of the rateable value, under the Parochial Assessment Act. It only falls on the land, in consequence of a private arrangement between the owners of the adjoining properties. But there is also another way of looking at the case. The Sessions find the gross rental at 123*l.*, and the sum necessarily devoted to the maintenance of the embankment, the same. Then, this is an instance in which the whole rack rent, and no more, is appropriated to that particular purpose. The sea-wall stands in lieu of the landlord. The tenant's profit made out of the land—that which constitutes his beneficial occupation—remains the same. In this view, the tenant should be charged to the amount of the whole rack-rent: but if the Court consider the maintenance of these embankments as a "necessary outgoing," in the case of each individual farm, and, therefore, that the tenant here ought to be allowed his aliquot part of it, as a deduction, within the meaning of the Parochial Assessment Act; then, considering the maintenance of the works in question as requiring the whole rack rent of the Third Acre Lands, or one-third of the whole within the island, he ought to be assessed at two-thirds of the rack rent (2).

Cur adv. vult.

LORD DENMAN, C.J. now delivered the judgment of the Court.—After stating the facts, as submitted by the case, His Lordship proceeded:—The question thus presented for our consideration is, whether the occupation of the premises by the appellant be such as to make him liable to the rate—a question of some difficulty, undoubtedly—and which is usually expressed to be, whether the occupation be beneficial. The distinctions, in many of the cases on this subject, are certainly very fine; and, except where the subject immediately under consideration requires it, we do not know that it is useful to enter into a minute examination of them. The question about beneficial occupation certainly has been frequently before the Court; and, at no distant time, we had occasion to comment on the import and meaning of the expression in the case of The Governors of Bristol Poor v. Wait (3). We will only here again observe, that “beneficial” and “profitable,” in the ordinary sense of the words, are not convertible terms; that a party holding property, in its nature rateable, is not discharged from liability because he does it at a loss. Suppose a farmer to be able to prove he was holding his farm at an amount of loss, that would not constitute an exemption from poor-rates. It is unnecessary, however, to put hypothetical cases: The King v. Parrot (4) is a case in point. The unprofitable and losing occupation of a coal mine, was held to create no exemption, because a coal mine is, by the statute of Elizabeth, eo nomine made rateable. In the present instance, the subject of the rate is of the same description—house and lands, directly within the statute—what is there to exempt this property from rateability? One answer is, because it yields no profit to the owner—the appellant. Suppose the premises to be let to a tenant, at the rent of 123*l.* a year—the sum at which the Sessions seem to think, if rateable at all, they ought to be assessed. It seems to be clear in such case the tenant would be rateable for such occupation. Again, suppose that, instead of having paid nothing for it, and taking it, as he has, with the incumbrances, he had purchased it, and had left the whole purchase-money unpaid, but secured, by mortgage, on the premises; in what respect can that be different from the present? And yet, in the case last supposed, he surely would have been rateable. The case of The King v. Adams, which was quoted in argument, was one of the comparative amount of assessment, whether property A was fairly rated in relation to property B; but there was no question, as here, of abstract rateability. Upon the whole, we are of opinion, that the sum of 128*l.* ought not to be deducted from the assumed gross rental in assessing this rate.

Vagrant Act — Bastard — Meaning of words, “Child or Children”—Liability of Mother.

The mother of a bastard child is not liable to imprisonment under the Vagrant Act, 5 Geo. 4. c. 83, for running away and leaving such child chargeable on the parish.

Cowling, in Easter term, had obtained a rule calling on the defendant, a magistrate, to shew cause why a mandamus should not issue, directing him to hear and determine the complaint of J. Arnitt, one of the relieving officers of the Manchester Union, against Anne Mosely, single woman. The rule was obtained on the affidavit of Arnitt, which stated, that the aforesaid Anne Mosely, a single woman, did, in December last, run away and leave her female bastard child in the township of Manchester, whereby the said child became and was actually chargeable to the said township of Manchester, and that he had applied to the defendant to commit her as a rogue and vagabond under 5 Geo. 4. c. 83. s. 4. (1), but that the magistrate, upon referring to the act in question, and also to the 4 & 5 Will. 4. c. 76. s. 71, had doubted his power, and declined to commit her.

Peel shewed cause.—Looking to the law as it stood at the time of the passing of 5 Geo. 4. c. 83, it cannot be supposed that illegitimate children were contemplated by that act. The putative father, on whom the maintenance of the child was thrown by 6 Geo. 2. c. 31. s. 1. and 49 Geo. 3. c. 68, was not supposed to have the custody or superintendence of the children, and the desertion by the mother would not have rendered the child chargeable. The first act on the subject, 18 Eliz. c. 3. s. 2, names “bastard children” in terms; the 43 Eliz. c. 2. s. 7. throws the maintenance of infirm poor on the “children.” It cannot be supposed that bastard children could be intended by this enactment; the contrary, indeed, was expressly decided in The City of Westminster v. Gerrard (2), and no authority is to be found the other way. The first act making the desertion of children an act of vagrancy, is 7 Jac. 1. c. 4, the 8th section of which enacts, “that all persons running away and leaving their families upon the parish, shall be taken and deemed incorrigible rogues.” This act was followed by 17 Geo. 2. c. 5, 32 Geo. 3. c. 45, and 3 Geo. 4. c. 40, all relating to the same subject, and finally consolidated by the 3 Geo. 4. c. 83. The mode of providing for the support of illegitimate children was, during all the time, the subject of distinct enactments. The 5 Geo. 4. c. 83. is a highly penal act. The case of The King v. Hodnett (3), which may, perhaps, be cited on the other side, turned on the construction of the Marriage Act, and a positive fraud was there committed, by parties who were held not exempted because they were illegitimate. If then, the 5 Geo. 4. c. 83. does not extend to bastard children, what is the effect of 4 & 5 Will. 4. c. 76? In ss. 56 & 78, the word child cannot be taken to mean an illegitimate child; and in s. 57, where illegitimate children are meant to be included, the words “whether such children be legitimate or illegitimate” are added. Section 71, which was relied on when the application was made, only provides as for bastard children being considered part of the mother's family during the age of nurture. It is clear, that in the event of her being incapable of supporting them, the liability devolves on the putative father. Independently of these acts of parliament, the old rule of law treated a bastard as nullius filius. In deeds and wills the term “child” means a legitimate child—Bagley v. Mollard (4), Harris v. Lloyd (5), Bac. Abr. tit. ‘Bastard’ (B), Dyer, 345, Co. Litt. 123, b; 111, b, n. i.

Cowling, contra.—The words of the 4th section of the Vagrant Act, 5 Geo. 4. c. 83, are very comprehensive, and include every kind of child. No reason can be given for restricting them, or giving the person who runs away, where the child left chargeable is illegitimate, the benefit of an exception which the terms of the act do not provide for or warrant. It is no answer to say, that the parish may come upon the father in the event of chargeability of the child. The crime is in occasioning the chargeability by desertion, and is as great in a mother as in a father. Most of the cases on the subject are referred to in The Queen v. Hodnett, where it was held, that bastards were within the meaning of the Marriage Act, 26 Geo. 2. c. 33. In that case, Buller, J. observed, “It is not true that the Court in the exposition of penal statutes, are to narrow the construction. We are to look to the words in the first instance, and when they are plain we are to decide on them. . . . Now these words are very general. The act speaks of all persons, except under particular circumstances." He further says, "Besides, the rule that a bastard is nullius filius, applies only to the case of inheritances; it was so considered by Lord Coke." That rule of law is in no sense universally true—Haines v. Jeffell (6), Co. Litt. 123; Black. Com. 459. The acts for the relief of the poor were passed diverso intuitu, and no argument can be derived from expressions contained in them. The 71st section of 4 & 5 Will. 4. c. 76, is in favour of the application.

(1) By 5 Geo. 4. c. 83. s. 4, it is enacted, amongst other classes of offenders, that “every person running away and leaving his wife, or his or her children chargeable, or whereby she or they or any of them shall become chargeable to any parish, township, or place . . . shall be deemed a rogue and vagabond within the true intent and meaning of this act; and it shall be lawful for any Justice of the Peace to commit such offender, being thereof convicted, &c., to the house of correction, there to be kept to hard labour for any time not exceeding three calendar months.” By 4 & 5 Will. 4. c. 76. s. 71, every child which shall be born a bastard, after the passing of this act, shall have and follow the settlement of the mother of such child, until such child shall attain the age of sixteen, or shall acquire a settlement in its own right; and such mother, so long as she shall be unmarried, or a widow, shall be bound to maintain such child as part of her family.

The judgment of the Court was delivered by—

WIGHTMAN, J.—In the course of the present term, cause was shewn by Mr. Peel against a rule for a mandamus to Daniel Maude, Esq., one of Her Majesty's Justices of the Peace for the borough of Manchester, for the purpose of convicting a single woman under the 5 Geo. 4. c. 83, for running away and leaving her bastard child chargeable to the parish, and the question to be considered and determined was, whether a bastard was included under the word "child" in the act of parliament. By the 4th section of the act, certain persons are to be deemed rogues and vagabonds, and, amongst them, "every person running away and leaving his wife, or his or her child or children chargeable to the parish." It was argued in support of the rule, that, though in cases of tenure the word "child" is to be understood a legitimate child, it is not to be so considered where the object of the law is to punish or to disable. It was admitted, that the question was raised for the first time, and that it had hitherto been considered that the penalties of the act applied to the desertion of legitimate and not of illegitimate children. But it will, on considering the question, appear that the 5 Geo. 4. c. 83. is not the first statute in which the same or nearly the same words are used in describing a class of persons who are to be deemed rogues and vagabonds. By the 3 Geo. 4. c. 40. s. 3, "all persons who run away and leave their wives or children chargeable to the parish," are to be so deemed; and by the 17 Geo. 2. c. 5. s. 2, "all persons who run away and leave their wives or children, whereby they become chargeable to the parish," are to be deemed rogues and vagabonds. In all these statutes the words are nearly the same, "wives or children," and by placing them together, it would seem, without more, to indicate that the legislature intended legitimate children and not bastards; and for nearly a century these words have been so used, and in those statutes have been so considered; and there is no instance to be found, at least I have found none, of any attempt to apply those words to illegitimate children. But it has been expressly held, in the case of The City of Westminster v. Gerrard, that a bastard was not within the 7th section of the 43 Eliz. c. 2, which enacts, "that the fathers and grandfathers, and the children of every poor person unable to work, shall relieve," &c. I am therefore disposed to think that a bastard child is not within the meaning of the word "child," as used in the act of parliament in question. It is no further necessary to refer to the acts of parliament relating to the putative fathers and mothers of bastards, than to observe that distinct provisions are made for the maintenance of bastard children, and compelling the parents to provide for them; and that in all such statutes, bastards are described in terms as such; and that in the General Poor Law Amendment Act, 4 & 5 Will. 4. c. 76, where the word "child" is used, as for example in section 56, a legitimate child is clearly intended; and that where the word "child" is intended to have a more extensive signification, it is expressly so declared, as in section 57, by which the husband is made liable to maintain the children of the wife before marriage, whether legitimate or illegitimate. The only case referred to in the argument in support of the rule, was that of The King v. Hodnett, in which it was held, that a bastard was within the meaning of the Marriage Act, 26 Geo. 2. c. 33. s. 11; but the question there was not, as here, with respect to the meaning of the word "child," which was not used either in the 11th or the subsequent section, but whether a bastard was so strictly nullius filius, that he could not be considered within the meaning of the statute, which requires that the marriage of a person under age by licence shall be by consent of the father, mother, or guardian. That case seems to me hardly to bear upon the particular point in the present, which turns, as I have already stated, upon the meaning of the legislature in the use of the word "child;" and I therefore think that the rule should be discharged.

Overseer — Churchwardens — Inspection of Rate — Action.

The statute 17 Geo. 2. c. 3. s. 3. enacts, that if any churchwarden or overseer shall not permit any inhabitant or parishioner to inspect the rates, or shall refuse or neglect to give copies thereof, he shall forfeit to the party grieved 20l. :—Held, that the words "churchwarden or overseer," are used in contradistinction to the word "inhabitant," and therefore that an overseer cannot bring an action on this statute, against a co-overseer for refusing him a copy of the rate.

Nor is the co-overseer made liable, by having promised to give a copy of the rate, which he afterwards refused.

Debt for penalties under statute 17 Geo. 2. c. 3. The first count of the declaration stated, that the plaintiff was an inhabitant of the parish of Little Marlow, in the county of Bucks, and that the defendant was one of the overseers of the poor of that parish; that on the 17th of May 1841, the churchwardens and overseers of the poor of the parish made a rate for the relief of the poor, which was afterwards allowed by two Justices, and copies of it in writing duly affixed on the doors of all the churches and chapels within the parish, and notice of the rate duly given; and, that afterwards, and at a reasonable time in that behalf, the plaintiff requested the defendant, as overseer, to permit him to inspect the rate, and then tendered the defendant 1s., yet that the defendant would not permit the plaintiff to inspect the rate, but refused to do so, contrary to the form of the statute, &c., whereby the defendant forfeited 20l. Second count, that the plaintiff, being an inhabitant, &c., demanded of the defendant, as overseer, &c. a copy of the rate, and was ready and willing to pay for the same at the rate of 6d. for every twenty-four names, but that the defendant refused to give him a copy of the same, &c.

Plea—Not guilty (by statute), and issue thereon.

At the trial, before Atcherley, Serj., at the Lent Assizes, 1842, for the county of Bucks, it appeared that the plaintiff was a churchwarden and an inhabitant of the parish of Little Marlow, and that the defendant was an overseer of the same parish. It was proved that the plaintiff applied to the defendant for a copy of the rate, and offered to pay the proper sum for it; the defendant thereon promised the plaintiff a copy, and desired the assistant overseer to furnish him with it, but subsequently refused to do so. It was shewn, that the plaintiff had been assessed to the rate as an inhabitant, and had paid his assessment. There was no evidence to support the first count of the declaration. It was objected by the defendant's counsel, that the plaintiff, being himself a churchwarden and overseer of the poor, was not an inhabitant of the parish, within the meaning of the statute 17 Geo. 2. c. 3 (1), and a verdict

(1) The statute 17 Geo. 2. c. 3. recites, "that whereas great inconveniences do often arise in cities, towns corporate, parishes, townships, and places, by reason of the unlimited power of the churchwardens and overseers of the poor, who frequently, on frivolous pretences and for private ends, make unjust and illegal rates in a secret and clandestine manner, contrary to the true intent and meaning of the statute 43 Eliz. &c., for remedy whereof, and preventing the like abuses for the future, be it enacted, that the churchwardens and overseers, or other persons authorized to take care of the poor in every parish, township, or place, shall give, or cause to be given, public notice in the church, of every rate for the relief of the poor, allowed by the Justices of the Peace, the next Sunday after the same shall have been so allowed; and that no rate shall be esteemed or reported valid and sufficient, so as to collect and raise the same, unless such notice shall have been given."

Sect. 2. "That the churchwardens and overseers of the poor, or other persons authorized, as aforesaid, in every parish, &c., shall permit all and every the inhabitants of the said parish, &c. to inspect every such rate at all seasonable times, paying 1s. for the same, and shall, upon demand, forthwith give copies of the same, or any part thereof, to any inhabitant of the said parish, &c., paying at the rate of 6d. for every twenty-four names."

1825, nor after 1828. In 1831, Veness quitted possession and went to live at Brighton. It was proved, that he had in that year stated, that he had parted with his interest in the property to the parish. It was also shewn that he had, at various periods during his occupation, received parochial relief. He died in 1833. In 1837, his son, T. Veness, for the first time, made an entry upon the land, but was ejected by a magistrate's warrant. In 1840, he made another entry and was similarly ejected, possession having, in both cases, been given to the agent of the poor law guardians of the union to which Battle belonged. In 1836, the property in question was sold by auction by order of T. Veness, and the defendant, having become the purchaser, made the entry upon the land, for which the action was brought. At the close of the plaintiffs' case, the defendant's counsel applied for a nonsuit, on the grounds, first, that the churchwardens and overseers had not shewn any title in themselves; secondly, that by 5 & 6 Will. 4. c. 69, the legal estate (if any) was in the guardians of the union, and not in the churchwardens and overseers of the parish. The learned Baron overruled the first objection, but reserved leave to the defendant to move to enter a nonsuit on the second point, and the plaintiff had a verdict.

Shee, Serj. in Easter term last, obtained a rule nisi for a nonsuit accordingly, or for a new trial upon the first point.

Channell, Serj. (Bramwell with him) now shewed cause.—The plaintiffs have been in possession of the property a sufficient time to confer a title upon them, whether they claim as churchwardens or as individuals. Even supposing that they could not begin to acquire a title before 1819, when the statute 59 Geo. 3. c. 12. was passed, which empowered churchwardens and overseers to hold parish lands, yet their title would in that case be complete in 1839. This action was not begun till 1841. This is an answer to the first point, as regards a new trial. As to the second objection, that the legal estate is in the guardians of the union, and not in the churchwardens and overseers of the parish, this objection has been overruled by the case of Doe d. Norton v. Webster (1), which decides that neither the 4 & 5

Will. 4. c. 76. s. 21, nor the 5 & 6 Will. 4. c. 69. s. 3, divests the churchwardens and overseers of the parish property. Those parties were therefore the proper persons to be plaintiffs in this action.

Shee, Serj. (with whom was Wordsworth) contra.—The plaintiffs sue in their corporate capacity as churchwardens and overseers. But until 1819, they were not competent to acquire a title to these premises in their corporate capacity. That title would not, therefore, have become complete till 1839, by twenty years' possession. But before that time, viz. in 1834, by the statute 4 & 5 Will. 4. c. 76, s. 26, the parish of Battle had been incorporated with other parishes, and the management of it was vested in a board of guardians; and in 1835, the statute 5 & 6 Will. 4. c. 69, was passed, giving most extensive powers to the board of guardians with respect to the sale, &c. of lands, the property of any parish. Doe d. Norton v. Webster is not applicable to the present case. There the legal estate had vested in the churchwardens and overseers of the parish; and that case decided only, that where it had once so vested, it is not divested and given to the guardians by 5 & 6 Will. 4. c. 69. s. 3. But here the legal estate was not vested in the churchwardens and overseers at the time of the passing of that act. The title was then in fieri only, and the case cited is no authority to shew, that when that title was afterwards completed by twenty years' possession, it did not vest in the guardians of the union. Section 7. of the statute empowers the guardians of the poor of every union and of every parish placed under the controul of a board of guardians, "to accept, take, and hold, for the benefit of such union or parish, any buildings, lands," &c.

[MAULE, J.—That means only, that the guardians of a union may take for the benefit of the union; and the guardians of a parish placed under the controul of a board of guardians, but not incorporated into a union, may take for the benefit of the parish. But there is nothing in the statute to shew that the churchwardens and overseers of a parish cease to be a corporation capable of acquiring land. You ought to shew that this property was divested out of the parish and given to the union, and upon that point Doe d. Norton v. Webster is against you.]

(1) 12 Ad. & El. 442; s. c. 9 Law J. Rep. (n.s.) Q.B. 373.

At all events, the plaintiffs were bound to prove possession in themselves. The only possession proved in 1837 and 1840 was the possession of the board of guardians. It was their agent to whom possession was delivered under the warrant of the magistrates.

[MAULE, J.—The guardians had the management of the property for the churchwardens and overseers, and had a right to complain of the trespass and obtain possession of the land; but when obtained, it enured, according to the title, to the benefit of the parish.]

TINDAL, C.J.—The question in this case is, whether the proper plaintiffs have been put upon the record. It has been argued, that they were not created a corporation capable of gaining a title to land, until 1819. That may be so, but from that time, the title would go on; and it is clear from Doe v. Norton v. Webster, that the statute 5 & 6 Will. 4. c. 69, did not take the land out of them. The point raised, that possession was given under the magistrates' warrant to the guardians, and not to the present plaintiffs, has received its answer from my Brother Maule.

June 8. } WOOD v. FENWICK AND OTHERS.*

Master and Servant—Statute 4 Geo. 4. c. 31. s. 3.—Conviction—Commitment.

A commitment of a pitman, under 4 Geo. 4. c. 31. s. 3, to gaol, "there to remain, and be corrected, and held to hard labour," is void.

Semble—That a commitment, which stated that it had been adjudged and determined, that the party charged had, in his service, been guilty of divers misdemeanours, miscarriages, and misbehaviour towards his employers, and particularly that, on the 10th day of August now instant, he absented himself from his service without leave or any just cause, and which proceeded to state, that the Magistrates convicted the party of his said offence, was not void for uncertainty in pointing out the precise ground of the commitment.

Trespass for false imprisonment, to which the defendants pleaded not guilty, by statute. Upon the trial it was agreed, that a verdict should be taken for the plaintiff, subject to a special case, which stated that the three defendants were Magistrates for Northumberland, and the plaintiff having entered into a written contract with Humble Lamb, and the other owners of a colliery, to serve them as a pitman, was summoned before them for absenting himself. The case then set forth a conviction, which stated the information and complaint to have been made by Thomas Taylor, agent for Humble Lamb and the other owners, and after setting forth the facts, adjudged, "that the said Thomas Wood, for his said offence, be imprisoned in the house of correction for the county aforesaid, at Tynemouth, in the county aforesaid, there to remain and be held to hard labour for the space one month." This was followed by a commitment by the defendants, which also alleged the complaint to have been made by Thomas Taylor, agent for Humble Lamb and the other owners, with whom the contract was made, and stated that the defendants had adjudged and determined, that the plaintiff "hath, in his said service as aforesaid, been guilty of divers misdemeanours, miscarriages, and ill behaviour towards the said Humble Lamb, and his said partners, and particularly on the 10th day of August instant, absented himself from his said service, without leave or any just cause," in consequence whereof they convicted him "of the said offence," and commanded the gaoler "to receive the said Thomas Wood into your custody, in the said house of correction, there to remain, and be corrected, and held to hard labour, for the space of one month from the date hereof."

Grainger and Temple, for the plaintiff.—The commitment is bad, as it directs the plaintiff to be corrected, which, according to The King v. Hoseason (1), means to be whipped, and the complaint is stated to have been made by an agent, under the 4 Geo. 4. c. 34. s. 3, which authorizes no such punishment. Had the complaint been made by the principal, under 20 Geo. 2. c. 19, and the conviction authorized it, such a commitment as this might have been good; but here, at all events, it must be contended, that the conviction is under one statute and the commitment under another, which, according to Rogers v. Jones (2) and Daniell v. Phillips (3), renders the latter void. Then the commitment adjudges the plaintiff to have been guilty of divers misdemeanours, miscarriages, and ill behaviour, in addition to absenting himself, which renders it void for uncertainty, inasmuch as it does not clearly appear for which of these various offences he was committed.

[LORD ABINGER, C.B.—The general statement that he has been guilty of these things would not vitiate the commitment, if the sentence were justified by the offence particularly specified.]

Ingham, for the defendants.—The wording of this commitment differs from that in The King v. Hoseason, for there the direction was to receive the party into prison, there to be corrected and kept to hard labour; here it is, there to remain, and be corrected, and held to hard labour. In the former case, something distinct from being kept to hard labour was intended, but in this the context shews, that all that was intended was a correction by means of hard labour. Besides, The King v. Hoseason was no decision upon the point; what was there said was not necessary, and a mere obiter dictum. To be corrected does not necessarily imply whipping, there are many sorts of correction besides it: hard labour itself is correction; and the meaning, which might otherwise be ambiguous, is explained by the subsequent words.

LORD ABINGER, C.B.—We cannot reject the word “corrected;” it is a direction to the gaoler, and an addition to the term of hard labour. How is he to put an interpretation upon it? Whether it applies to whipping, or something else, it is equally out of the statute, and renders the commitment void.

ALDERSON, B. and GURNEY, B. concurred.

ROLFE, B.—Suppose the gaoler had actually whipped the plaintiff, could you have said he was not justified under this commitment? If he would have been so justified, then it is void.

Judgment for the plaintiff.

[There were two other points suggested by the case, viz. whether the statement that the complaint was made by the agent of Humble Lamb and others, his partners, without specifying their names, was sufficient; and also, whether the plaintiff, being a minor, was not at liberty to put an end to the contract at any time, upon giving reasonable notice, the jury having found the contract, which was for one year, upon the whole to have been beneficial for the infant. Upon the former point, the Court gave no opinion, but upon the latter they seemed to entertain a strong impression that the plaintiff could not abandon the contract.]

Order of Sessions—Appeal—Case.

Where an order of Justices has been quashed on appeal at Sessions, subject to a case, and this Court, on argument, has sent the case back to be re-stated, the respondents are the proper parties to take steps towards procuring such re-statement.

Therefore, where, at the next Sessions, after the case was sent back, the appellants having given no notice of further proceedings, and not appearing, the respondents applied for and obtained an order confirming the original order of Justices, this order of Sessions was quashed on certiorari.

A rule nisi had been obtained for a certiorari to remove and quash an order of the Quarter Sessions for the county of Derby. An appeal had been brought by the defendants, surveyors of the highways within the hamlet of Beard, in the said county, under the 2 & 3 Vict. c. 81, against an order of two Justices. This appeal was heard at the Easter Quarter Sessions, 1840, and quashed, subject to a case. The Court of Queen's Bench, on hearing the arguments in Michaelmas term, 1841, sent the case back to be re-stated. At the January Sessions, 1842, no further notice having been given by the appellants, and no appeal lodged by them, the respondents applied to have the original order confirmed. The respondents had given no notice to the appellants of their intention to appear at the Sessions, or to obtain a re-statement. The Court of Quarter Sessions, considering that, according to the practice of the Sessions, it was incumbent on the appellants to have given notice to the respondents of their intention to carry the proceedings further, confirmed the original order in the absence of the appellants.

Wildman and Griffin now shewed cause.—The Sessions have acted on their usual rule of practice; and, having done so strictly within the limits of their jurisdiction, this Court will not interfere—The King v. the Earl of Effingham (1), The King v. Bloxam (2), Dickinson's Quarter Sessions (Talfourd), p. 618, 4th edit., The King v. James (3).

[COLERIDGE, J.—Undoubtedly it is a settled rule of Sessions, that appellants must give notice of their own appeal; but here the Sessions have applied that rule to quite a different case,—that of proceedings in a special case sent down to be re-stated.]

At all events, this Court ought to have been moved for a mandamus to rehear the appeal.

[LORD DENMAN, C.J.—If that were so, quashing this order would be a necessary preliminary to doing it.]

N. Clarke, contra.—The case had been already decided, and the Sessions had no power to interfere in any way, except to obey the order of the Court directing them to re-state the case, whenever set in motion by the proper parties. The appellants were not the proper parties; the original decision had been in their favour, and they were not bound to take any steps towards having it questioned. (He was stopped by the Court, and Whitehurst, on the same side, was not heard.)

LORD DENMAN, C.J.—I think that is the correct principle. The party who has succeeded cannot be held bound to move any further in the case. The respondents ought themselves to have taken the necessary steps to obtain a re-statement. The inquiry, whether the appellant is not bound to give notice in the ordinary cases, has, therefore, nothing to do with this question.

1842. { THE QUEEN v. THE OVERSEERS
June 29. { OF THE TOWNSHIPS OF TOD-MORDEN AND WALSDEN.*

Poor Law Amendment Act, 4 & 5 Will. 4. c. 76. s. 38—Guardians, Election of—Admission.

The Poor Law Commissioners having formed six townships into an union, pursuant to 4 & 5 Will. 4. c. 76. s. 38, directed each of them to elect guardians. The guardians nominated for one township at the first three annual elections, after the passing of the statute, having refused to act, no election for that township ever took place:—Held, in Error, that the board of guardians elected on the third occasion by the other townships, although not complete, was competent to make an order for payment of money under s. 38. on the overseers of the township which had not elected guardians; and a mandamus was granted to compel the overseers to pay.

The order of the guardians was dated in August 1838, and the mandamus in January 1839. The overseers in their return, dated March 1839, described themselves as "William Robinson and William Crossley, the overseers of the poor of the township of Todmorden," and stated that the guardians had required them "as overseers of the poor of the said township of Todmorden to pay" certain sums:—Held, that they had thereby admitted that they were the overseers of Todmorden at the date of the order, and also of the mandamus.

This was a mandamus obtained on behalf of the guardians of the Todmorden Union, directing the overseers of the townships of Todmorden and Walsden to pay to the treasurer of the union certain sums, in pursuance of orders issued by the guardians on the 17th of August 1838, and to levy a rate for that purpose, if necessary. The return of the overseers, which bore date the 30th of March 1839, commenced in these terms, "We, William Robinson and William Crossley, the overseers of the poor of the townships of Todmorden and Walsden;"—it then stated, that true it was, that the guardians "did require us, as overseers of the said townships of Todmorden and Walsden, to pay, &c.;" it then stated their refusal to pay the sum ordered, on the ground that the township of Langfield was included in the union, and that since the formation of the union no election of guardians for Langfield had taken place. Demurrer to the replication (1).

The point for argument on the part of the Crown was, that by the 4 & 5 Will. 4. c. 96. s. 38, where the full number of guardians for each parish was not elected at any annual election, after the first annual election, the other guardians might act for the whole union.

Kelly, for the defendants.—There is a preliminary objection in this case. It does not appear on the mandamus, that at the time of the order for payment in August 1838, the defendants were overseers for Langfield. Their statement in the return that they are overseers, refers to the date of the return, namely, in March 1839. If it had appeared that they had been appointed in Easter 1838, it might be presumed that they had continued to be overseers till August; but here it merely appears that they were overseers in March 1839.

[ALDERSON, B.—The order is dated August 1838, and the mandamus January 1839. Overseers are appointed at Easter. It must be presumed that they were the same overseers.]

They may die subsequently to their appointment.

[ALDERSON, B.—Why is that to be presumed?]

It was held to be a fatal objection to a mandamus to a corporation commanding them to pay a poor-rate, that it omitted to state that the defendants had no effects upon which a distress could be levied—The King v. the Margate Pier Company (2).

[TINDAL, C.J.—I think the defendants have admitted by their return that they were overseers at the time the order was made.

[PARKE, B.—A mandamus is made to the defendants as overseers to make certain payments, and by their return they admit that they are the persons to whom the writ ought to be directed.

[ALDERSON, B.—The appointment of overseers must be made within fourteen days from the 25th of March, and the presumption is, that the present overseers were appointed at the time. The mandamus bears date in January 1839, and the order is made in August 1838: must they not be taken to have admitted that they were overseers both in August 1838 and January 1839?]

He then contended, that the order of the guardians was void. The arguments on this point are omitted, being similar to those urged before the Court below.

Tomlinson, who was to have argued on the other side, was informed by the Court that if they entertained any doubt, they would hear him on the following day. He was not afterwards heard, but on the 29th of June, the judgment of the Court was delivered by—

TINDAL, C.J.—In the case of Robinson v. the Guardians of the Poor of the Todmorden Union, the whole of the question arises upon the proper construction to be put upon the 38th section of 4 & 5 Will. 4. c. 76; and the first objection that has been raised against the judgment given by the Court of Queen's Bench, is, that the words which occur in that section,—“Provided always, that one or more guardians shall be elected for each parish included in such union,” are words that import a condition, and that, importing such condition, inasmuch as there was one of these parishes for which a guardian was not elected, this last election is therefore void. It appears to us, that these words are no more than directory. They are a direction which is intended to govern the discretion of the parties who elect, that there shall be either one or more guardians for each parish included in the union; and are not by any means to be interpreted with the strictness of a condition or limitation. But supposing that not a proper construction; admitting, for the purpose of the argument, that those words are conditional, we think there are subsequent provisions in this clause which will get rid of the difficulty secondly made in the course of the argument. It was alleged, that unless there be a first board properly constituted, within the meaning of the statute, no second or subsequent board can be so constituted. The argument was, that by the 38th section, the Justices within a certain jurisdiction between the periods of the first and the next, and any subsequent election, in case the full number of guardians shall not be duly elected, shall take upon them the administration of the act. Now, it seems to us, that that provision is confined to the first election, and that it does not extend to the second or subsequent election, unless there is a difficulty arising from a delay or irregularity in the subsequent elections. Then, indeed, they are guardians ex officio, and they may act. But that is not the complaint here. There is no doubt, that upon the second and subsequent elections there was one guardian appointed for each parish. Then, that being the case, the case of the full number of guardians not having been chosen in a second or subsequent election, is provided for by that part of the same section which authorizes the others, or remaining members of the board, to continue and act as if the number of the board were complete. We, therefore, think that the objection taken, applying itself to the first election only, and not to a second or subsequent election, there has been a good election de facto, and that upon that ground, the judgment of the Court of Queen's Bench ought to be affirmed. There was one point made in the course of the argument, as to the want of identity appearing on the record between the overseers who had made the return to the mandamus, and those overseers who were in existence at the time, but to that we gave an answer in the course of the argument. I am not certain whether there was one guardian in each of the subsequent elections. However, that difficulty is got over (supposing the number was incomplete) by those who were chosen, acting.

Judgment affirmed.

Poor, Maintenance of—Rate—Statute.

The parish of A, and township of P, had maintained their poor jointly and indiscriminately, as far back as could be traced, and possessed a joint workhouse. They had the same parish church and churchwardens; but separate overseers, collectors, and other officers; and the rate for the maintenance of the poor was separately levied, in the proportions of two-thirds for one division, and one-third for the other:—Held, that the fact of joint maintenance of the poor was conclusive, under these circumstances, to shew that P. was not a separate and distinct township for the maintenance of the poor, within 13 & 14 Car. 2. c. 12; and that the township of P, jointly with the parish, could have the benefit of the statute 43 Eliz. c. 2.

On an application to quash an order of two Justices for the county of Worcester, appointing certain persons overseers of the poor for the said township, described in the order as the hamlet of Pensham, for insufficiency, the Court directed certain feigned issues, in which two of the inhabitants of the parish of St. Andrew, in Pershore, were plaintiffs, and two of the inhabitants of Pensham defendants. The following were the issues:—First, whether St. Andrew, in Pershore, and the township of Pensham, have from the time of the statute 43 Eliz. c. 2, maintained their own poor jointly, and independently of the townships of Beaford, Defford, Bricklehampton, Wick, and Pinvin. Second, whether Pensham is a separate and distinct township in respect of the maintenance of the poor, within the meaning of 13 & 14 Car. 2, c. 12, or not. Third, whether the five chapelries of Beaford, Defford, Bricklehampton, Wick, and Pinvin, or any and which of them, were at the time of the passing of the said statute of Elizabeth reputed parishes or not. Fourth, whether the said five chapelries, or any and which of them, have maintained their own poor each separately from the time of the passing of the said statute of Elizabeth. Fifth, whether the said five chapelries, or any and which of them, at the time of the passing of the said statute of Elizabeth, were ecclesiastically separated from, and wholly independent of, the mother church. Sixth, whether the township of Pensham can have the benefit of stat. 43 Eliz. c. 2.

At the trial of these issues, before Alderson, B., at the Gloucester Summer Assizes, 1839, a verdict was taken by consent for the plaintiffs upon all the issues, subject to the opinion of the Court upon facts stated in a case; with liberty for the Court to draw such conclusions as a jury might have done, and to inspect documents, &c.

The case detailed a great variety of evidence, documentary and traditional, of which the following were some of the leading points.

The parish of St. Andrew, in Pershore, in the county of Worcester, extends over, first, part of the market town of Pershore and lands adjoining; second, the hamlet of Pensham; third, the five places enumerated in the issues as chapelries. The parish church of St. Andrew, in Pershore, is the mother church of the parish.

With respect to the question of the distinctness or unity of the parish of St. Andrew, Pershore, and the hamlet of Pensham, it appeared that Pensham was not commonly reputed a parish, but as a hamlet, and part of the parish of St. Andrew, there being no church or chapel. That they joined together for the purpose of electing one of the churchwardens of the whole parish. That Pensham had distinct overseers of the poor (a single one until within the last six or seven years), a distinct surveyor of highways, collectors of rates, and constable. But the following was the result of the evidence as to the maintenance of the poor, on which the Court mainly relied in its judgment:—For forty years, prior to 1835, when the Pershore Union was formed under the Poor Law Amendment Act, there was one workhouse, situate in St. Andrew's, for the use of the poor of St. Andrew's and Pensham jointly. The poor had been jointly and indiscriminately relieved as far back as could be traced, previously to that period. The fund for their relief was raised by a contribution from St. Andrew's, of two-thirds of the gross sum requisite, and one-third from Pensham, which share was familiarly known by the name of "The Pensham Third."

As to the five other places, it appeared that they had had, as far back as could be traced, a separate church or chapel, with bells; had sometimes had separate church or chapelwardens; separate overseers of the poor; and each separately repaired its chapel and maintained its poor, without contributing to the repairs of the church or maintenance of the poor in St. Andrew's. Other facts were proved, which are noticed in the judgment.

The case was argued in Trinity term by—Erle, for the plaintiffs.—He cited The King v. Watts Horton (1), The King v. the Justices of Salop (2), The Queen v. the Justices of Worcester (3), The Queen v. Marriott (4), Nichols v. Walker (5), Rudd v. Morton (6), 1 *Burn Eccl. Cur. adv. vult.

LORD DENMAN, C.J., now delivered the judgment of the Court.—Whether the interests connected with these proceedings, bear any fair proportion to the expense and trouble which has been incurred, it is useless now to inquire. Questions have been raised and submitted to us for decision, and must therefore be disposed of. That can only be done in one of two ways; either the case must be sent back for the decision of a jury, the proper tribunal for such decision; or the Court must undertake a duty somewhat unusually, and perhaps irregularly, cast upon it, of drawing conclusions from the facts. We have no doubt, that the former would have been the more regular course; we undertake the latter, however, without intending thereby to create a precedent, in order to save the great additional expense which a trial must unavoidably have imposed on the parties. We shall somewhat change the order of the questions, and first notice the second, which seems to have the most important bearing on the matters in dispute, and virtually to include the first. The second question is, as to the unity of St. Andrew in Pershore, and Pensham, or their separation from each other, as respects the maintenance of the poor, within the meaning of the statute 13 & 14 Car. 2. c. 12. s. 21. We think that the evidence, both as to quantity and antiquity, which latter, it is unnecessary to remark, is very material in such cases, preponderates greatly in favour of their identity. And upon this point, although a very large mass of evidence has been collected, we do not consider it to be needful to enter into a detailed examination of it, inasmuch as there is a perfect agreement on both sides as to one point, which, we think, is decisive of the question. The case finds, that for forty years before 1835, there was one workhouse situate in St. Andrew, for the use of the poor of St. Andrew and Pensham jointly, and that the poor had been jointly and indiscriminately relieved as far back as can be traced before that time. So that in whatever manner the quota of two-thirds for one district, and of one-third for the other, may have been raised by each, (a matter which we do not consider to be material,) the whole, when raised, constituted one fund for the maintenance of the poor. This has always been deemed the leading consideration in questions of this kind. In The King v. Newell, in which there was an appointment for a great length of time, if not immemorially, of a lawful number of overseers, (and not, as here so frequently, of one,) Lord Kenyon, in giving judgment, selected from the case the following passage:—"The two parts of the parish have paid the hamlets three-eighths, and the borough part five-eighths of the whole expenses incurred by the poor of both parts of the parish; the whole expenses, when incurred, being computed into one integral sum;" and "the overseers of each part have accounted with each other." He then adds, "Then it appears to have been only one district, affording one integral fund for the poor of both parishes;" and his judgment was accordingly in favour of the unity of the two districts. Ashurst, J. is reported to have stated his opinion thus—"What is decisive in this case is, that it does not appear that these districts have ever acted separately, but, on the contrary, that they have had one joint sum for the poor of both parts of the parishes, and that they have settled their accounts at the end of each year." The only other Judge (Grose, J.) rested his judgment mainly on the same ground. The same question again came in consideration in a much later case of Bastock v. Ridgway. That was an issue to try whether the hamlet of Singleborough, in the parish of Great Horwood, in the county of Buckingham, was legally separated and divided from the township of Great Horwood, in the same parish, for the relief and maintenance of the poor. The following extract from the judgment of Bayley, J., which is in perfect conformity with the case above quoted, will suffice for our present purpose:—"To constitute a valid separation of the hamlet and township, there ought to have been not only a separate collection of funds, but a separate and distinct application of the funds themselves; for although a certain proportion of the funds may have been collected immemorially in particular districts within the parish, yet, if they all afterwards constitute one entire fund, and were applied to maintain the poor of the parish generally, it cannot then be said of that parish, that by reason of its largeness, it could not have the benefit of the statute of 43 Eliz." The concluding remarks of the learned Judge apply to a parish having the benefit of the statute of Elizabeth; but the precise question, it will be observed, was, whether one district was legally separated and divided from another. We entirely agree, and are fully satisfied with the soundness of these principles, and are of opinion, that they dispose of the second question, which must, therefore, be answered in the negative. It follows, that the earlier part of the first question must be answered in the affirmative; for we have already expressed our opinion, that St. Andrew's, Pershore, and Pensham, are not separated for the maintenance of their poor; and when we find it stated, without anything to the contrary, that each of the five townships or chapelries has maintained its own poor, without ever contributing to the repairs of the church, or maintenance of the poor of the "parish of St. Andrew's," it follows, that our answer must be in the affirmative on the whole question. We do not perceive that the third question, which is, whether the five enumerated chapelries, or any and which of them, were at the time of the passing of the statute of Elizabeth, reputed parishes or not, has any very material bearing on the principal point in dispute. That they all existed as chapelries, at the period in question, seems to be placed beyond a doubt; but when, in the earlier and most important documents, the endowment of 1331, and the terrier of 1585, which seems to have been very attentively and minutely drawn up, and in the parliamentary survey, they are all so clearly denominated chapelries, and in several of their own private documents, their officers are called by themselves chapelwardens, we see no reason for concluding, and do not think they had at the time in question acquired the title of parishes by reputation. We have already observed, as to the fourth question, that all the evidence seems to lead to one conclusion, namely, that each of the five chapelries has maintained its own poor separately from the time of the passing of the statute of Elizabeth. As to the fifth question, when we find from the parliamentary survey, that the curates, as they are called, of the chapelries, "are respectively appointed by the vicar of St. Andrew's," and that in the instrument of endowment and terrier, before referred to, they are described as "annexed or dependent," and also as "belonging to" the said church, we do not think that any of the five chapelries were "ecclesiastically separated from, and wholly independent of the mother church." Our answer to the second and most important question, applies in a great degree to the last. Generally speaking, when questions have arisen whether any district could have the benefit of the statute of Elizabeth, a leading principle has been the state of things existing before. If the district has had the benefit of the statute, that has always (except there may have been some important change in the state of things) been considered an important reason for its continuing to have it. "These circumstances," in the language of Grose, J. (10), "convince me that this parish can have, and has had, the benefit of the statute of Elizabeth." Without, therefore, entering into the question, (which it is not at all necessary to do,)

how far a district may be now subdivided for the purposes of the poor, our opinion, as before stated, is, that Pensham and Pershore have jointly maintained their poor; and, that nothing appears in the case to shew that they cannot continue to do so. Our answer, therefore, to this last question, must be in the affirmative.

1842. { THE QUEEN v. THE BIRMINGHAM AND GLOUCESTER RAILWAY COMPANY.

Corporation—Non-feasance—Indictment against, in Corporate Name.

An indictment will lie against a corporation aggregate, by their name of incorporation, for a non-feasance.

An indictment had been found, at the Worcester Quarter Sessions, against the Birmingham and Gloucester Railway Company, for disobedience to an order of Justices, and an order of Quarter Sessions confirming it.

A rule had been obtained to quash the indictment, upon the ground that the company were not indictable in their corporate name, but the Court refused to dispose of the question upon motion, and suggested that it should be raised by demurrer (1).

The case was argued in Hilary term last (January 26th), before Patteson, J., Williams, J., and Coleridge, J.

Whately, in support of the demurrer.—This indictment is not sustainable in its present form, as although an indictment may be preferred against individual members of a corporation, it will not lie against a company in their corporate name. It was preferred and found at Quarter Sessions, where the defendants were unable to plead to it, as they can only appear and plead by attorney in court, whereas at sessions the parties must appear in person. The fact, that the corporation could not plead below, is strong to shew that the indictment cannot be sustained in its present form. "They cannot commit treason, nor be outlawed, nor excommunicate, for they have no souls, neither can they appear in person, but by attorney"—10 Rep. 32, b; Com. Dig. 'Franchises,' F, 19. If convicted, no punishment could follow, as in misdemeanours the judgment is, that the party be taken to answer for his fine, as appears by the judgment in The King v. Fanshaw (2): "Super quo visis, et per Curiam hic plene intellectis omnibus et singulis premisis, consideratum est per Curiam hic, quod prædictus T. F. solvat dicto Domino Regi, pro fine suo, per Curiam hic super ipsum impositum, pro et occasione transgressionis, offensionis, nocuenti prædicti, unde in formâ prædictâ, convictus est 20*l.* Et quod idem T. F. capiatur ad satisfaciendum dicto Domino Regi, de fine prædictâ," &c. So trespass does not lie against a corporation, but against the particular persons only, for a capias and exigent do not go against a corporation—Com. Dig. 'Franchise,' (F, 19). In a note to Sutton the Marshal's case (3), it is stated by Holt, C.J., "A corporation is not indictable, but the particular members of it are." In 3 Chit. Crim. Law, 600, is the form of an indictment against the assignees of the corporation of Bath, for not repairing a public bridge, built in lieu of a ford, which the corporation were bound to maintain. The indictment ran: And the jurors, &c. present that the company of proprietors of the Kennett and Avon Canal Navigation, Charles Dundas, Anthony Bacon, &c., together with divers other persons, are the lessees and nominees of the mayor, aldermen, and common council. Then certain individuals were named, against whom the indictment was good, as they might be taken to satisfy the fine. So in The King v. the Mayor and Burgesses of Liverpool (4), and The King v. the Mayor, Aldermen, and Burgesses of Stratford-upon-Avon (5), if the defendants were found guilty, as soon as it was ascertained who was the mayor, he might be taken, or the aldermen, or burgesses. By a note furnished from the Crown Office, it appears, that in Hilary term, 1778, a motion was made to quash an indictment against "The owners and occupiers of a parcel of ground called Burne, in the parish of Easingwold," for not repairing a highway, because no particular persons were named; which rule was made absolute, without opposition, in the following Easter term. It would seem, therefore, that where the charge is against a body of persons ratione tenuræ, the individuals must be named. It was said, upon shewing cause against the rule to quash this indictment, that though a corporation aggregate may not be indictable for a misfeasance, that they are so for a non-feasance; an indictment, however, of this kind, is for a matter in the nature of a contempt, namely, for disobedience to an order. But a corporation can have had no notice of the order but through its members; if, therefore, there is any default, it is that of each individual, who, in that character, may be made liable.

Talfourd, Serj., contra.—No sufficient authority has been produced to shew that this indictment will not well lie. The dictum of Lord Holt, in 12 Mod., which is most in point, is noticed in Kyd on Corporations, 226, where, speaking of this dictum, the author observes, "But I apprehend this can only apply to the case of a crime or misdemeanour, and that an indictment may lie against a corporation in the cases mentioned, as well as against a county or a parish." In Yarborough v. the Bank of England (6), it was held, that a corporation might commit a tort, and were liable to an action of trover; and so, if this company were to enter upon lands without authority, it can hardly be doubted that trespass would lie against them. Much stress has been laid on the difficulty in the corporation to plead. That, however, does not exist, as they may make an attorney, and appear and plead by him. The first process to bring the party in, is a venire facias, which is in the nature of a summons, and if, on the return, it appears that he has lands in the county whereby he may be distrained, the distress infinite shall be awarded from time to time till he do appear—Hawk. Pleas of the Crown, bk. 2. c. 27. ss. 9, 10. In Chancery, the mode of process against corporations is shewn in the case of Salmon v. the Hamborough Company (7). In The King v. the Inhabitants of Clifton (8), Lord Kenyon observes, "Every difficulty respecting the process may be obviated by removing the record into this court."

[COLERIDGE, J. referred to The King v. the Severn and Wye Railway Company (9).]

It was admitted in that case, and in The King v. the Commissioners of the Dean In-closure (10), that an indictment would lie against a corporation. Precedents of such indictments for the non-repair of roads and bridges are numerous—The King v. the Mayor, Aldermen, Bailiffs, and Burgesses of Carlisle (11), The King v. the Dean of Christ Church and the Corporation of Oxford (12), The King v. the Mayor and Burgesses of Newcastle-upon-Tyne (13), The King v. the Mayor, Aldermen, and Burgesses of Stratford-upon-Avon, Thursfield v. Jones (14). It is not always the case that individuals are liable for the acts of the body—Harman v. Tappenden (15).

Whately, in reply.—The question is on the form of the indictment; and it seems the invariable course to include individuals, as well as to state the corporate name.

[PATTESON, J.—In the case of Stratford-upon-Avon, the corporate body only appears to have been indebted.]

[COLERIDGE, J.—If in those cases they may ascertain who is the mayor and who are the burgesses, and take them, may not the same thing be done here?]

[PATTESON, J.—The authority that was cited to shew that trespass would not lie, is much shaken by Yarborough v. the Bank of England; as if trover will lie, you can hardly contend trespass would not.]

Salmon v. the Hamborough Company supports the view, that the process should lie against the individuals. He also referred to The Queen v. the Mayor, Aldermen, and Burgesses of Poole (16).

Cur. adv. vult.

PATTESON, J.—This case was argued in the absence of my Lord Denman. It was an indictment against the railway company, by their corporate name, for refusing and neglecting to make an arch and certain other works, pursuant to an order of Justices, made under the authority of the Railway Act. The indictment was found at the Quarter Sessions, and removed into this Court by certiorari, when the company appeared, and demurred generally, upon the ground that an indictment would not lie against a corporation in their corporate name. Upon the argument it was hardly contended, on the part of the company, that an action of trespass might not be maintained against the corporation; for notwithstanding some dicta to the contrary in the older cases, it must be taken as settled law, since the case of Yarborough v. the Bank of England, and Maund v. the Glamorgan-shire Canal Company (17), that both trover and trespass are maintainable. But it is said, an indictment will not lie against a corporation. Only one direct authority was cited for this position, and it is a dictum of Lord Holt, in an anonymous case, reported in 12 Mod. p. 559. The report itself is as follows:—"Per Holt, C.J.—A corporation is not indictable, but the particular members of it are." What the nature of the offence was to which this observation was intended to apply, does not appear; but as a general proposition, it is opposed to a number of cases, which shew, that a corporation may be indicted for the breach of a duty imposed upon it by law, although not for a felony, or crimes involving personal violence, as for riot or assault—Hawkins's Pleas of the Crown, c. 65. s. 13. A corporation aggregate, liable by prescription, may be compelled to repair a highway or a bridge—Hawkins's Pleas of the Crown, c. 76. s. 8, and c. 77. s. 2. And in the case of The King v. the Mayor of Liverpool, the corporation were indicted by their corporate name for the non-repair of a highway. Upon argument in this court, the indictment was held to be defective, but no question was made as to the liability of a corporation to be indicted. In The King v. the Mayor of Stratford-upon-Avon, the corporation was indicted by its corporate name for the non-repair of a bridge, and found guilty; and upon argument in this court, the verdict was sustained, and no question made as to the liability generally of a corporation to an indictment for a breach of duty. Upon the discussion of the question, in the present case, the counsel for the company relied chiefly upon the circumstance of the indictment being found at the Quarter Sessions, where the company could not appear and take their trial, even if so disposed, as a corporation can only appear by attorney, and the appearance at the sessions must be in person. We think there is no weight in this objection. It may, indeed, impose some difficulty upon the prosecutor, and render his proceedings more circuitous, as he may be obliged to remove his indictment by certiorari into this court, in order to make it effective; but the liability of the corporation is not affected by that. In The King v. Gardner (18), it was objected, that a corporation could not be rated to the poor, for the remedy by imprisonment on failure of distress was impossible; but the Court considered the objection as of no weight, though it might be that some difficulty would be imposed in enforcing the rate. The proper mode of proceeding against a corporation to enforce the remedy by indictment, is by distress infinite to compel appearance, after removal by certiorari, as suggested by Parke, B., in this very case, reported in 9 Car. & Pay. 469, and as appears in 2 Hawkins, c. 27. s. 10, and the cases cited in Vin. Abr. 'Corporations,' B, a. We are therefore of opinion, that, upon this demurrer, there must be

Election. See Indictment.

Error—Defendant discharged on writ of error on judgment sentencing to hard labour, where offence is not subject to that punishment, 82

Estate—Settlement by, destroyed under section 68. of 3 & 4 Will. 4. c. 76, if party ceases to inhabit within ten miles, and not revived if he returns to inhabit within that distance, 18

— Ceasing to inhabit, by being removed as a pauper lunatic to lunatic asylum, within sec. 68. of Poor Law Act, 42

— Settlement by—Devise of real estates to trustees, to sell and stand possessed of the monies in trust to divide between nine children; the same to be to the sole and separate use of such daughters as should be married before testator's decease. Pauper marries one of the daughters before the death of the testator; and after his death, the pauper and his wife reside in a house, part of the property, for more than forty days, paying rent to the trustees; after which the property is sold, and the money divided: the pauper gains no settlement, 48

Evidence—What an admission that parties were overseers at the time of order of guardians of union to pay money, and of mandamus to compel such payment, 129

— See Examination.

Examination—Order of removal grounded on examination of pauper (a woman), "I am twenty-eight years of age; I was born illegitimate at S; I never did any act to gain a settlement," bad, on grounds of objection, that no legal evidence of a birth settlement in S. is disclosed in the examination, such evidence being only hearsay; and, that the order and examination are bad on the faces thereof. Per Patteson, J.—This examination contains no legal evidence of the place of birth, the time of birth, or the fact of illegitimacy, 34

— Under general ground of objection, that examination "is informal, and wholly insufficient in law, and bad on the face of it," and that "it does not contain any sufficient evidence of a settlement," appellant parish cannot object, that some material facts appear not to have been proved before the Magistrates by legal evidence, especially where there are other grounds of appeal, pointing out specific defects on the face of the examination, and not noticing this: e.g. where settlement by payment of parochial taxes relied on, and it does not appear that the parish books were produced or accounted for, or any other legal evidence of rating given. The respondent parish relied on a settlement gained by the pauper's husband's father, by payment of parochial taxes. It appeared on the face of the examination, that during the period in which such taxes were paid, the pauper's husband resided with his father as one of his family:—Held, that this was a sufficient statement, on the face of the examination, that the pauper's husband was unemancipated when his father acquired the settlement, 38

— Where order of removal proceeds upon the ground that a former order was made between the same parishes, against which there was no appeal, former order should be produced or accounted for upon the taking of the examinations; and examinations merely stating the fact of such an order, if objected to for that omission, bad, 107

— See Appeal.

False Imprisonment—Insufficiency of plea of justification in action for, stating that plaintiff unlawfully endeavoured to obtain a book belonging to partners of the defendant, by false pretences, not averring intent to defraud, and that defendant, having good and probable cause to suspect that plaintiff had by such false and fraudulent pretences unlawfully endeavoured to obtain the book for unlawful and unauthorized purposes, assaulted and gave him into custody, 13

— See Arrest.

False Pretences. See False Imprisonment.

Game—Information or complaint under rule 13. sch. L, 52 Geo. 3. c. 93, to be heard before the same Justice to whom it has been made. Whether conviction must take place within three months after offence committed, 45

Guardians—Competency of board of guardians of union to make order for payment of money on overseers of township which has not elected guardians; and mandamus to compel such payment. What amounts to admission that parties were overseers at the time of such order and of the mandamus, 129

— See Parish Property.

Habeas Corpus. See Vagrant Act.

Hampton Court Palace—Rateability of occupiers of apartments in, 65

Hearsay Evidence. See Examination.

Highway—Where form of order of Justices, under 5 & 6 Will. 4. c. 50. s. 65, directing party to cut hedges, &c., bad, so as to afford no justification to surveyor in trespass for cutting the hedges, &c., 10

— Insufficiency of plea in replevin, justifying taking goods for highway rate, under Magistrate's warrant, for not shewing on the face of it any facts to bring the case within the jurisdiction of the Magistrates, 22

— Construction of railway act, upon the question whether company are indictable for obstructing highway by building a wall across it, and giving the public a way neither so convenient nor so near as the old way, or as might be, 137

Indecency. See Indictment.

Indictment—for assault, found at the Quarter Sessions for the borough of Stamford; describing defendants as of the parish of S. B., in the county of Northampton, and within the borough of S., and alleging offence to have been committed "at the parish aforesaid, in the borough aforesaid." Certiorari and venire awarded into Lincolnshire, and defendants found guilty by a jury of that county:—Held, bad in arrest of judgment: although the title of the corporation of Stamford, as given in the Municipal Corporation Act, is "in the county of Lincoln;" and although in schedule O. of the Boundary Act, the borough of Stamford is enumerated among those for the same county; and although it appeared in evidence on the trial, that the offence was committed within 500 yards of the boundary of the counties. Queen's Bench no power to enter any suggestion to cure the defect, 55

— against two persons, charging them with meeting in a certain open and public place, for the purpose and with the intent of committing and perpetrating with each other, openly, lewdly, and indecently, divers nasty, wicked, filthy, lewd, beastly, unnatural, and sodomitical practices, and then and there unlawfully, wickedly, openly, lewdly, and indecently, committing and perpetrating with each other, in sight and view of divers of the liege subjects, &c., in the said public place there passing and being, divers such practices as aforesaid, too general, and bad in point of law, 74

— Sufficiency of indictment charging defendant with unlawfully having naval stores in his possession, he being a contractor, with respect to averment of time when he was not a contractor, 82

— Omission to state whose property goods and merchandise were, in an indictment for conspiracy to cheat and defraud prosecutors of, renders indictment bad, 102

Indictment—Prosecutor not required to elect whether he will proceed upon indictment for felony or misdemeanor, where both founded on same subject-matter, 105

— against corporation, in their corporate name, for a non-feasance, 134

— against railway company, having power to divert roads, for obstructing highway by building wall across it, where they had given another way not as convenient or as near to the old way as might be, 137

Mandamus—to hear appeal against order of removal, where Sessions have wrongly decided that grounds of appeal are insufficiently stated, 3

— Refusal of Court to interfere where Sessions have disposed of case rightly upon the facts, though the reasons on which their decision rested are not satisfactory, 57

— At what time application for rule nisi to enter continuances and hear appeal against order of removal should be made, 80

— Appellants not precluded from obtaining, to enter continuances and hear appeal, where appeal dismissed by Sessions, who tender a case which the appellants refuse to accept, 84

Master and Servant—Commitment of pitman under 4 Geo. 4. c. 31. s. 3, "to remain and be corrected and held to hard labour," void. Question whether void for uncertainty, in not pointing out ground of commitment, 127

CAP. I.

AN ACT better to provide for the Application to the Service of the Year One thousand eight hundred and forty-one of the Sums granted in the Two last Sessions of Parliament.

(15th February 1842.)

By this Act,

After reciting the passing of 4 & 5 Vict. c. 4, 4 & 5 Vict. c. 19, 4 & 5 Vict. c. 29, 4 & 5 Vict. c. 53, 5 Vict. c. 8, and 5 Vict. c. 11: and that the said several Acts were passed in the year 1841, and the whole of the sums thereby granted were for the service of the year ending on the 31st of March 1842; but by the said recited Acts the issue and application of the sums granted to Her Majesty in each of the said sessions respectively was restricted to the services voted in each such session: and that it is for the interest of the public service that that restriction should be removed, and that the several sums granted to Her Majesty by or under the said recited Acts, or any of them, should be issued or applied generally to the services of the year ending the 31st of March 1842,—

It is Enacted,

That so much of the hereinbefore recited Acts or any of them as limits or restricts the issue or application of the several sums granted to Her Majesty to the services voted in the respective sessions of Parliament in which such sums were granted shall be and the same is hereby repealed; and that the sums granted by the said recited Acts or any of them shall and may be issued or applied generally to any use, intent, or purpose mentioned in, or to defray any payment directed to be satisfied by, any hereinbefore recited Act or Acts of either of the two last sessions of Parliament; anything in any of the said recited Acts to the contrary notwithstanding.

CAP. II.

AN ACT to enable His Royal Highness Albert Edward Prince of Wales to make Leases and Grants of Land and Hereditaments, Parcel of His said Royal Highness' Duchy of Cornwall, or annexed to the same; and for the other Purposes therein mentioned.

(15th March 1842.)

ABSTRACT OF THE ENACTMENTS.

1. All leases, &c. granted by His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales declared valid.
 2. Conditions and duration of leases.
 3. Leases for buildings, cultivation of wastes, or working minerals.
 4. Covenants in leases as effectual as if His Royal Highness was possessed of an absolute estate.
 5. Saving of rights.
 6. Her Majesty during the minority of His Royal Highness to exercise the rights and powers of His Royal Highness.

By this Act,

After reciting that His Royal Highness Albert Edward Prince of Wales now stands seised of the duchy of Cornwall and the possessions thereof of an estate of inheritance under a special form of limitation differing from the ordinary rules of inheritance at common law, whereupon doubts have arisen whether leases and grants made by His said Royal Highness of any of the possessions of his said duchy will be good and effectual in law longer than for the life of His said Royal Highness: For avoiding of which doubts, and for the ease and quiet of the minds of such persons as have taken or shall hereafter take leases or grants from His said Royal Highness, and to the end that such persons may be sure to have good and indefeasible estates, and be encouraged to lay out monies in building and repairing or otherwise improving the several lands and tenements to them demised or granted, or to be demised or granted, and to take sets or leases of the mines and minerals parcel of the said possessions:—

It is Enacted,

I. That all leases or grants made or to be made by His said Royal Highness, by letters patent or indentures under the Great or Privy Seal of His said Royal Highness, or by copy of court roll, of any manors, messuages, parks, lands, tithes, tenements, or hereditaments, parcel of the possessions of the said duchy of Cornwall, or annexed to the same, shall be good and effectual in law, according to the purport and contents of the said leases or grants, against Her Majesty, her heirs and successors, and against the heirs and successors of His Royal Highness, Dukes of Cornwall, and against all and every person or persons who shall or may inherit or succeed to the said duchy, according to the said limitation or otherwise.

II. Provided and enacted, That every such lease or grant so made or to be made of any such manors, messuages, parks, lands, tithes, tenements, or hereditaments, in possession, shall be and shall be made for three lives or fewer, or for thirty-one years or under, or for some term of years determinable upon one, two, or three lives, and not above; and if such lease or grant be made in reversion or expectancy, that then the same, together with the estates in possession, do not exceed three lives, or the term of thirty-one years, and be not in anywise dispunishable of waste; and so as upon every such lease or grant there be or shall be reserved the ancient or most usual rent or more, or such rent as hath been reserved, yielded, or paid for such of the premises as are or shall be contained therein for the greater part of twenty years next before the making of the said lease or grant, such rent to be reserved, due, and payable to such as have the inheritance or other estate of and in the said duchy; and where no such rent hath been reserved or payable, that then upon every such lease or grant there be or shall be reserved a reasonable rent, not being under the twentieth part of the clear yearly value of the manors, messuages, parks, lands, tithes, tenements, or hereditaments contained in such lease or grant; and where the subject-matter of such lease or grant shall be mines, minerals, or tolls, dues, or royalties in respect of mines or minerals, that then upon every such lease or grant there be or shall be reserved a reasonable rent, payment, toll, due, dole, or dish, without taking or requiring any fine or fines whatsoever.

And after reciting that certain parts of the possessions of the said duchy are capable of improvement by the erection of substantial buildings thereon, and by the cultivation of waste lands, which cannot be undertaken by the leasees unless they are secured by a longer interest in the premises than thirty-one years, or a term of years determinable upon three lives:—

It is Enacted,

III. That it shall and may be lawful for His said Royal Highness, and His said Royal Highness is hereby empowered, to make leases and grants, by letters patent or indentures under the Great or Privy Seal of His said Royal Highness, of any lands, tenements, or hereditaments, parcel of the possessions of the said duchy, or annexed to the same, for any term of years not exceeding the term of ninety-nine years, expressly for the purpose of improving the same by erecting substantial buildings thereon, or for the purpose of improving waste lands by cultivation or otherwise: Provided always, that upon all such last-mentioned leases or grants so to be made improved annual ground rents be reserved and made payable as aforesaid during the terms therein limited, and no fines or other considerations be taken by His said Royal Highness further or other than the improved annual ground rents hereby directed to be reserved as aforesaid.

IV. That all covenants, conditions, reservations, and agreements contained in every such lease or grant made or to be made as aforesaid shall be good and effectual in law, according to the words and contents of the same, as well for and against them to whom the reversion of the said manors, messuages, parks, lands, tithes, tenements, or hereditaments shall come, as for and against them to whom the interest of such leases or grants shall come, respectively, as if His said Royal Highness, at the time of making such covenants, conditions, reservations, and agreements, had been or were seised of an absolute estate in fee simple in the same manors, messuages, parks, lands, tithes, tenements, or hereditaments.

V. Saving always to all and every person and persons, bodies politic and corporate, their heirs and successors, executors, administrators, and assigns, other than His said Royal Highness, his heirs and successors, Dukes of Cornwall, and other than Her Majesty, her heirs and successors, and all and every person and persons, and the leasees of such person and persons, that shall hereafter inherit and enjoy the said duchy of Cornwall, by force of any Act of Parliament or other limitation whatsoever, all such rights, titles, estates, customs, interests, tenures, terms, claims, and demands whatsoever, of what nature, kind, or quality soever, of, in, to, or out of the said manors, messuages, parks, lands, tithes, tenements, or hereditaments, or any of them, parcel of or annexed to the said duchy of Cornwall, as they or any of them had or ought to have had before the making of this Act, to all intents and purposes, and in as large and ample manner and form, as if this Act had never been made, this Act or anything herein contained to the contrary notwithstanding.

And after reciting that doubts may exist respecting the extent of the power and authority of Her most excellent Majesty as guardian of His said Royal Highness during the minority of His said Royal Highness, and it is expedient that such doubts should be removed:—

It is Enacted,

VI. That it shall be lawful for Her Majesty, during such minority, to exercise, in the name and on the behalf of His said Royal Highness, all the rights, powers, privileges, and authorities which appertain to or might be exercised by His Royal Highness in respect of his said duchy of Cornwall if of full age; and that all acts, matters, and things done or to be done during such minority, in the name and on the behalf of His said Royal Highness, by Her Majesty, as such guardian, or by any other persons acting under the authority of Her Majesty, in pursuance of and in conformity with the powers and authorities to them in that behalf committed by Her Majesty, shall be good, valid, and effectual in law as if the same had been and were done, and the same shall to all intents and purposes be deemed and taken to have been and to be done, by His said Royal Highness himself, in his own proper person, and at his full and perfect age: Provided always, that all leases and grants of any of the possessions of the said duchy to be made during the minority of His said Royal Highness shall be subject to the provisions of this Act: And provided also, that all offices, appointments, and employments belonging to His said Royal Highness in right of his said duchy, given or bestowed during such minority, which may by law be given or bestowed during pleasure, shall be determinable by His said Royal Highness at any time after he shall attain the age of twenty-one years.

CAP. III.

AN ACT to confirm an Act of the Legislature of Van Diemen's Land for authorizing the Levy of certain Duties of Customs and on Spirits.

(15th March 1842.)

ABSTRACT OF THE ENACTMENTS.

1. Proclamation of 4th February 1829.—Colonial Act, 2nd of January 1834.—Proclamation confirmed.
2. Indemnity for levying rates or duties under the proclamation.
3. Act may be amended, &c.

By this Act,

After reciting that in pursuance of the powers and authorities vested in the Lieutenant Governor of Van Diemen's Land by 59 Geo. 3. c. 114, and by 3 Geo. 4. c. 96, a proclamation was made and issued by his Excellency Colonel George Arthur, Lieutenant Governor of the Island of Van Diemen's Land and its dependencies, bearing date the 4th of February 1829, for the imposing and levying of certain rates and duties of Customs, and a certain rate or duty on spirits distilled within the colony: and that by 9 Geo. 4. c. 83. ss. 26, 27, the two first-mentioned Acts were made perpetual, but it was by the last-mentioned Act provided that the powers and authorities by those Acts created should thenceforth be vested in and exercised by the persons administering the government of New South Wales and Van Diemen's Land respectively, with the advice and consent of their respective legislative councils: And that the said Lieutenant Governor, being the person then administering the government of Van Diemen's Land, did, by an Act passed, with the advice of the legislative council of Van Diemen's Land, on the 2nd of January 1834, intitled, 'An Act to confirm and continue certain Duties of Customs and Duties on Spirits,' declare that the said proclamation of the 4th of February 1829, and every provision therein contained, should be confirmed and established: and that doubts have been entertained whether such confirmation was of force to make good in law the said proclamation, and the levying of the duties thereby ordered to be levied, before the passing of the said Act of the Colonial legislature, and that it is expedient to remove such doubts:—

It is Enacted,

I. That the said proclamation, and every provision therein contained, shall be holden good in law, and taken to be of the same force as if the same had been made on the 4th of February 1829, by the said Lieutenant Governor, with the advice of the Legislative Council of Van Diemen's Land.

II. That no personal action or suit, indictment, information, prosecution, or proceeding whatsoever, shall be prosecuted or commenced against any governor or lieutenant governor of Van Diemen's Land, or against any person or persons, for having advised, commanded, or carried into execution any orders for the levy of any rate or duty in the said colony ordered by the said proclamation previous to the 2nd of January 1834; and that if any action or suit, indictment, information, or any other proceeding, shall be prosecuted or commenced against any person or persons, by reason of any thing so advised, commanded, appointed, or done, it shall be lawful for the defendant in any such action, suit, indictment, or information as aforesaid to apply to the Court in which such action shall be brought, during the sitting of such Court, or to any Judge of such court during vacation, for stay of proceedings, and such Court and such Judge respectively shall stay such proceedings accordingly.

III. That this Act may be amended or repealed by any Act to be passed in this present session of Parliament.

CAP. IV.

It is Enacted,

1. That it shall be lawful for Her Majesty from time to time, by letters patent under the Great Seal of the United Kingdom, to establish within the territorial limits of the existing dioceses of Jamaica and Barbadoes three or more dioceses, with such and so many archdeaconries within each diocese, as to Her Majesty shall seem meet, and for that purpose to revoke the letters patent under the Great Seal aforesaid under which the existing dioceses of Barbadoes and Jamaica, and the existing archdeaconries within the same respectively, have been established: Provided always, that no such letters patent, if issued during the life and incumbency of any such bishop, shall take effect or be of any force or authority within his diocese, unless he shall first, by a notarial act under his hand and the public seal of his diocese, to be deposited in the registry thereof, have declared his consent to the operation, during his own incumbency, within his diocese, of any such letters patent.

II. That it shall be lawful for Her Majesty, by any such letters patent as aforesaid, from time to time to make any such new apportionment and appropriation as to Her Majesty shall seem fit, among such new bishops and archdeacons, of the sums of money which by virtue of the said recited Acts are payable out of the growing produce of the Consolidated Fund as the salaries of the bishops and archdeacons therein mentioned; and that it shall be lawful for Her Majesty, in manner aforesaid, to apportion and appropriate so much of the total amount of such sums of money as to Her Majesty shall seem fit for the maintenance of such new bishops as aforesaid, and so much thereof as to Her Majesty shall seem fit to the maintenance of such new archdeacons as aforesaid, without reference to, and without the observance of, the proportions in which the said sums of money are by the said recited Acts apportioned for the maintenance of bishops and archdeacons respectively: Provided, that nothing herein contained shall authorize any diminution, during the life and incumbency of any bishop or archdeacon, of any salary to which he is or shall be by law entitled.

III. That it shall be lawful for Her Majesty, by any such letters patent as aforesaid, from time to time to assign to the respective bishops of such future dioceses as aforesaid the power of distributing among the ministers, catechists, and schoolmasters of their respective dioceses, with the approbation of the Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury, or of one of Her Majesty's Principal Secretaries of State, the sum of £300*l.* per annum in the said recited Act mentioned, in such proportion as Her Majesty shall see fit to apportion that sum between the said future dioceses: Provided always, that nothing herein contained shall authorize any diminution, during the life and incumbency of any minister, catechist, or schoolmaster, of any salary to which he is or shall be by law entitled.

IV. That it shall and may be lawful for the Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury for the time being, or any three or more of them, and they are hereby authorized and required, from time to time, by warrant or warrants under their hands, to direct the proper officer of the Exchequer to issue and pay, out of the growing produce of the Consolidated Fund of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, to such person or persons as may be appointed to receive the same, the several annual salaries or sums of money before mentioned, according to such new apportionment and appropriation thereof as, in pursuance of this present Act, shall from time to time be made by Her Majesty by any such letters patent as aforesaid.

And after reciting that by the said first-recited Act His said late Majesty, his heirs and successors, were authorized to give and grant to any person who should execute the office of bishop of either of the dioceses therein mentioned, and who should resign the same respectively, certain annuities or pensions; and it is expedient that, subject to the exception hereinafter contained, the said provision should be repealed:—

It is Enacted,

v. That so much of the said recited Act, 6 Geo. 4. as empowered His said late Majesty, his heirs and successors, to grant annuities or pensions on the resignation of the dioceses therein mentioned shall be and the same is hereby repealed, save and except only so far as respects the respective bishops of the said dioceses of Jamaica and Barbadoes who had been appointed to the same respectively before the making of this present Act.

VI. That this Act may be repealed or amended during this present session of Parliament.

(23rd March 1842.)

By this Act,

1. The Act 3 & 4 Vict. c. 110. is further continued to the 1st of August 1843.
- II. Act may be amended this session.

CAP. VI.—IRELAND.

AN ACT to amend an Act of Her present Majesty for vacating any Presentment for rebuilding the Gaol of Newgate in Dublin, and any Contract between the Commissioners for rebuilding the said Gaol and the Contractor.

(23rd March 1842.)

ABSTRACT OF THE ENACTMENTS.

1. The balance due to the widow of the contractor on foot of the award, as also the expenses of the arbitration, shall be raised by grand jury presentment off the county of the city of Dublin.
2. Costs and expenses to be first taxed.
3. In default of grand jury presenting, the Court shall make an order of the same effect.
4. Act may be amended this session.

By this Act,

After reciting the passing of 3 & 4 Vict. c. 53, whereby, among other things, provision was made for ascertaining by arbitration the compensation to be made to the contractor for rebuilding the gaol of Newgate in the city of Dublin, for any losses sustained by him, by reason of such contract not being carried into effect: and that the sum of 1,700*l.* was accordingly awarded to John North, the contractor for rebuilding the said gaol, in full for his damages, expenses, and costs in relation to the said contract: and that, in pursuance of the presentment previously made for rebuilding the said gaol, a sum of 1,530*l.* was raised off the county of the city of Dublin, and paid to the collector of Excise of the Dublin District, pursuant to the provisions of 7 Geo. 4. c. 74; and the Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury, by virtue of the said last-mentioned Act, had advanced to the Commissioners for rebuilding the said gaol the sum of 500*l.*, which was expended by them in the preparation of the necessary plans and specifications for the then intended building: and that, after the repayment of the said sum of 500*l.* so advanced by the Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury, there remained in the hands of the said collector of Excise only a sum of 1,030*l.* applicable to the payment of the said sum of 1,700*l.* so awarded to the said John North; and the said sum of 1,030*l.* has been paid, pursuant to the provisions of the hereinbefore first recited Act, to Anne North, administratrix of the said John North, who is lately deceased, but there is still due to the said Anne North, as such administratrix, the sum of 670*l.* on foot of the said award: and that the provisions made by the said first-recited Act for the payment of any sum which might be awarded to the said contractor, exceeded the amount of the instalments then paid to the collector of Excise for the said Dublin District for and on account of the said presentment, are not effective for that purpose, and no provision was thereby made for defraying the costs and expenses attendant upon the said arbitration; and it is necessary to make provision for both such purposes, and to amend the said first-recited Act accordingly:—

It is Enacted,

I. That the said sum of 670*l.* so remaining due to the said Anne North, as administratrix of the said John North, on foot of the said award, as also the costs and expenses of the said arbitration, together with the expenses of witnesses, and all other costs and expenses attendant upon the said arbitration and award, or which may have been incurred in the settlement of the matter aforesaid, shall be raised by presentment by the grand jury of the county of the city of Dublin at the next or any subsequent presenting term, on the certificate of the chief or under secretary of the Lord Lieutenant or other chief governor or governors of Ireland, specifying the sum or sums to be so raised, in like manner as grand jury presentments are now by law raised on or off the said county; and that the said sum of 670*l.* shall, when so raised, be paid to the said Anne North, or the person who shall then be the personal representative of the said John North, and that the sum or sums due on account of the said costs and expenses shall, when so raised, be paid to the person or persons who shall in and by such certificate be declared entitled thereto.

II. Provided and enacted, That the said costs and expenses shall be taxed and ascertained, and the amount thereof, and the person or persons to whom the same may be due respectively, certified by the Senior Master of the High Court of Chancery in Ireland to the said chief or under secretary, who shall insert the same accordingly in the certificate to be laid before the said grand jury as aforesaid.

III. That in case the said grand jury of the county of the city of Dublin, at any such presenting term as aforesaid, shall, on the production of the said certificate of the said chief or under secretary, neglect or refuse duly to present the sum or sums therein mentioned and contained, the Court shall, at the same presenting term, make an order directing the sum or sums mentioned and contained in such certificate to be raised, apportioned, levied, and applied as if the same had been so presented; and such order shall have the force and effect of a presentment; and the treasurer of the said county of the city of Dublin shall insert the sum or sums mentioned in such order in his warrant, and the same shall be apportioned, raised, levied, and applied in like manner, to all intents and purposes, as if the same had been duly presented by such grand jury.

IV. That this Act may be amended or repealed by any Act to be passed in the present session of Parliament.

It is Declared and Enacted,

- i. That all the powers and provisions of the said Acts and each of them shall be taken to extend to apprentices where no sum or premium of apprenticeship has been or shall be paid on the binding of such apprentice.

IV. That all and every sum and sums of money which shall be paid into the Bank of England to the account of the Commissioners for executing this Act, under and by virtue of this Act, shall from time to time, immediately on such payments being made to the said account, be transferred by the Governor and Company of the Bank of England to the account kept by the said Bank of England with Her Majesty's Exchequer, and when so transferred shall be carried to and made part of the Consolidated Fund of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland.

That the said Commissioners of the said recited Acts and of this Act, at any time after the passing of this Act, may lend and advance, and apportion or distribute, and authorize to be paid, to and amongst any body or bodies politic or corporate, or any company or companies of proprietors, or any person or persons engaged in or desirous of carrying on or interested in any works of a public nature, carried on or which may be hereafter carried on under the authority of Parliament, or for the encouragement of the fisheries, or for the support of any collieries or mines, or for the building, rebuilding, enlarging, repairing, improving, or fitting up of any county or town halls, or of any county lunatic asylums, or to any trustees or trustee of roads or railways, or any other person or persons whomsoever, for any of the purposes mentioned in the said recited Acts or any or either of them, or this Act, or any Act or Acts having relation thereto, all or any part or parts of the said monies to be issued and paid out of the Consolidated Fund as aforesaid, for such times or periods, at such rate or rates of interest (if any), upon such securities, and subject to such or the like terms and conditions, or any or either of them, as are in and by the same Acts respectively specified and prescribed in regard to loans of Exchequer bills under the said recited Acts, or any or either of them, or any Act or Acts of Parliament having relation thereto; and that in case any such loans or advances shall be made for the purpose of building, rebuilding, enlarging, repairing, improving, or fitting up of any county or town halls, or of any county lunatic asylum, such loans or advances shall be made on the like application, and on such or the like security of rates, to be expressly made for such purpose by the Justices of the Peace for the county, city, town, or place in or to which such halls or asylums shall be respectively situate or belong, and which rates such Justice are hereby authorized and empowered to make, accordingly, and on such or the like terms, and subject to such or the like provisions, as are in and by the said recited Acts 4 Geo. 4. c. 63, expressed and contained in regard to advances or loans to be made thereunder for the building, rebuilding, enlarging, or repairing of gaols in England.

And after reciting, that in pursuance of the said recited Act of 1 & 2 Vict. c. 88, and of an Act also passed in the 1 & 2 Vict. c. 56, intituled, 'An Act for the more effectual Relief of the Destitute Poor in Ireland,' the sum of 250,000*l.*, part of the sum of 500,000*l.* by the said first-mentioned Act of 1 & 2 Vict. authorized to be raised in Exchequer bills, has been appropriated or reserved, under the authority or direction of the Commissioners of Her present Majesty's Treasury, for the promotion and extension of public works in Ireland, and for building, fitting, and furnishing workhouses in Ireland, and other the objects for which such loans are authorized by the said secondly-mentioned Act, 200,000*l.* whereof in Exchequer bills has, under the like authority, been applied, advanced, or lent for such last-mentioned purposes accordingly; and the sum of 800,000*l.*, part of the sum of 1,200,000*l.* by the said Act of 3 Vict. c. 10, authorized to be raised in Exchequer bills, has, under the like authority or direction, been appropriated for building, fitting, and furnishing workhouses in Ireland, and other the objects for which such loans are authorized by the said secondly-mentioned Act, under the powers and provisions of the said two Acts of 1 & 2 Vict. and it is expedient that further advances should be authorized to be made for the same lastly-mentioned purposes :—

It is Enacted,

XII. That the said Commissioners for the execution of this Act may receive applications for any loan or loans, and make such loan or loans accordingly, of any part or parts of the said monies to be issued and paid out of the Consolidated Fund as aforesaid, unto the guardians of any union or electoral division, or other persons, by the said secondly-mentioned Act of 1 & 2 Vict. authorized to borrow and obtain the same, for the building, fitting, and furnishing workhouses in Ireland, or other the purposes for which such money is by such lastly-mentioned Act authorized to be borrowed, repayable by such instalments, at such interest, upon such security, on such terms, and subject to such conditions and provisions, as are mentioned and contained in the said last-mentioned Act; save only and except that where by the said last-mentioned Act it is provided that the first of such instalments shall be repaid at or before the expiration of one year after the time of the advance of such money, if at the time of such advance any workhouse in the said union shall have been declared by the said Commissioners of the same Act fit for the reception of destitute poor, and if no workhouse in the union shall have been so declared fit, then at or before the expiration of one year after the time when some workhouse shall have been so declared fit, such provisions shall, as well with reference to any loans or advances already made or which shall hereafter be made under the said two recited Acts of 1 & 2 Vict., and the said Act of 3 Vict., as also with reference to all loans or advances to be made under this present Act, be construed and taken as referring to a permanent workhouse fit for the reception of destitute poor, and not to any temporary or occasional workhouse which may have been or which may be fitted up for any such union; and that all declarations which may have been made by the said Commissioners of the said secondly-recited Act of 1 & 2 Vict., as to the fitness of any such temporary or occasional workhouse for the reception of destitute poor, shall, so far as regards the charges or securities which have been made or executed under the powers or provisions of the same Act, be deemed and considered as null and void.

XIII. That it shall be lawful for the said Commissioners of the said recited Acts authorizing the issue of Exchequer bills, and of this Act, to receive applications for any loan or loans, and to make such loans accordingly, of any part or parts of the said monies to be issued and paid out of the Consolidated Fund as aforesaid, to any person or persons, body or bodies politic or corporate, or company or companies, in that part of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland called Ireland, for all such and the same or the like purposes, and upon such or the like securities, and under and subject to such and the same rules, regulations, restrictions, conditions, and provisions, as the said Commissioners are empowered to do by the said recited Acts or this Act with respect to loans or advances to persons, bodies politic or corporate, or companies, for public or other works in Great Britain; and that the said last-mentioned Commissioners, and their secretary for the time being, shall have, exercise, and be entitled to all such and the same or the like powers, authorities, rights, and remedies in relation thereto as they respectively would have had or been entitled to under the said recited Acts and this Act in case such loans or advances had been made to any person or persons, body or bodies politic or corporate, or company or companies, or otherwise, for public or other works in any part of Great Britain; any statute, or any rule of law or equity, of Great Britain or of Ireland, or any custom to the contrary thereof in anywise notwithstanding.

XIV. That all the clauses, powers, authorities, provisoes, directions, regulations, restrictions, privileges, priorities, advantages, penalties, and forfeitures contained in the said recited Acts or any of them, in relation to any advances of Exchequer bills or money made or to be made under the said recited Acts or any of them, or for the recovery and repayment of such advances, shall extend and are hereby extended and made applicable to all loans and advances of money to be made under the authority of this Act, and to all acts, matters, and things made, done, executed, or directed by the said Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury, or the said Commissioners for executing this Act and the said recited Acts, or either of them, or their secretary for the time being, or any other persons, parties, bodies politic or corporate, under the authority of the said recited Acts or this Act, or any or either of them, and the recovery and repayment of such advances, in such or the like manner, to all intents, constructions, and purposes whatsoever, as if such clauses, powers, authorities, provisoes, directions, regulations, restrictions, privileges, priorities, advantages, penalties, and forfeitures had been particularly and severally repeated and re-enacted in the body of this Act, except only so far as the same are amended, extended, or altered by any subsequent Act or by this present Act.

XV. That all mortgages, conveyances, assignments, charges, securities, or other assurances, which shall from time to time be taken by or on the part of the said Commissioners of the said recited Acts and of this Act, or by their secretary, shall be made and prepared in such form as the said Commissioners shall from time to time order or direct, and when executed by the mortgagors or other parties making such mortgages, conveyances, assignments, charges, securities, or other assurances, shall be valid and effectual in the law to pass all the estate or interest of such mortgagors or other persons in the property, estate, or effects comprised therein (except where otherwise expressly provided by such mortgages, conveyances, assignments, charges, securities, or other assurances, and for all other the objects and purposes expressed or intended to be affected by such mortgages, conveyances, assignments, charges, securities, or other assurances,) but subject nevertheless to such right of redemption, if any, as shall or may, by such mortgages, conveyances, assignments, charges, securities, or other assurances, be reserved to the mortgagors or other persons executing the same as aforesaid, and to such other right or equity of redemption, if any, as shall or may arise thereout under any rule of equity; and the fact of the secretary of the said Commissioners being a party to such mortgages, conveyances, assignments, charges, securities, or other assurances shall be deemed conclusive evidence of the same mortgages, conveyances, assignments, charges, securities, or other assurances having been so made and prepared in the form prescribed by and under the order and direction of the said Commissioners; and that all mortgages, conveyances, assignments, charges, securities, or other assurances already executed unto the said Commissioners to their secretary shall be deemed and taken to have been prepared, in like manner, under the order or direction of the said Commissioners, and shall also be deemed and taken to have had the like operation in passing all the estate or interest of the mortgagors or other persons executing the same, in the property, estate, or effects comprised therein, or for all other the objects and purposes aforesaid, or intended to be effected thereby, except and subject as aforesaid.

XVI. That all demises or leases which by the said recited Acts or this Act the said Commissioners are authorized to grant or execute shall and may, if they shall think proper, be granted and executed by their secretary for the time being, under their order or direction; and every such demise or lease as shall be executed by such secretary shall be deemed and taken to have been executed by him under such order and direction of the said Commissioners, unless the contrary be shewn by any person or persons interested in contesting the validity of such demise or lease.

And after stating that by the said recited Act of the 3 Geo. 4. c. 86, it is amongst other things enacted, that in all cases of loans advanced under the provisions of the said therein recited Acts or any of them, or of that Act, it should be lawful for any parties or persons, bodies politic or corporate, or company or companies of proprietors, who might be desirous of discharging and paying off the amount of the principal money and interest due or thereafter to become due to the said Commissioners, or to their secretary for the time being, on any loan or loans advanced under the said therein recited Acts or any of them, or which should thereafter be advanced under the said therein recited Acts or any of them, or that Act, and he or they were thereby empowered, to borrow such sum or sums of money as might be required for such purpose of any person or persons willing to advance the same, on the security of an assignment of the mortgage or other security given to the said Commissioners, or their secretary for the time being, for the loan or loans which might be proposed to be paid off as aforesaid, and which assignment the said Commissioners were thereby authorized and empowered to direct their secretary to make, upon such terms and conditions as the said Commissioners should, under the circumstances of any such case, at any time deem expedient, and the parties or persons, bodies politic or corporate, or company or companies of proprietors, to whom such assignment should be made, should, under and by virtue thereof, in all respects be entitled to such and the like priority, powers, privileges, and advantages as the said Commissioners were entitled to on the security so assigned, until the principal and interest remaining due and secured thereby should be fully paid and discharged; and that doubts have arisen whether such enactment authorizes the paying off, assignment, or transfer of a portion only of any loan or loans for the time being remaining due to the said Commissioners on any such mortgage or security as aforesaid, and the borrowing of sufficient monies for such purpose, and it is expedient to obviate such doubts, and otherwise to extend the operation of the said enactment:—

XVII. That in all cases where at any time or times any parties, persons, bodies politic or corporate, or company or companies of proprietors, entitled to or interested in the right or equity of redemption of any property, works, rates, tolls, or other effects comprised in any mortgage, charge, or other security for the time being vested in the said Commissioners or their secretary, under the provisions of the said recited Acts or any of them, or this Act, or any other person or persons whatsoever, shall be desirous of discharging or paying the whole or any portion or portions of the mortgage or other debt and interest for the time being remaining due or owing to the said Commissioners or to their secretary on such mortgage, charge, or other security, it shall and may be lawful for the said Commissioners, if they shall think proper so to do, to accept payment of the same mortgage or other debt, and interest, or of such portion or portions thereof as aforesaid, and in consideration thereof to direct their secretary to make and execute such release, assignment, transfer, declaration of trust, or other assurance of the mortgage or other debt, and interest, or portion or portions, respectively so discharged or paid, and of the property, works, rates, tolls, or effects comprised in such mortgage, charge, or other security, or any part or parts thereof, or any estate or interest therein, unto or in favour or according to the direction of the party or parties, person or persons, bodies politic or corporate, or company or companies of proprietors, discharging or paying, or procuring the discharge or payment of the same mortgage or other debt, and interest, or of such portion or portions thereof respectively as aforesaid, upon such terms and conditions, and in such manner and form, in all respects, as they the said Commissioners shall, under the circumstances of any such case, deem expedient; and the party or parties, person or persons, bodies politic or corporate, or company or companies of proprietors, who may be so desirous of discharging or paying such mortgage or other debt, and interest, or such portion or portions thereof as aforesaid, shall be and they are hereby empowered to borrow all such sum or sums of money as may be requisite for that purpose, or any part thereof, or any person or persons, bodies politic or corporate, or company or companies of proprietors whomsoever, who shall be willing to lend and advance the same on the security of such assignment, transfer, declaration of trust, or other assurance as aforesaid; and the party or parties, person or persons, bodies politic or corporate, and company or companies of proprietors, unto or in whose favour any such assignment, transfer, declaration of trust, or other assurance shall be so executed as aforesaid, shall, under and by virtue thereof, to the extent to which the same shall be thereby conceded or granted by the said Commissioners, or their secretary by their direction, be entitled to all such and the like priorities, powers, privileges, and advantages as the said Commissioners were or would have been entitled to under the mortgage, charge, or other security the benefit whereof shall be so assigned, transferred, or otherwise assured, or in part assigned, transferred, or otherwise assured, until the mortgage or other debt and interest or portion or portions so respectively assigned, transferred, or otherwise assured, shall be fully paid and discharged, and that either subject and without prejudice to, or with priority over or concurrently with, the powers, privileges, and advantages of the said Commissioners in respect of the part or portion, if any, of the said mortgage or other debt, and interest, which for the time being shall or may be still remaining due and owing to the said Commissioners, and not comprised in such assignment, transfer, or other assurance, according as the same may be so conceded or granted by the said Commissioners, or their secretary by their direction, in and by such assignment, transfer, or other assurance; and that the said Commissioners, or their secretary by their direction, shall have full power and authority to enter into and accede to all such arrangements in regard to such releases, assignments, transfers, declarations of trust, or other assurances, and as to the mode of effectuating the same, as they the said Commissioners shall deem expedient; and that the concurrence of the secretary for the time being of the said Commissioners in any such release, assignment, transfer, declaration of trust, or other assurance, under the alleged order or direction of the said Commissioners, shall, in favour of all parties claiming thereunder, be deemed sufficient evidence of the same, and the several provisions therein contained having been executed and entered into under the order and direction of the said Commissioners.

XVIII. That in case at any time or times hereafter the parties or persons, bodies politic or corporate, or company or companies of proprietors, entitled to or interested in the right or equity of redemption of the property, works, rates, tolls, or effects comprised in or affected by any mortgage, charge, or other security vested in the said Commissioners, or their secretary for the time being, under the provisions of the said recited Acts or any of them, or this Act, shall be desirous of leasing, selling, or otherwise disposing of the same property, works, rates, tolls, or effects, or any part or parts thereof, or of procuring the same or any part thereof, for any other purpose, to be released or discharged from the mortgage or other debt for the time being remaining due and owing to the said Commissioners on such mortgage, charge, or other security, it shall and may be lawful for the said Commissioners, if they shall think proper so to do, and notwithstanding they may not for the time being have taken possession of such property, works, rates, tolls, or effects, under the powers and provisions of the said recited Acts or of this Act, to direct and empower their secretary for the time being, for and on behalf of them the said Commissioners, to concur in all such leases, conveyances, or other assurances or releases as may be requisite or be deemed expedient for effectuating such objects, either in consideration of any previous diminution or part payment of such mortgage or other debt, or in consideration of the fine or fines (if any) or sum or sums of money to be paid as the consideration for such leases, purchases, or conveyances, or any part thereof, or any other sum or sums of money, being paid to the said Commissioners or to their secretary, in or towards satisfaction of the principal and interest money for the time being remaining due to the said Commissioners or their secretary on such mortgage, charge, or other security, or for any other consideration, as the said Commissioners shall deem meet, or, if the said Commissioners shall think proper, without any pecuniary consideration, and generally to concur in or accede to all such arrangements in regard to such leases, conveyances, or other assurances, or dispositions and releases, and the reservations, covenants, stipulations, and agreements in such leases, conveyances, or other assurances to be respectively reserved and contained, as they the said Commissioners shall deem expedient or proper; and that the concurrence of the secretary for the time being of the said Commissioners in any such lease, conveyance, release, or other assurance, under the alleged order or direction of the said Commissioners, shall, in favour of all parties claiming thereunder, be deemed sufficient evidence of the same, and the several provisions therein contained, having been executed and entered into under the order and direction of the said Commissioners.

XIX. That in case the said Commissioners shall, under and in pursuance of the powers or authorities of any of the said recited Acts or this Act, make any sale or other absolute disposition of any public works, interest, property, or effects comprised in any mortgage, assignment, or other charge, already executed or hereafter to be executed, under the provisions of any of the said recited Acts or this Act, it shall and may be lawful for them to deduct and retain out of the clear monies thereby produced, after the payment of the costs, charges, and expenses of or incident to the preparing for and making such sale or other disposition, so far as such clear monies will extend, all the principal monies for the time being remaining due or owing or secured upon or by virtue of such mortgage, assignment, or charge, notwithstanding the whole of such principal money, or any instalments thereof, may not, according to the terms or provisions of such mortgage, assignment, or charge, have become actually due and payable, together with all interest (if any) for the time being accrued due on such principal monies.

XX. That if and when the said Commissioners have sold or made any absolute disposition, or shall hereafter sell or make any disposition, of any public works, interest, property, or effects whatsoever, of which they may have taken or shall take possession in pursuance of the powers contained in any of the said recited Acts or this Act, the same public works, interest, property, or effects shall, in respect and to the extent of the estate or interest so sold or otherwise disposed of, be held freed and discharged from all claim and demand of the persons, parties, bodies politic, corporate, or collegiate, or companies, by whom the same were conveyed or transferred to the said Commissioners or to their secretary, and of all persons or bodies claiming under them, and in all respects as if such persons, parties, bodies politic, corporate, or collegiate, or companies, making such conveyance or transfer, and all persons or bodies claiming under them, were in all respects, to such extent as aforesaid, foreclosed from all equity or right of redemption of or in respect of the premises so sold or disposed of: Provided nevertheless, that nothing herein contained shall be taken or construed to prejudice the rights and remedies of any persons or parties, bodies corporate, politic, or collegiate, or companies, as against the said Commissioners or their secretary, for or in respect of any surplus of the monies which shall or may arise or be produced by or in consequence of such Commissioners or their secretary, or any other person or persons on their account, entering into possession, and conducting, carrying on, or managing of such works, interest, property, or effects, or by or in consequence of their entering into the receipt of such tolls, rates, rents, or other profits of such works, interests, property, or effects, or by or in consequence of the said Commissioners selling or otherwise disposing thereof as aforesaid, after paying and discharging all the costs, charges, and expenses of or incident to such entering into possession of such works, interest, property, or effects, or the conducting, managing, or carrying on the same, or receiving or collecting of such tolls, rates, rents, and profits, or of the selling and disposing of such works, interest, property, or effects as aforesaid, and also after paying and discharging all the principal, interest, or other monies, which shall for the time being be due or owing on the security of the same works, interest, property or effects, tolls, rates, or rents respectively, under or by virtue of the provisions of the said recited Acts or this Act, or any or either of them, and which clear surplus monies, together with all such estate or interest (if any) of and in the said works, interest, property, or effects, tolls, rates, rents, and profits (if any), which shall remain unsold or undisposed of, after payment of all such costs, charges, and expenses, principal, interest, or other monies, shall result in equity or belong to such persons or parties, bodies corporate, politic, or collegiate, or companies respectively, and be accounted for and re-conveyed or re-assured to them respectively accordingly: Provided nevertheless, that in case at any public auction to be held for the sale or disposition of any public works, interest, property, or effects whatsoever, by order of the said Commissioners, under the powers of any of the said recited Acts or of this Act, the same public works, interest, property, or effects shall be bought in by or by the order of the Commissioners, in consequence of the highest bond fide bidding at such auction for such public works, interest, property, and effects not being equal to the amount of principal, interest, or other monies for the time being remaining owing on the security of such public works, interest, property, and effects, then and in such case it shall and may be lawful for such Commissioners, at any time thereafter, to sell and dispose of the same public works, interest, property, and effects, either by public auction or by private contract, upon such terms, and under and subject to such conditions of sale, or other conditions, stipulations, and agreements, as they the said Commissioners may think proper or deem expedient for the purpose of insuring the completion or carrying on of such public works by the purchaser or purchasers thereof, with a view to the public good or general benefit, or for any other purpose, notwithstanding such conditions of sale, or other conditions, stipulations, and agreements, may be considered prejudicial to such re-sale, or may not be beneficial to the persons, parties, bodies corporate, politic, or collegiate, or companies, making such mortgage, assignment, or charge aforesaid, or otherwise interested in such public works, interest, property, and effects, in like manner in all respects as if such public works, interest, property, and effects were the absolute property of the said Commissioners, or such persons, parties, bodies corporate, politic, or collegiate, or companies, as aforesaid, were in all respects foreclosed from all right or equity of redemption of or in respect of the premises so sold or disposed of.

XXI. That whenever the said Commissioners shall, under or in pursuance of any of the powers or authorities of the said recited Acts or of this Act, have entered into the receipt of any rates, tolls, duties, issues, or profits comprised in any mortgage, assignment, or other charge, already executed or hereafter to be executed, arising from any public work, interest, property, or effects, or into possession of any public works, interest, property, or effects comprised in any mortgage, assignment, or other charge, already executed or hereafter to be executed under the provisions of the said recited Acts or of this Act, and the rates, tolls, duties, issues, and profits of such works, interest, property, or effects respectively, shall not be sufficient to pay and keep down the current expenses of the working, keeping, and maintaining the same open and in repair, together with the arrears of instalments of principal or interest for the time being accrued due on such mortgage, assignment, or other charge, it shall and may be lawful for the said Commissioners, with the consent of the Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury, testified by their warrant under the hands of three or more of them, to order and direct the works and property from whence any such rates, tolls, duties, issues, and profits comprised in any such mortgage, assignment, or other charge shall arise, or any such other works, property, and effects, to be broken up, taken down, pulled to pieces, or otherwise destroyed, and to sell the materials thereof or of any part thereof, and the sites thereof, and other the articles, property, and effects belonging thereto, either together or in parcels, and either by public auction or by private contract, and under and subject to such conditions of sale, and in such manner in all respects, as they the said Commissioners of the said recited Acts and of this Act shall deem expedient or think proper, or otherwise to authorize the purchaser or purchasers of such works, property, and effects, or any of them, their or his heirs, executors, administrators, or assigns, with the like consent of the said Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury, and to be so testified as aforesaid, to break up, take down, pull to pieces, or otherwise destroy, and to sell, use, or otherwise employ, the materials and sites thereof, in such manner in all respects as they respectively shall think proper, without such Commissioners of the said recited Acts and of this Act, or their secretary, or other person or persons, performing such order or direction as aforesaid, or such purchaser or purchasers as aforesaid, his or their heirs, executors, administrators, or assigns, being in anywise liable in damages or otherwise to any person or persons whomsoever, for their or his so breaking up, taking down, pulling to pieces, or otherwise destroying such works or any of them.

XXII. That the words "Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury," or "of the Treasury," whensoever used in this Act, shall be construed to mean any three or more of such Commissioners, or the Lord High Treasurer of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland.

XXIII. That this Act may be amended or repealed by any Act to be passed during the present session of Parliament.

By this Act,

After reciting that certain documents purporting to be Exchequer bills have been presented at the Exchequer for examination, and have been there detained as forged, and there is reason to believe that other forged and fraudulent documents purporting to be Exchequer bills have been put into circulation, and are now holden by divers persons, who claim to have become possessed thereof bona fide, and for a full and valuable consideration: and that it is highly expedient for the public service that an inquiry should be made by Commissioners, to be specially appointed for that purpose, into the manner whereby such documents were made and issued, and in which the same came into the possession of the parties by whom they may now be holden:—

It is Enacted,

I. That the Right Honourable William Earl of Devon, Henry John Stephen Esq., Serjeant at Law, and Robert Mitford Esq. be constituted and appointed Commissioners of Inquiry for the purpose of this Act; and in case of the death, resignation, refusal, or becoming incapable to act of any of the said Commissioners, and then as often as the same shall happen it shall be lawful for Her Majesty, by a commission under the Great Seal of Great Britain, to constitute and appoint a person to be a Commissioner of Inquiry for the purpose of this Act in the place of the Commissioner so dying, resigning, refusing, or becoming incapable to act.

II. That every Commissioner appointed in pursuance of this Act shall before beginning to act in the execution of the commission, take the following oath before the Lord Chief Justice of the Court of Queen's Bench, the Lord Chief Justice of the Court of Common Pleas, or the Lord Chief Baron of the Court of Exchequer; (that is to say,)

'I A. B. do swear, That I will truly and faithfully execute the Powers and Trusts vested in me by an Act, intituled [here set forth the Title of this Act], according to the best of my Knowledge and Judgment. So help me GOD.'

III. That the said Commissioners shall have power to appoint, and at their pleasure to dismiss, a secretary, and so many clerks, messengers, and officers as shall be thought necessary by the Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury.

IV. That the said Commissioners shall meet from time to time in some convenient place or places to be appointed for that purpose, in London or Westminster, by the Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury; and the said Commissioners of Inquiry shall give notice of their appointment, and of their place or places of meeting, in the London Gazette.

V. That the said Commissioners shall by all such lawful means as to them may appear best, with a view to the discovery of the truth, inquire into the case of every owner or holder of any of the documents purporting to be Exchequer bills which are mentioned and described in the schedule hereunto annexed, and also any other such documents as shall be referred to them by the Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury, and shall from time to time report to Her Majesty the evidence which shall be taken by them, and what they shall find concerning the manner of the issue, circulation, deposit, or possession of every such document, and especially in what manner the owners or holders of such documents received the same, whether in exchange for other bills, and if so, in what manner such exchange was made; or whether by purchase in open market or otherwise, and if so, at what rate of purchase; or whether by way of deposit as securities for loans of money, and if so, at what rate of interest, and for what time such loans were made, and whether such loans were renewed, and if so, how often, and for what time; and also, whether the owners or holders of such documents received the same in the usual course of business, and whether they employed any and what means of inquiry into the genuineness of such documents; and all other matters and things whereby, in the opinion of the said Commissioners, the truth may be better known touching the premises.

VI. That every report which the said Commissioners shall make to Her Majesty in pursuance of this Act, with the exception of any part of the evidence which the Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury may deem it essential for the public interest to withhold, shall be laid before Parliament within one calendar month next after such report shall be made, if Parliament shall then be sitting, or if not, then within one calendar month next after the then next meeting of Parliament.

VII. XXXIII. That any corn factor, dealer, or other person who at or previously to the time when this present Act shall come into operation shall have made the declaration required of him in and by the said Act, 9 Geo. 4. c. 60, shall and he or she is hereby required forthwith to make all such returns to the inspectors for the city of London, the city of Oxford, and the town of Cambridge, and to the respective officers of Excise acting as inspectors of corn returns in the several other cities and towns aforesaid, at the respective places appointed for receiving such returns as aforesaid, or to such continuing inspector of corn returns as aforesaid in any such other cities or towns, (as the case may be,) and to perform and do all such acts, matters, and things, and to comply with and observe all such rules and regulations, as are hereby required or directed of or in regard to persons who have made any declaration required of them in and by the present Act, although he or she may not have actually made such last-mentioned declaration.

XXXIV. That the comptroller of corn returns shall and he is hereby authorized from time to time, in pursuance of any instructions which he shall receive in that behalf from the Lords of the said Committee of Privy Council, to issue to the inspectors of corn returns for the city of London, the city of Oxford, and the town of Cambridge respectively, any general or special directions respecting the inspection by any person or persons of the books so directed as aforesaid to be kept by such inspector of corn returns; and no such inspectors for the city of London, the city of Oxford, or the town of Cambridge shall permit or suffer any person to inspect any such book, or to peruse or transcribe any entry therein, except in compliance with some such general or special directions from the said comptroller of corn returns.

XXXV. That the inspectors of corn returns for the city of Oxford and the town of Cambridge respectively, and each and every officer of Excise acting as inspector of corn returns, and each and every such continuing inspector of corn returns as aforesaid for any city or town other than the city of London, shall and he is hereby required, on each and every market day, to put up or cause to be put up in the market place of the city or town for which he shall act as inspector, or if there shall be no market place in such city or town then in some other conspicuous place therein near to where the corn market is usually held, a copy of the last return made by him to the comptroller of corn returns, omitting the names of the parties who may have sold and bought the said corn; and every such officer or inspector shall also again put up such account on the market day immediately following that on which it shall first have been put up, in case the same shall from accident or any other cause have been removed, and shall take due care that the same shall remain up for public inspection until a new account for the ensuing week shall have been prepared and set up.

XXXVI. That it shall be lawful for the Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury, by any warrant or warrants to be for that purpose from time to time made and issued, to settle and allow such reasonable and moderate salaries as shall be paid and payable to the said inspectors of corn returns for the city of London, the city of Oxford, and the town of Cambridge respectively, and to such continuing inspectors of corn returns as aforesaid, for and in consideration of the duties so to be performed by them: Provided always, that the salary so to be allowed to the inspector of corn returns for the city of London shall not in any one year exceed the sum of 300*l.*, in consideration of which salary he shall and is hereby required to keep and maintain a proper and convenient apartment or place of business at or near to the said Corn Exchange in Mark Lane for transacting the duties of such his office, and to defray all incidental charges and expenses of and attendant upon such his office: Provided also, that the salary to be granted to the inspectors of corn returns for the city of Oxford and the town of Cambridge respectively, and to any such continuing inspector of corn returns as aforesaid for any other of the cities or towns aforesaid, shall not exceed 50*l.* in any one year for such inspector, or a proportionate sum for any period less than a year.

XXXVII. That the salary aforesaid allowed to the inspector of corn returns for the said city of London shall be paid quarterly by the receiver general of the Customs or of the Excise in or for the city of London; and the salaries which shall be allowed to the inspectors of corn returns for the city of Oxford and the town of Cambridge respectively, or to any such continuing inspectors of corn returns as aforesaid for any city or town other than the city of London, shall, as regards those persons whose offices or appointments are hereby continued until the said 24th of June next after the passing of this Act, and are then to cease, be paid to them up to that day, and as regards the inspectors of corn returns for the city of Oxford and the town of Cambridge respectively, and those persons who shall be continued in office after the said 24th of June, by virtue of the warrant of the Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury, as hereinbefore is mentioned, shall be paid quarterly; and such salaries shall be paid by the collectors or other chief officers of the Customs or Excise in or for the cities or towns for which such continuing inspectors as aforesaid shall be respectively acting; provided that no such payment of salary shall be made either to the inspector of the corn returns for the city of London, or to any such continuing inspector of corn returns as aforesaid, unless the inspector of corn returns claiming the same shall first produce and deliver to the receiver general or collector of the Customs or Excise by whom the same is to be paid a certificate under the hand of the comptroller of corn returns, certifying that such inspector hath duly made the returns required of him by this present Act, during the period in respect of which any such payment is to be made, and which certificate such comptroller is hereby required, on the application of any such inspector as aforesaid, to grant, unless any such inspector shall, without good and sufficient cause, have neglected or omitted to make such returns as aforesaid, or some of them: Provided also, that if the duties of the said office of inspector of corn returns for the city of London shall during any such quarter of a year as aforesaid have been discharged wholly or in part by a deputy, the comptroller of corn returns shall in such certificate as aforesaid specify the length of time during which such deputy hath so acted, and the whole or a proportionate part, as the case may be, of any such quarterly payment, shall in that case be paid to the said deputy.

And after reciting that the persons who at the time of the passing of this Act respectively hold the offices or appointments of inspectors of corn returns in any of the cities or towns aforesaid, other than the city of London, the city of Oxford, and the town of Cambridge, will, by reason of the determination of their respective offices and appointments under the provisions of this Act, cease to receive the salaries attached thereto, and it may be reasonable and fit that compensation should be made to such persons:—

It is Enacted,

XXXVIII. That it shall be lawful for any three or more of the Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury for the time being, by warrant under their hands, to order and direct that such annual compensation or allowance, not exceeding in any case the annual salary of the office in respect of which such compensation or allowance is granted, as to them in their discretion shall seem just and reasonable, having due regard to the length of service and conduct of the parties, shall be made to the several persons who at or immediately before the time of the passing of this Act shall respectively hold offices or appointments of inspectors of corn returns for any of the cities or towns aforesaid, other than the city of London, the city of Oxford, and the town of Cambridge, for any loss of salary attached to such offices or appointments which they may respectively sustain by reason of the determination of their respective offices or appointments by the provisions of this Act; and such compensation or allowance shall be issued and paid to the party to whom such compensation shall be made, at such times and in such manner as in such warrant shall be directed, by the collector or the chief officer of the Customs or of the Excise in or for the city or town for which such party shall hold the office of inspector of corn returns at the time of the passing of this Act: Provided always, that an account of such compensation shall, within fourteen days next after the same shall have been so granted, be laid before the Commons House of Parliament, if Parliament shall be then assembled, or if Parliament shall then not be assembled, then within fourteen days after the meeting of Parliament next following.

XXXIX. That if any person who is hereby required to make and deliver the declaration or declarations hereinbefore particularly mentioned and set forth, or either of them, shall not make and deliver such declaration or declarations at the time and in the form and manner and to the person or persons hereinbefore directed and prescribed in that behalf, every person so offending shall forfeit and pay a sum not exceeding 20*l.* for each and every calendar month during which he shall neglect or delay to make and deliver any such declaration; and if any person who is hereinbefore required to make any return to the inspector of corn returns for the city of London, or the city of Oxford, or the town of Cambridge, or to any officer of Excise acting as inspector as aforesaid, or to any such continuing inspector of corn returns as aforesaid, shall not make such returns to such inspector or officer at the time and in the form and manner hereinbefore directed and prescribed, every such offender shall for such his offence forfeit and pay a sum not exceeding 20*l.*

XL. That all and every the penalties aforesaid shall and may be prosecuted, sued for, and recovered, by and to the use of any person who will sue for the same, before any two Justices of the Peace acting in and for the city, town, county, riding, or division within which the offence shall have been committed; and upon conviction of any such offender before any such Justices of the Peace, either by the confession of the party offending or by the oath of any credible witness or witnesses

(which oath such Justices are hereby authorized to administer), the amount of such penalties and forfeitures shall be levied, together with the costs attending the information and conviction, to be assessed and allowed by such Justices, by distress and sale of the goods and chattels of the party or parties offending, by warrant under the hands and seals of such Justices (which warrant such Justices are hereby empowered and required to grant); and the overplus (if any), after such penalties, forfeitures, and fines, and the charges of such distress and sale, are deducted, shall be returned, upon demand, unto the owner or owners of such goods and chattels; and in case such fines, penalties, and forfeitures shall not be forthwith paid upon conviction, then it shall be lawful for such Justices to order the offender or offenders so convicted to be detained and kept in safe custody until return can be conveniently made to such warrant of distress, unless the offender or offenders shall give sufficient security, to the satisfaction of such Justices, for his or their appearance before such Justices on such day or days as shall be appointed for the return of such warrant of distress, such day or days not being more than seven days from the time of taking any such security, and which security the said Justices are hereby empowered to take by way of recognizance or otherwise; but if upon the return of such warrant it shall appear that no sufficient distress can be had thereupon, then it shall be lawful for any such Justices of the Peace as aforesaid, and they are hereby authorized and required, by warrant or warrants under their hands and seals, to cause such offender or offenders to be committed to the common gaol or house of correction of the city, town, county, riding, or division where the offender shall be or reside, there to remain, without bail or mainprize, for any term not exceeding three calendar months, unless such penalties, forfeitures, and fines, and all reasonable charges attending the same, shall be sooner paid and satisfied.

XII. That if any person who shall be summoned as a witness to give evidence before any Justices of the Peace, touching any matter of fact contained in any information or complaint for any offence against this Act, either on the part of the prosecutor or of the person or persons accused, shall, after a reasonable sum of money for his or her charges and expenses shall have been paid or been tendered to him or her, refuse or neglect to appear at the time and place for that purpose appointed, without a reasonable excuse for his, her, or their neglect, or appearing shall refuse to be examined on oath and give evidence before such Justices of the Peace, then and in either of such cases such person shall forfeit for every such offence any sum not exceeding 10*l.*, to be recovered in the manner hereinbefore provided for the recovery of the several penalties aforesaid.

XIII. That if any person shall make any false and fraudulent statement in any such return as he is hereinbefore directed and required to make, or shall falsely and wilfully include, or procure or cause to be included, in any such return, any British corn which was not truly and bona fide sold or bought to, by, or on behalf of the person or persons in any such return mentioned in that behalf, in the quantity and for the price therein stated and set forth, every such offender shall be and be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor.

XIV. That nothing in this Act contained shall extend to alter the present practice of measuring corn, or any of the articles aforesaid, to be shipped from or to be landed in the port of London, but that the same shall be measured by the sworn meters appointed for that purpose, by whose certificate the searchers or other proper officers of Her Majesty's Customs are hereby empowered and required to certify the quantity of corn or other articles as aforesaid so shipped or landed; and that nothing in this Act contained shall extend to lessen or take away the rights and privileges of or the tolls or duties due and payable to the mayor, commonalty and citizens of the city of London, or to the mayor of the said city for the time being, or to take away the privileges of any persons lawfully deriving title from or under them.

XVI. That this Act may be amended or repealed by any Act to be passed in this present session of Parliament.

By this ACT,

After reciting that by 5 & 6 Will. 4. c. 69. s. 1, intituled 'An Act to facilitate the Conveyance of Workhouses and other Property of Parishes, and of Incorporations or Unions of Parishes, in England and Wales,' it was among other things enacted, that it should be lawful for the guardians and overseers of the poor of any parish or union of parishes, under the direction and with the approbation of the Poor Law Commissioners for England and Wales, to dispose of, by way of absolute sale, or in exchange for any messuages, lands, or other hereditaments, any lands or buildings, for the purpose of the same being used as the site of a workhouse, or of being occupied with a workhouse, or for any other purpose relating to the relief of the poor which the said Poor Law Commissioners might approve of; and doubts have been raised as to the meaning in certain cases of this provision:—

It is Enacted,

I. That all sales, lettings, exchanges, or dispositions of lands, buildings, or other property belonging to any parish or union not formed by the Poor Law Commissioners, which shall have been or shall be made for any of the said recited purposes by virtue of the said Act, 4 & 5 Will. 4. c. 76, and of the statute amending the same, 7 Will. 4. & 1 Vict. c. 50, under the order of the said Commissioners, by a majority of the overseers of such parish or of the last acting guardians of such union respectively, to the guardians of any union formed by the said Commissioners, shall be and be taken to have been valid.

And after reciting that by the said Act, 5 & 6 Will. 4. c. 69. s. 3, it was further enacted, That it should be lawful for the guardians of any parish or union, and for the overseers of any parish not under the management of a board of guardians, and for the guardians or trustees, guardian or trustee of any dissolved union, or the person or persons who were the guardians or trustees, guardian or trustee of any dissolved union at the time of its dissolution, or a majority of such guardians, trustees, or persons, if more than one, with the approbation and subject to the rules, orders, and regulations of the Poor Law Commissioners, to sell, exchange, let, or otherwise dispose of any workhouse, tenements, buildings, land, effects, or other property belonging to any such parish or union, or vested in trustees or feoffees in trust for such parish or union, or for the parishioners, rate-payers, or inhabitants thereof, or which belong or did belong to any dissolved union, and every or any part of such property, and to convey, assign, or transfer the same accordingly to the purchasers or parties exchanging, as they should direct; which said provisions have been extended by the said Act, 7 Will. 4. & 1 Vict. c. 50; and doubts have arisen as to the meaning and extent of such provisions;—

II. That the said provisions shall be deemed to have authorized and to authorize the sale, exchange, letting, and disposal, by the guardians of a union formed or to be formed by the said Commissioners, of any workhouse, tenements, buildings, land, effects, or other property belonging to any parish which shall be comprised in the said union, and in cases of the sale, exchange, letting, and disposal of workhouses, tenements, buildings, land, effects, and other property belonging to a dissolved union to have applied and to apply to a majority of the persons who were the last acting guardians previous to the dissolution of such union: Provided always, that nothing in this Act shall be deemed to render valid or to authorize the sale, exchange, letting, or other disposition of any property whatsoever which shall have been given or bequeathed by way of charitable donation, or shall have been allotted in right of some charitable donation or otherwise, for the poor persons of any parish, and not for the general benefit of the rate-payers, parishioners, or inhabitants of such parish, nor to dispense with the consent of the rate-payers and owners of property required by the said last-recited Act to all sales, exchanges, lettings, or other dispositions of property, belonging to any parish, except in the case next hereinafter provided.

III. That where several parishes shall have been or shall be jointly interested in any workhouse, tenements, buildings, lands, whether of freehold, copyhold, or customary tenure, effects or other property, it shall be deemed to have been and shall be lawful for the said Commissioners, upon the application of the overseers of the major part of such parishes, and with the consent of the rate-payers and owners of property in the major part of such parishes, to be ascertained in the manner directed by the said Act, to order the same to be sold, let, exchanged, or disposed of by the guardians of the union in which such parishes or the greater part thereof shall be situate, in such manner, and subject to such rules, orders, and regulations, as the said Commissioners shall deem fit; and it shall be deemed to have been and to be lawful for the said Commissioners to direct the application of the produce arising from such sale, letting, or disposition in the same manner and to and for the same purposes as the produce arising from the sales of property belonging to other parishes may be applied to: Provided always, that where any conveyance, by way of sale, lease, exchange, disposition, or otherwise, of any property, belonging to a parish or union, whether dissolved or not, shall have been or shall hereafter be made by the guardians of any existing union, or a majority of the last acting guardians of any dissolved union, under the order of the said Commissioners, the same shall be deemed to have been and to be valid for all the purposes of such conveyance, although the legal estate in such property shall be or shall be presumed to be outstanding in some trustee or trustees who shall not have joined in such conveyance; and in cases of copyhold or customary lands the surrender of the tenant on the roll, being a trustee for any parish or union, shall not be required, but the admission of the party to whom the guardians or overseers shall, under the authority of the said recited Acts or this Act, have conveyed the same, shall take place, upon the production to the steward of the manor of which such lands shall be held of the conveyance from such guardians or overseers duly executed, and upon payment of such fines, dues, or services to the lord of the manor of which the said lands shall be holden, and his steward, as they respectively would be entitled to upon the admission of such party after a surrender by a tenant on the roll.

And after reciting that by an Act, 1 & 2 Vict. c. 25, passed to explain and amend an Act, 7 Will. 4. & 1 Vict. c. 60, for extending the period for the repayment of loans made under an Act, 5 & 6 Will. 4. c. 69. for the amendment and better administration of the laws relating to the poor in England and Wales, provision was made for payments in certain cases, out of the produce arising from sales of parish property, in liquidation of the debts, liabilities, or engagements of such parish, and it is expedient to extend the operation of the said Act;—

It is Enacted,

IV. That the powers and provisions of the said recited Act shall extend and apply to the payment of any debts, liabilities, or engagements which heretofore have been bond fide entered into by the parish officers or other person or persons on behalf of any parish, and which shall be proved to the Poor Law Commissioners to have been recognized, within one year before the passing of the said Act, 5 & 6 Will. 4. c. 69, as existing parish debts, liabilities, or engagements, by the inhabitants of such parish in vestry assembled, or by payment and allowance of interest thereon out of the funds applicable to the relief of the poor of such parish.

V. That it shall be lawful for the Poor Law Commissioners, by an order under their hands and seal, upon the receipt of a copy under the hands of the overseers of the poor of any parish of a resolution passed at a meeting of rate-payers and owners of property entitled to vote according to the provisions of the said Act, 5 & 6 Will. 4. c. 69, duly convened and held for the purpose, after public notice of the time and place and purpose of holding such meeting shall have been given in like manner as notices of vestry meetings are published and given, consenting to the issue of such order, to direct the said overseers, by equal annual instalments, not exceeding ten, to pay or discharge, out of the poor rates, or other monies in their hands applicable in aid of the poor rates of the said parish, any such debt, liability, or engagement as aforesaid, together with all interest due or hereafter to accrue in respect of such debt, liability, or engagement; provided that the said Commissioners shall be satisfied, before they issue any such order, that such debt, liability, or engagement constitutes a fair and just claim against the said parish, and shall approve of and sanction the discharge thereof.

VI. That it shall be lawful for the said overseers, and they are hereby required, if so directed by such order and resolution as aforesaid, to borrow any sum that may be requisite to enable them to pay and discharge any such debt, liability, or engagement as aforesaid, or any part thereof, and to charge the poor rates of the said parish with the repayment of the sum borrowed for such purpose, and the interest thereof, so nevertheless that the sum so borrowed shall be repaid by equal annual instalments, not exceeding ten; and every instrument by which the rates shall be charged under the provisions of this Act shall be approved of by the Poor Law Commissioners, and registered in their office.

And after reciting that various sums of money have been borrowed under the authority of an Act, 22 Geo. 3. c. 83, intituled 'An Act for the better Relief and Employment of the Poor,' and securities authorized by that statute have been given in respect of such sums of money, and are now outstanding against the parishes on whose behalf the said sums were advanced, and the provisions of the several statutes in this behalf do not afford a satisfactory mode of liquidating such debts;—

It is Enacted,

VII. That where any parish is now or at any time hereafter shall be comprised in any union formed or to be formed under the said Act, 5 & 6 Will. 4. c. 69, or shall be under the management of a board of guardians, and the poor rates thereof shall be liable to the payment of any debt duly borrowed and secured under the authority of the said Act, 22 Geo. 3. c. 83, the guardians of such union or parish respectively shall be required to make such provision for the liquidation of the said debt in full, or by equal annual instalments, not exceeding ten, as the said Commissioners shall by order under their hands and seal direct; and for such purpose such guardians are hereby empowered to make any order or orders upon the overseers of such parish as the said guardians may find necessary, and shall have all the same powers for enforcing such order or orders as they now have by law in regard to the contributions required by such guardians.

VIII. Provided and enacted, That nothing in this Act contained shall be deemed or taken to render any debt, liability, or engagement a valid charge upon the poor rates of any parish which is not at the time of the passing hereof a subsisting legal charge thereon, except where such resolution shall have been passed and such order shall have been made as aforesaid: And provided always, that every payment out of the poor rates, either of principal or interest, in respect of any such debt, liability, or engagement, without such order of the said Commissioners, shall be unlawful, and as such disallowed in the accounts of the officer or officers or other person paying the same.

IX. That every word used in this Act shall, where the context shall not be at variance with such interpretation, be deemed to express the meaning assigned thereto in the said recited Act, 5 & 6 Will. 4. c. 69, and every order, regulation, mortgage, security, charge, or other instrument made and executed under the provisions of this Act shall be subject to the same incidents, exemptions, provisions, or regulations as it would have been subject to if made under the powers contained in the last-recited Act.

It is Enacted,

I. That after the passing of this Act the prison now known as the Prison of the Marshalsea of the Court of Queen's Bench shall be called the Queen's Prison, and shall be the only prison for all debtors, bankrupts, or other persons who before the passing of this Act might lawfully have been imprisoned in any of the said prisons of the Marshalsea of the Court of Queen's Bench, the Fleet Prison, or the Prison of the Marshalsea and of the Court of the Queen's Palace of Westminster; and after the passing of this Act no person shall be committed from any of the said Courts to the Fleet Prison or Prison of the Marshalsea; and that the persons imprisoned in the Queen's Prison shall be there in the custody of the marshal or keeper of the Queen's Prison, from whichever of the said Courts they shall have been severally committed; and all securities taken from any officer of the Queen's Bench Prison for performance of his duty respecting the prisoners now confined in the Queen's Bench Prison shall endure for securing the performance of the like duty respecting the prisoners who shall be confined in the Queen's prison under this Act; and all rules, orders, and enactments now in force respecting the Queen's Bench Prison and the prisoners therein shall be taken to apply in all respects to all the prisoners who shall be confined in the Queen's Prison, subject to the provisions hereinafter contained: Provided always, that until the removal of the persons now imprisoned in the Fleet Prison and Prison of the Marshalsea and of the Court of the Queen's Palace of Westminster, as hereinafter provided, such persons may be lawfully detained within the prison in which they are now severally confined, and shall be there in the same custody and subject to all the rules now in force respecting such prisoners as if this Act had not been made.

II. That within one calendar month after the passing of this Act the warden of the Fleet Prison and the keeper of the prison of the Marshalsea and of the Court of the Queen's Palace of Westminster shall severally certify under their hands to the Lord Chief Justice of the Court of Queen's Bench a true list of the names of the prisoners then in their custody, with the several causes and times of their commitments; and as soon thereafter as the Queen's Prison can be conveniently made ready for the reception of the prisoners to be removed under this Act, the Lord Chief Justice of the Court of Queen's Bench shall issue his warrant or warrants from time to time, under his hand, severally directed to the warden of the Fleet Prison and to the keeper of the prison of the Marshalsea and of the Court of the Queen's Palace of Westminster, requiring them severally to deliver into the custody of the Marshal of the Queen's Prison the persons then in their custody, or such of them as shall be named in any such warrant; and upon the receipt of any such warrant the said warden and keeper shall severally deliver into the custody of the Marshal of the Queen's Prison the persons named in the said warrant, with the several warrants of commitment of such persons delivered, and the Marshal of the Queen's Prison shall forthwith convey the prisoners so delivered into his custody to the Queen's Prison; and if any person named in any such warrant of the Lord Chief Justice shall have been lawfully discharged out of the custody of the said warden or keeper before the execution of the warrant, the said warden or keeper shall certify the fact under his hand to the said Lord Chief Justice, and shall deliver such certificate to the marshal of the Queen's Prison; and the removal of any such prisoners in obedience to the warrant of the Lord Chief Justice as aforesaid shall not be construed to be an escape.

III. That as soon as all the prisoners confined in the Fleet Prison shall have been discharged, or removed under this Act into the custody of the marshal of the Queen's Prison, all records, books, and papers in the custody of any officer of the Fleet Prison relating to the business of the said prison shall be delivered to the marshal of the Queen's Prison, and the offices of warden of the Fleet, deputy warden, clerk of the papers, and all other offices of the Fleet Prison shall be abolished; and as soon as all the prisoners confined in the prison of the Marshalsea and of the Court of the Queen's Palace of Westminster shall have been discharged, or removed under this Act into the custody of the marshal of the Queen's Prison, all records, books, and papers in the custody of any officer of the prison of the said Marshalsea and Palace Court relating to the business of the said prison shall be delivered to the Marshal of the Queen's Prison, and the offices of keeper, chaplain, surgeon, and all other offices of the prison of the said Marshalsea and Palace Court shall be abolished.

IV. That it shall be lawful for any officer of the Fleet Prison or Marshalsea Prison whose office will be abolished, and for every other person whose emoluments will be affected by this Act, to make a claim for compensation, within six calendar months after the passing thereof, to the Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury, including in the case of the warden of the Fleet Prison and Keeper of the prison of the Marshalsea and Court of the Queen's Palace of Westminster a claim for the value of the furniture and fixtures (if any) belonging to the said warden and keeper in the said prisons respectively; and the said Commissioners shall proceed, in such manner as they may think proper, to inquire whether any compensation ought to be made to such claimant, and, if any, what were the lawful fees and emoluments in respect of which the same should be allowed; and in every case in which such claim shall be established to the satisfaction of the said Commissioners they shall be empowered to determine, by an order under the hands of any three of them, the amount of the annual compensation which shall seem to them to be just and reasonable for the loss sustained by such claimant, not being in any case less than three fourth parts of the full net annual value of the lawful fees and emoluments of the office so abolished or affected; and the amount of such annual value as aforesaid shall be ascertained by the said Commissioners according to such an average of yearly receipts and disbursements before the passing of this Act as they shall think proper, and such annual compensation shall commence from the passing of this Act; and until the amount of such compensation shall be settled in each case the salary of each officer so to be compensated shall continue to be paid to him in like manner as before the passing of this Act, but shall be accounted for by such officer to the said Commissioners upon the settlement of the compensation in each case; and an account of all such compensations shall be laid upon the table of the House of Commons within fourteen days next after the same shall be so granted, if Parliament shall then be sitting, or if Parliament shall not be then sitting, then within fourteen days after the meeting of Parliament then next following.

v. That as soon as the compensation to be granted to the keeper and officers of the prison of the Marshalsea and Court of the Queen's Palace of Westminster shall be settled, the Lord High Treasurer or Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury shall retain in each year during the life of Her Majesty, out of the revenues granted to Her Majesty, the amount of the salaries and allowances paid to the said keeper and officers which are now charged upon and paid out of the said revenues granted to Her Majesty, and the amount so retained shall continue to form a part of the Consolidated Fund.

vi. And it is declared and enacted, That upon the abolition of the office of warden of the Fleet Prison the said Prison so to be discontinued, with all the messuages, lands, and tenements, furniture and fixtures, thereunto in anywise belonging, and upon the abolition of the office of keeper of the prison of the Marshalsea and of the Court of the Queen's Palace of Westminster the last-mentioned prison so to be discontinued, with all the messuages, lands, and tenements, furniture and fixtures, thereunto in anywise belonging, shall vest absolutely in Her Majesty, her heirs and successors, and shall be within the ordering and survey of the Court of Exchequer, and under the management of the Commissioners of Her Majesty's Woods, Forests, Land Revenues, Works, and Buildings, and within the provisions of all Acts passed respecting any parts of the possessions and land revenues of the Crown within the ordering and survey of the said Court of Exchequer.

vii. That where by any Act now in force anything is provided to be done with respect to the Fleet or Marshalsea Prison or the prisoners therein, or the warden or keeper of either of the said prisons, the said Acts, unless so far as any such provision is repealed or altered by this Act, shall continue in force, and shall be taken to apply to the Queen's Prison and to the prisoners therein, and to the marshal or keeper of the Queen's Prison, respectively.

And after reciting that by an Act, 53 Geo. 3. c. 113, intituled, 'An Act for providing Relief for the poor Prisoners confined in the King's Bench, Fleet, and Marshalsea Prisons,' provision is made for the payment of several sums of money by the treasurers of the several counties and divisions of counties mentioned in the schedule annexed to the said Act, in part to the treasurer of the county of Surrey, for the relief of the prisoners confined in the King's Bench and Marshalsea Prisons, and in part to the treasurer or chamberlain of the city of London, for the relief of the prisoners confined in the Fleet Prison:—

viii. That after the removal of all the prisoners in the Fleet and Marshalsea Prisons to the Queen's Prison the whole sums provided by the said Act to be paid by the said several treasurers for any of the purposes of the said Act, and also any balance of any such sums which at that time shall remain unappropriated in the hands of the chamberlain of the city of London or of the treasurer of the county of Surrey, shall be by them paid to the marshal or keeper of the Queen's Prison, to be by him applied, under the direction of one of Her Majesty's principal Secretaries of State, for the relief of the prisoners confined in the Queen's Prison; and receipts signed by the said marshal or keeper for any monies payable to him by virtue of this Act shall be sufficient discharges for the same; and all provisions of the last-recited Act respecting monies paid or which ought to be paid to the Treasurer of the county of Surrey, or the persons entitled to be relieved thereby, shall apply to the monies so paid or to be paid to the said marshal or keeper by virtue of this Act, and to the prisoners confined in the Queen's Prison; and all the surplus and residue (if any) of the said monies shall be paid as provided by the last-mentioned Act to the treasurer for the time being of the Royal Hospital of Bethlehem, for the relief and benefit of the said Hospital.

ix. Provided and enacted, That after the said removal of all the prisoners in the Fleet and Marshalsea Prisons to the Queen's Prison, so much of the last-recited Act as provides that no prisoner who shall be charged in execution for debt shall be relieved by virtue of that Act after the first day of the term next following the time when he or she should be charged in execution, and that the relief to be given to the said prisoners shall be given under the direction of any Justice of the Peace for the county of Surrey, and that the Justices of the Peace for the county of Surrey, or the major part of them, at their general quarter sessions, shall make any orders, rules, or regulations respecting the monies to be collected under the last-recited Act, and that the treasurer of the county of Surrey, or any person appointed to receive and distribute any of the said monies, shall render to the said Justices any account of their receipts and disbursements under the last-recited Act, shall be repealed; and the marshal or keeper of the Queen's Prison shall account for the receipt and disbursement of the said monies, in such manner as the Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury shall direct.

x. That the warden of the Fleet Prison and keeper of the prison of the Marshalsea and Court of the Queen's Palace of Westminster shall severally make out and deliver to the marshal of the Queen's Prison a true list of all charitable gifts and bequests heretofore made for the relief of poor prisoners or for the discharge of poor debtors in the Fleet and Marshalsea Prisons respectively; and all the said gifts and bequests, and also all charitable gifts and bequests heretofore made for the relief of poor prisoners or for the discharge of poor debtors in the King's Bench Prison, shall be applied, after the removal of all the prisoners in the Fleet and Marshalsea Prisons to the Queen's Prison, for the relief of poor prisoners or discharge of poor debtors (as the case may be) in the Queen's Prison, as well of those who but for the passing of this Act would have been imprisoned in the Queen's Bench Prison, as of those who but for the passing of this Act would have been imprisoned in the Fleet Prison or Marshalsea Prison, indiscriminately, according to their wants, at the discretion of the persons lawfully administering such charitable gifts and bequests respectively.

And after reciting that by 55 Geo. 3. c. 50, it was provided, that nothing therein contained should be construed to extend to the King's Bench Prison, His Majesty's Prison of the Fleet, the Marshalsea and Palace Courts;—

xI. That after the passing of this Act all fees and gratuities paid or payable by any prisoners on the entrance, commitment to, continuance in, or discharge from the Queen's Prison, except as hereinafter provided, shall absolutely cease, and any marshal or keeper or other officer of the Queen's Prison who, after the passing of this Act, shall exact from any prisoner any fee or gratuity for or on account of the entrance, commitment, or discharge of such prisoner, or in the name of chamber rent, or for any other purpose whatsoever, except such as shall from time to time be sanctioned by the Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury, for any work and labour actually performed for the use and benefit of any prisoner, or who shall detain any prisoner in custody for non-payment of any fee, rent, or gratuity, shall be rendered incapable of holding his office, be guilty of a misdemeanor, and be punished by fine and imprisonment.

And after reciting that owing to the former crowded state of the Queen's Bench and Fleet Prisons, a practice hath prevailed of suffering prisoners to go at large within districts adjacent to the said prisons, and known by the names of "The Rules of the Queen's Bench Prison," and "The Rules of the Fleet Prison," on payment of certain fees, and on giving security to the marshal and warden respectively: And that it is expedient that such practice, and also the practice of granting day rules, be abolished;—

It is Enacted,

xII. That after the passing of this Act it shall not be lawful for the marshal or keeper of the Queen's Prison to grant any day rule, or to grant the liberty of the rules to any person, except for the purpose of continuing the liberty of the rules of the Queen's Bench Prison for such time as the marshal shall think fit, not more than twelve calendar months after the passing of this Act, to those persons who shall be in the enjoyment of the liberty of the rules of the Queen's Bench or Fleet Prison at the time of the passing of this Act; and that all persons in the custody of the marshal or keeper to whom the liberty of the rules of one of the said prisons shall not have been granted before the passing of this Act, and also those persons to whom such liberty shall have been granted before the passing of this Act, after the next determination of such liberty, shall be confined within the walls of the Queen's Prison, and that it shall be deemed an escape if any such prisoner be suffered to go beyond the walls of the prison, except as hereinafter provided.

xIII. That if the marshal of the Queen's Prison shall think fit to grant the liberty of the rules of the Queen's Bench Prison to any person who at the time of the passing of this Act shall be in the enjoyment of the liberty of the rules of the Fleet Prison, and shall be removed into the custody of the said marshal under this Act, the said marshal shall not exact any fee from such person for granting such liberty; and the securities to be entered into and executed in favour of the said marshal, for assurance that such person will not escape out of the custody of the said marshal, shall not be liable to any stamp duty.

xIV. That if any prisoner confined in the Queen's Prison shall become or be found to be of unsound mind during his or her imprisonment, and shall be so reported by the marshal or keeper thereof to one of Her Majesty's principal Secretaries of State, it shall be lawful for such Secretary of State, by warrant under his hand directed to the said marshal or keeper, upon the certificate of two physicians or surgeons that such prisoner is of unsound mind, to order that such prisoner shall be forthwith removed to the Royal Hospital of Bethlehem, and the President, Treasurer, and Governors of Bethlehem Hospital shall be bound to receive such prisoner, and him or her safely to keep, until a warrant of the Secretary of State shall be directed to them for re-delivery of such prisoner into the custody of the marshal or keeper of the Queen's Prison as hereinafter provided, and such removal shall not be construed to be an escape; and every prisoner so removed shall remain under confinement in Bethlehem Hospital until it shall be duly certified to one of Her Majesty's principal Secretaries of State, by two physicians or surgeons, that such prisoner hath become of sound mind, whereupon the Secretary of State shall issue his warrant to the President, Treasurer, and Governors of Bethlehem Hospital, ordering that such prisoner be re-delivered into the custody of the marshal or keeper of the Queen's Prison, for the purpose of being remanded to the Queen's Prison, and neither the marshal or keeper of the Queen's Prison, nor the President, Treasurer, and Governors of Bethlehem Hospital, shall be answerable for any escape which such prisoner may make out of Bethlehem Hospital.

xV. That whenever one of Her Majesty's principal Secretaries of State shall deem it necessary that the prisoners, or any of them, shall be removed on account of any contagious or infectious disease in the prison, or upon any other emergency, it shall be lawful for the Secretary of State, by a warrant under his hand, directed to the marshal or keeper of the Queen's Prison, to order that such prisoners shall be removed, in the custody of the said marshal or keeper, to such other place of imprisonment as the Secretary of State shall direct, such place having been first reported by the marshal or keeper of the Queen's Prison to the Secretary of State as a safe place of custody, and fit for the reception of such prisoners; and when such disease shall have ceased, or the purposes for which the prisoners shall have been removed shall have been fulfilled, it shall be lawful for the Secretary of State, by a like warrant, to order that such prisoners be removed back to the Queen's Prison; and any place to which any prisoners shall be removed under any such warrant shall be deemed, during their imprisonment therein, to be a part of the Queen's Prison, and no such removal of any prisoner shall be construed to be an escape.

xVI. That after the passing of this Act the rules for the government and regulation of the Queen's Prison shall be made from time to time by one of Her Majesty's principal Secretaries of State, who shall subscribe a certificate that such rules are fit to be enforced; and all rules so made shall be binding upon the marshal or keeper and other officers of the prison, and upon the prisoners confined therein; and all such rules shall be laid before Parliament within six weeks after such rules shall be certified, or if Parliament be not then sitting within six weeks after the next meeting of Parliament; and so much of any Act as relates to the making of rules for the said prison by any Court in Westminster Hall shall be repealed: Provided always, that the Judges of Her Majesty's Courts of Queen's Bench, Exchequer, and Common Pleas, and of Her Majesty's High Courts of Chancery and Admiralty, shall have and exercise the same powers with respect to ordering the marshal or keeper of the Queen's Prison to take into his custody any person committed by them respectively, or to bring before them respectively any prisoner in his custody, which the said Judges now have with respect to the several keepers of the prisons now belonging to the said courts, or any of them.

XXVII. That in the Queen's Prison the male prisoners shall be separated from the female prisoners, so as to prevent all communication between them, and that the prisoners of each sex shall be divided into the following classes; that is to say,

1. Debtors remanded by the Commissioners of the Court for the Relief of Insolvent Debtors, on the Ground of Fraud, or for refusing to file a Schedule of their Property :

That after the passing of this Act no prisoner in the Queen's Prison shall be allowed to send for or to have any beer, ale, victuals, or other food, or to send for, have, or use any bedding, linen, or other things, except such as shall be allowed to be brought by them respectively under such rules, to be made in the manner directed by this Act, as may be reasonable and expedient to prevent extravagance and luxury, and for enforcing due order and discipline within the prison.

That the clerk of the papers of the Queen's Prison shall be empowered to take the affidavits of prisoners within the said prison on any proceeding in any court of law or equity in like manner as he is now empowered to take the affidavits of prisoners in the Queen's Bench Prison in any proceeding in the Court of Queen's Bench; and for taking every such affidavit the clerk of the papers shall be entitled to have a fee of 1s., and no more.

XXI. It is Enacted,

LX. That in every case in which any information or complaint of any offence shall be laid or made before any of the said divisional Justices, and shall not be further prosecuted, or which, if further prosecuted, it shall appear to the Justice by whom the case shall be heard that there was no sufficient ground for making the charge, the Justice shall have power to award such costs, not more than the sum of 5*l.* to be paid by the informer to the party informed or complained against, for his loss of time and expenses in the matter, as to the Justice shall seem meet.

And after reciting that by divers Acts the moiety or other fixed portion of the penalties to be thereby recovered is directed to be adjudged to the informer, and the same has been found to encourage the corrupt practices of common informers; for prevention thereof,

And after reciting that by divers Acts certain limited penalties or terms of imprisonment are imposed for offences therein mentioned, and sufficient power is not given to the Justice or Justices before whom the offender is convicted to reduce or lessen such penalty or term of imprisonment, whereby much hardship is experienced;—

It is Enacted,

LXIII. That where by any Act now in force or hereafter to be passed a limited penalty or term of imprisonment is imposed on conviction of an offender before a Justice or Justices of the Peace, it shall be lawful for any one of the said divisional Justices before whom such conviction shall be had to reduce or lessen such penalty or term of imprisonment, in such manner as he may think fit: Provided always, that no penalty for the infringement of any Act relating to the revenue of Customs or Excise, Stamps or Taxes, shall be reduced by any such Justice below the amount or proportion allowed in that behalf by the Act or Acts specially relating thereunto, without the consent of the Commissioners of Customs or Excise, or Stamps and Taxes, respectively.

LXIV. That any one of the divisional Justices, if he shall think fit, may remand any person for further examination, or may suffer to go at large any person who shall be charged before him with any felony or misdemeanor, upon his personal recognizance (with or without sureties); and every such recognizance shall be conditioned for the appearance of such person before the same or some other of the said Justices for further examination, or to surrender himself to take his trial before such court, and at such day and place as shall be therein mentioned; and the Justice shall be at liberty, from time to time, to enlarge every such recognizance to such further time as he shall appoint; and every such recognizance which shall not be enlarged shall be discharged, without fee or reward, when the party shall have appeared according to the condition thereof: Provided always, that whenever any Justices shall take the recognizance of any person to appear and take his trial before any court of criminal jurisdiction, the Justice shall be bound to return the depositions taken in the case, and to bind over the witnesses to appear and give evidence, in like manner as if he had committed the party to take his trial at such court.

LXV. That all differences, complaints, and disputes which shall happen between any bargemen, lightermen, watermen, ballastmen, coal whippers, coal porters, sailors, lumpers, riggers, shipwrights, caulkers, or other labourers who work for hire in or upon the river Liffey or harbour of Kingstown, or the docks, creeks, wharfs, quays, or places adjacent, and the owners, masters, or commanders of vessels, or their agents, on the said river or harbour, or the docks or creeks thereunto adjoining, or the owners, wharfingers, or occupiers of such wharfs or quays, or their agents or other employers, respecting wages or money due to such labourers for work or loss of time, whether the same persons be employed for any certain time or in any other manner, may be heard and determined by any of the said divisional Justices; and every such Justice is hereby empowered to examine upon oath any such labourer as aforesaid, or any other witness or witnesses touching any such complaint or LXVII. That on complaint made to any of the said divisional Justices by any person who shall within the police district have occupied any house or lodging by the week or month, or whereof the rent does not exceed the rate of 15*l.* by the year, that his goods have been taken from him by an unlawful distress, or that the landlord, or his broker or agent, has been guilty of any irregularity or excess in respect of such distress, it shall be lawful for such Justice to summon the party complained against; and if upon the hearing of the matter it shall appear to the Justice that such distress was improperly taken or unfairly disposed of, or that the charges made by the party having distrained, or having attempted to distrain, are contrary to law, or that the proceeds of the sale of such distress have not been duly accounted for to the owner thereof, it shall be lawful for the Justice to order the distress so taken, if not sold, to be returned to the tenant, on payment of the rent which shall appear to be due, at such time as the Justice shall appoint, or if the distress shall have been sold, then to order payment to the said tenant of the value thereof, deducting thereout the rent which shall so appear to be due, such value to be determined by the Justice; and such landlord or party complained against, in default of compliance with any such order, shall forfeit to the party aggrieved the value of such distress, not being greater than 15*l.*, such value to be determined by the Justice.

LXVIII. That upon complaint made to any of the said divisional Justices by any person claiming to be entitled to the property or possession of any goods which are detained by any other person within the limits of the police district, the value of which shall not be greater than 15*l.*, and not being deeds, muniments, or papers relating to any property of greater value than 15*l.*, it shall be lawful for such Justice to summon the person complained of, and to inquire into the title thereto or to the possession thereof; and if it shall appear to the Justice that such goods have been detained without just cause, after due notice of the claim made by the person complaining, or that the person detaining such goods has a lien or right to detain the same by way of security for the payment of money, or the performance of any act by the owner thereof, it shall be lawful for such Justice to order the goods to be delivered to the owner thereof, either absolutely or upon tender of the amount appearing to be due by such owner (which amount the Justice is hereby authorized to determine), or upon performance, or upon tender and refusal of the performance, of the act for the performance whereof such goods are detained as security, or if such act cannot be performed, then upon tender of amends for non-performance thereof (the nature or amount of which amends the Justice is hereby authorized to determine); and every person who shall neglect or refuse to deliver up the goods according to such order shall forfeit to the party aggrieved the full value of such goods, not greater than the sum of 15*l.*, such value to be determined by the Justice: Provided always, that no such order shall bar any person from recovering possession of the goods or money so delivered or forfeited, by suit or action at law, from the person to whose possession such goods or money shall come by virtue of such order, so that such action be commenced within six calendar months next after such order shall be made.

That such fees as are contained in the schedule (A.) to this Act annexed, and no other or greater fees, may be taken for any business done or proceedings had before or by any of the said Justices, or by any Justice or Justices acting in any police office within the said police district, and a table of such fees shall be fixed in some conspicuous part of each of the said offices, and it shall be lawful for any of the said Justices to refuse to do any act for which any fee shall be demandable unless such fee shall be first paid; and that if any such act shall be done, and the fee due thereon shall not be paid, it shall be lawful for any of the said Justices to summon the person from whom such fee shall be due, and to make order for payment of the same, with the costs of the proceedings, and in default of payment to levy the same, with the costs of the distress, by warrant under his hand.

LXX. That all offences committed within the limits of the police district which, under this or any other Act, are punishable on summary conviction before a Justice or Justices of the Peace, may be heard and determined by any one or more of the said divisional Justices sitting at one of the divisional offices, or at any place within such district where any such Justice may be directed to attend, by warrant of the chief or under secretary, as hereinbefore provided, in a summary way, within six calendar months at the farthest next after the commission of such offence, or within such shorter time as shall be limited by the Act specifying the offence, and not afterwards, whether or not any information in writing shall have been exhibited or taken by or before such Justices, and all such proceedings by summons, without information in writing, shall be as valid and effectual as if an information in writing had been first exhibited in that behalf: Provided always, that a note or memorandum in writing, according to a form to be approved by the chief or under secretary of the Lord Lieutenant or other chief governor or governors of Ireland, shall be made and kept in the office, of the substance of every charge for which a summons or warrant shall be issued: Provided also, that the Justice, if he shall think fit, may require an information in writing to be laid, in every case in which it shall seem to him to be expedient, before the matter of the complaint or charge shall be brought before him; and the Justice shall examine into the matter of every complaint or charge brought before him, and if upon the confession of the party accused, or on the oath of any one or more witnesses, the party accused shall be convicted of having committed the offence charged or complained of, the party so convicted shall pay such penalty as to the Justice shall seem fit, not more than the greatest penalty made payable in respect of such offence, together with the costs of conviction, to be ascertained by such Justice.

LXXI. That all penalties, forfeitures, and other sums of money imposed, awarded or ordered to be paid by any of the said divisional Justices under the authority of this or any other Act of Parliament, and all sums of money which any person is bound to pay under any recognizance taken before a Justice, and afterwards forfeited, in case of non-payment thereof, may be levied, with the costs of such proceedings on non-payment, by distress and sale of the goods and chattels of the offender or person liable to pay the same, by warrant under the hand of such Justice; and the overplus (if any) of the money so raised or recovered, after discharging, with costs, the penalty, forfeiture, or sum ordered to be paid, shall be returned, on demand, to the party whose goods and chattels shall have been distrained; and in case any such penalty, forfeiture, or sum of money shall not be forthwith paid, it shall be lawful for such Justice to order the party to be detained in safe custody until the return can be conveniently made to such warrant of distress, unless such party shall give security, to the satisfaction of the Justice for his appearance at such place and time, not being more than seven days from the time of such detention, as shall be appointed for the return of the warrant of distress, and the Justice is hereby empowered to take such security by way of recognizance or otherwise; but if upon the return of such warrant it shall appear that no such sufficient distress could be had whereupon to levy the said penalty, forfeiture, or sum of money, and the same shall not be forthwith paid, or in case it shall appear to the satisfaction of the Justice, upon the confession of the party or otherwise, that he has not sufficient goods and chattels whereupon such penalty, forfeiture, or sum of money could be levied if a warrant of distress should be issued, it shall be lawful for the Justice, by warrant under his hand, to commit such party to some gaol or house of correction within the police district, there to remain for any time not more than two calendar months where the sum to be paid shall not exceed £l., and not more than three calendar months in any case, the imprisonment to cease on payment of the sum due.

LXXII. That any divisional Justice before whom any information shall be laid in writing against any person, or before whom any person shall be convicted in respect of any offence under this or any other Act of Parliament, may cause the information, summons, and the conviction to be drawn up according to the forms respectively given in Schedule (B.) to this Act annexed, or any other forms to the same effect, as the case may require: Provided always, that this enactment shall not invalidate any information, summons, or conviction laid or drawn in any other form which may be more specially suited to the case, or may be provided by law, and in any information in writing, and in every conviction for an offence contrary to any statute or statutes, it shall be sufficient if the offence shall be stated in the words of the statute declaring the offence or attaching any penalty thereunto.

LXXIII. That if any one or more of the divisional Justices of the police district aforesaid, before whom any information shall be exhibited, or other proceeding shall be had or taken, or prosecuted or continued, shall die or be absent pending such information or proceeding, or before the same shall be finally disposed of, it shall and may be lawful for any other or others of the said divisional Justices to entertain, hear, determine, and dispose of such information and proceeding, and to do all acts in relation thereto, in like manner, and with the like powers and authority, for all intents and purposes, as if such information had been originally exhibited or proceeding had or taken before such last-mentioned Justice or Justices respectively.

LXXIV. That no plaintiff shall recover in any action for any irregularity, trespass, or other wrongful proceeding made or committed in the execution of this Act, or in, under, or by virtue of any power or authority hereby given, if tender of sufficient amends shall have been made by or on behalf of the party who shall have committed such irregularity, trespass, or other wrongful proceeding before such action brought; and in case no tender shall have been made, it shall be lawful for the defendant in any such action, by leave of the Court where such action shall depend, at any time before issue joined, to pay into court such sum of money as he shall think fit, whereupon such proceeding, order and adjudication shall be had and made in and by such Court as in other actions where defendants are allowed to pay money into court.

LXXV. That no action, suit, or information, or other proceeding, of what nature soever, shall be brought, commenced or prosecuted against any person for any thing or matter omitted to be done in pursuance of this Act, or in the execution of any power or authority under this Act, unless twenty days previous notice in writing shall be given by the party intending to commence and prosecute such action, suit, information, or other proceeding, to the intended defendant, nor unless such action, suit, information, or other proceeding shall be brought or commenced within three calendar months next after the act committed, or in case there shall be a continuation of damage, then within three calendar months next after the doing or committing such damage shall have ceased, or unless such action, suit, or information shall be laid or brought in the county or the county of the city of Dublin; and if the plaintiff shall become nonsuited, or shall suffer a discontinuance of his action, suit, information, or other proceeding, after the defendant shall have appeared thereto, or if a verdict shall pass against the plaintiff thereon, or if, upon demurrer, or otherwise, judgment shall be given against the plaintiff, the defendant shall have his costs as between attorney and client, and shall have such remedy for recovering the same as defendants have for recovering costs of suit by law in other cases.

And after reciting that an Act was passed, 3 & 4 Will. 4. c. 68, intituled, 'An Act to amend the Laws relating to the Sale of Wine, Spirits, Beer, and Cider by Retail, in Ireland,' and another Act was passed, 6 & 7 Will. 4. c. 38, amending the said Act, and that another Act was passed, 2 & 3 Vict. c. 79, intituled, 'An Act for the better Prevention of the Sale of Spirits by unlicensed Persons in Ireland;' and that under the provisions of the said recited Acts it is necessary that, after an information has been exhibited for any offence, or for the recovery of any penalty or forfeiture under the said recited Acts or any of them, a notice in writing of such information having been so exhibited shall, within one week after the exhibition thereof, be given to the person or persons against whom the same shall have been so exhibited: And that such notice is unnecessary, inasmuch as the contents of such information are sufficiently notified to the party against whom the same is exhibited by the summons directed by the said Acts to be served upon such party;—

It is Enacted,

LXXVI. That so much of the said recited Acts or any of them as requires the service of such notice upon any person or persons against whom any information has been or shall be exhibited for any offence, or for the recovery of any penalty or forfeiture, under the said recited Acts or any of them, or under any Act or Acts amending the same, shall be and the same is hereby repealed.

LXXVII. That all things herein authorized to be done by the Commissioners of Police may be done by either of them.

LXXVIII. Provided and enacted, That nothing in this Act contained, except the provision empowering any one of the said divisional Justices to hear and determine offences now punishable on summary conviction by or before two or more Justices of the Peace, shall extend or be deemed or construed to extend to affect or alter any proceedings before Justices of the Peace for the recovery or condemnation of any penalties or forfeitures incurred under any Act or Acts relating to the Revenue of Customs or Excise, or Stamps, or to any act, matter or thing done by any officer of Customs or Excise, or Stamps, but that all such penalties and forfeitures shall, except as aforesaid, be sued for, recovered, mitigated, and applied under the enactments and provisions of the several Acts relating to the said revenues respectively.

LXXIX. That in the construction of this Act, unless there be something in the context repugnant thereto, the expression "Police District" shall be understood to signify the police district of Dublin metropolis; and the expression "Commissioners of Police" shall be understood to signify the Justices of the Peace for the police district of Dublin metropolis appointed under the authority of the hereinbefore recited Act, 6 & 7 Will. 4. c. 38, and the Acts amending the same; and the expressions "Divisional Justice" or "Divisional Justices" shall be understood to signify a divisional Justice or divisional Justices of the police district of Dublin metropolis; and that any word denoting the singular number in the male sex shall be taken to extend to any number of persons or things and to both sexes.

9. So much of last recited Act as provides for malt spirits removed from Scotland to Ireland after 11th March, repealed.
10. Commencement of Act.
11. Act may be altered this session.

By this ACT,

After reciting the passing of 6 & 7 Will. 4. c. 72, 3 & 4 Vict. c. 17, and 5 Vict. sess. 2. c. 15: And that by reason of the additional duty imposed by the said last-mentioned Act on spirits in Ireland the countervailing duties and drawbacks now payable under the said first-recited Act, 6 & 7 Will. 4. c. 72, on the several mixtures, compounds, preparations, or commodities therein mentioned, when removed from Ireland into England or Scotland, or from England or Scotland into Ireland, are greater in amount than the same should be, according to the rates of duty now payable on spirits in England, Scotland, and Ireland respectively, and it is therefore expedient to repeal all the said countervailing duties and drawbacks, and to impose other countervailing duties and drawbacks in lieu thereof, and to amend the said first-recited Act:—

It is Enacted,

- I. That the several duties and drawbacks now payable on the several mixtures, compounds, preparations, and commodities mentioned and described in the Schedule to the said first-recited Act, 6 & 7 Will. 4. c. 72, annexed, on the removal of the same from Ireland to Scotland or England, or from Scotland to England respectively, or from England to Scotland or Ireland, or from Scotland to Ireland, shall cease and determine, and in lieu thereof there shall be raised, levied, collected, and paid unto Her Majesty, her heirs and successors, upon the several mixtures, compounds, preparations, and commodities, mentioned and described in the Schedule to this Act, on the removal of the same from Scotland or Ireland respectively into England, the several sums of money and duties of Excise as they are respectively inserted, described, and set forth in the said last-mentioned Schedule, and that there shall be allowed and paid on the removal of such mixtures, compounds, preparations, and commodities from England to Scotland or Ireland respectively the several drawbacks of Excise also inserted, described, and set forth in the said Schedule to this Act.
- II. That the said duties and drawbacks hereby imposed and allowed shall be under the management of the Commissioners of Excise, and shall be charged, raised, levied, sued for, and recovered, and accounted for, allowed, and paid, in the same manner, and under the same laws, enactments, clauses, provisions, restrictions, rules, pains, penalties, and forfeitures, (except as otherwise provided for by this Act,) as the duties and drawbacks in lieu of which the same are imposed and allowed were charged, raised, levied, sued for, and recovered, and accounted for, allowed, and paid.
- III. That so much of the said first-recited Act, 6 & 7 Will. 4. c. 72, as prescribes or provides any rules or regulations or imposes any restrictions on the removal of any of the said mixtures, compounds, preparations, or commodities from Scotland to Ireland, or from Ireland to Scotland, and as limits or prescribes the strength of any of the said mixtures, compounds, preparations, or commodities, or the quantity of spirits to be contained therein, when removed from Scotland to Ireland, or from Ireland to Scotland, or as requires the same when so removed to be accompanied by a permit, shall be and the same is hereby repealed.

rv. That no liquor or preparation shall be deemed or taken to be made wines which shall not have undergone the usual process of fermentation in the manufacture thereof, and be in other respects what has been usually known in England as made wines, and shall be removed, and shall be described in the entries and other documents relating to such removal, and in the permits accompanying the same, as made wines; and all made wines which shall be removed as sweets, or otherwise than as aforesaid, shall be forfeited, and may be seized by any officer of Excise or Customs; and every person removing or having removed, or who shall be or shall have been concerned in the removal of the same, shall forfeit 100*l*.

v. That the duty hereby imposed and the drawback granted on made wines being fixed on the calculation that about twelve gallons of proof spirits are added in every one hundred gallons of made wines, if any made wines removed from Scotland or Ireland to England shall have added to them any greater quantity of spirits than in the proportion of twelve gallons of spirits of the strength of hydrometer proof in every one hundred gallons of such made wines, or if any made wines, when produced to be shipped from Scotland or England to Ireland, or after the arrival of the same in England respectively, shall be found to contain any greater quantity of spirits than in the proportion of twenty-four gallons of proof spirits (twelve of such twenty-four gallons being the calculation or allowance for spirit generated by fermentation) in every one hundred gallons of such made wines, or if any made wines removed from England to Scotland or Ireland on drawback shall have added to them, or shall be found to contain, when produced for shipment, or after arrival in Scotland or Ireland respectively, any less quantity of spirits than in the proportions aforesaid, all such made wines shall be forfeited, and may be seized by any officer of Excise or Customs; and every person removing or having removed, or who shall be or shall have been concerned in the removal of the same, shall forfeit 200*l*.

vi. That all spirits, and all other liquors, by whatever name called, having any portion of spirits therein, (not being mixtures, compounds, or preparations, or commodities or made wines, allowed to be removed under the said recited Act and this Act,) which shall be mixed with or shall have had communicated thereto any flavour of juniper, mint, peppermint, cloves, aniseed, carraway seeds, or almonds, or any of the oils thereof, or of any other oil, or the materials producing the same, used by rectifiers or compounders, or in the manufacture of British compounds, and all juices of fruit having spirits added thereto (not being fermented made wines), shall be deemed and taken to be British compounds, and shall not be removed from Scotland or Ireland to England, or from England to Scotland or Ireland, under the penalties and forfeitures contained in an Act, 6 Geo. 4. c. 80, for removing British spirits from one part of the United Kingdom to another part thereof, contrary to the regulations of the said last-mentioned Act.

vii. That if, upon the trial or hearing of any information, action, or other judicial proceeding, any question or dispute shall be raised whether any made wines, or any other of the mixtures, compounds, preparations, or commodities mentioned in the said recited Act, produced to be shipped for removal or removed from Ireland or Scotland to England, or from England to Scotland or Ireland, are of the kind, description, or denomination mentioned in the entries or documents relating to such removal, or in the permit obtained for or used on such removal, the proof thereof shall lie on the defendant or claimant in any information filed for the recovery of any penalty or duty, or for the condemnation of any seizure, and on the plaintiff in any action brought against any officer of Excise or Customs for any seizure made in respect of any such removal.

And after reciting that by the said recited Act, 5 Vict. sess. 2. c. 15, intituled, 'An Act to impose an additional Duty on Spirits, and to repeal the Allowance on Spirits made from Malt only, in Ireland,' the allowance payable on spirits distilled from malted corn only in Ireland is made to cease and determine from and after the 11th of March 1842: and that it is expedient that the operation of so much of the said Act as determines the said allowance, and as requires the same to be repaid by any distiller in Scotland removing such spirits to Ireland, should be suspended;—

viii. That so much of the said Act as enacts, at from and after the 11th of March 1842, the allowance granted by the said recited Act, 2 Will. 4, for and upon every gallon of spirits of the strength of hydrometer proof distilled in Scotland and Ireland from malted corn only, not being mixed with any unmalted corn or grain whatever, after the rate of two gallons of such spirits for every bushel of barley malt, or one bushel and one-fourth of a bushel and one third part of a gallon of malt made from bear or bigg only, in respect of which spirits any distiller in Scotland or Ireland shall be charged with duty during the time that such distiller shall use malt only, shall, as respects Ireland, cease and determine and be no longer paid or payable, and the several enactments, provisions, and regulations in any Act or Acts of Parliament contained, for claiming or paying the same, be no longer enforced, save and except as in the said Act is saved and excepted, and as enacts, that no spirits distilled in Scotland from unmalted corn or grain, mixed or unmixed with malt, shall be taken out of any warehouse for removal to Ireland, unless such spirits were distilled and warehoused by some distiller not having at the time when such spirits were distilled and warehoused any spirits made from malt only, or on which any allowance shall be or shall have been made in respect of the duty on malt, in his stock or possession or in such warehouse, and which shall be so certified by the proper officer at the time of warehousing and also at the delivery thereof, nor shall any spirits made from malt only, or in respect of which any allowance as aforesaid has been or shall be made, paid, or received, be taken out of warehouse in Scotland for removal to Ireland until the allowance so made shall have been repaid by the distiller to the Commissioners of Excise, or such person as they shall order or direct to receive the same, and as imposes penalties and forfeitures for any removal contrary to such enactment, shall be suspended, and shall not be in operation until the 1st of August 1842; and until the said day the said allowance shall continue to be paid and received, and the several enactments, provisions, and regulations relating thereto shall continue in force in Ireland, in the same manner as if the said Act of the present session had not been passed.

ix. That so much of the said Act of the present session as directs, that on all spirits made from malt only, or in respect of which any such allowance as aforesaid shall have been or shall be made, which shall be removed from Scotland to Ireland after the 11th of March 1842, such allowance shall be repaid, and as empowers and requires the Commissioners of Excise to sue for and recover the amount thereof, shall be and the same is hereby repealed.

x. That this Act shall commence and take effect from and after the passing thereof.

xi. That this Act may be amended or repealed by any Act to be passed in this present session of Parliament.

By this Act,

After reciting that it is expedient to alter and amend the law relating to ecclesiastical houses of residence:—

It is Enacted,

I. That whenever it shall appear to be expedient to relieve any bishop having more episcopal houses of residence than one from any of such houses, or to provide any bishop with a more convenient house of residence, or to add to, alter, improve, or take down and rebuild any episcopal house of residence, or to improve the demesnes thereof, it shall be lawful, by the authority provided in an Act, 6 & 7 Will. 4. c. 77, with the consent under the hand and episcopal seal of the bishop, to make such arrangements as may by such authority be deemed most expedient, for selling and conveying, to such person or body corporate, and for such consideration as may be approved by the like authority, any episcopal house of residence then belonging to the see of such bishop, or for taking down the same or any part thereof, and selling the site or the materials thereof (as the circumstances may render expedient), or for adding to, altering, improving, or taking down and rebuilding any episcopal house of residence, or for improving the demesnes adjoining to any such house by the purchase of any land, tenement, or hereditament in the immediate neighbourhood or within the view thereof, or for building a new episcopal house of residence for any see on any site to be approved by the like authority, and for applying the proceeds of any such sale as aforesaid, or any part thereof, to any of such purposes, or to any such other purposes, and in such manner as shall appear to be most conducive to the permanent benefit of the see; and that so much of the said Act as relates to the providing of any bishop with a more suitable and convenient residence shall be extended so as to include and apply to any of the purposes of this Act.

II. Provided and enacted, That in any scheme which shall be laid before Her Majesty in Council by the Ecclesiastical Commissioners for England under this Act, recommending any arrangement for taking down or selling any episcopal residence, or changing the site thereof, the said Commissioners shall set forth particularly the grounds and reasons upon which they deem it expedient to offer such recommendation.

III. That 2 & 3 Vict. c. 18. shall be repealed; provided that nothing herein contained shall affect any subsisting mortgage made under the provisions thereof, but that every such mortgage, and all proceedings completed and in progress in respect thereof, shall be as valid and effectual, and all the parties to such mortgage or to any such proceeding shall continue subject to the same conditions and provisions as if the said Act had not been repealed.

IV. That in case such a deficiency shall have been or would be created in the average annual income of any bishop appointed after the passing of the said first-recited Act, by the effecting of any mortgage or other arrangement under either of the said Acts or this Act, as to reduce it below the average annual income of such bishop named in the first-recited Act, or in any order of Her Majesty in Council issued under the provisions thereof, it shall be lawful, by the authority aforesaid, out of any monies from time to time standing to the credit and account of the Ecclesiastical Commissioners for England, being part of payments from the larger sees respectively towards the augmentation of the incomes of the bishops of the smaller sees, if it shall be deemed fit, and if such monies, after duly considering all the claims thereon, shall appear to be sufficient for such purpose, to make any arrangement for supplying or preventing such deficiency or any part thereof which by the like authority shall be deemed expedient.

v. That it shall be lawful for the dean and chapter, or for the dean, or for any canon of any cathedral church, under the authority aforesaid, to purchase any episcopal house of residence sold under the provisions of this Act, or the site of any such house, or any other house or site, being contiguous or near to such cathedral church, or any part of such house or site, and to add to, alter, or improve any such house, or to take down the same, and to build another house or more houses than one upon the site thereof, or to apply the site of any such house, or any part thereof, by and with the authority aforesaid, to the improvement of the cathedral or the precincts thereof; and that so much of an Act, 3 & 4 Vict. c. 113, as relates to the raising of monies by any dean or canon for the purpose of building, enlarging, or otherwise improving the residence house of his deanery or canonry, shall be extended so as to make lawful the raising of monies, in the manner and with the authority therein provided, by any dean and chapter, dean or canon, for any purpose of this Act.

vi. That any house so purchased by the dean and chapter, dean or canon of any cathedral church, or any house erected upon any site so purchased, may by the authority aforesaid, and with the consent of the dean and chapter, be made the deanery or the house of residence for any canon of such church; and the house theretofore occupied as the deanery, or any house no longer required as the house of residence of any canon, may be so applied or disposed of as may by the same authority and with the like consent be determined on.

It is Enacted,

1. That it shall be lawful for the incumbent for the time being of any benefice, from time to time after the passing of this Act, by deed under his hand and seal, with the consent of the patron of such benefice, and of the bishop of the diocese wherein the same is locally situated, and where the lands proposed or intended to be leased are of copyhold or customary tenure with the consent also of the lord for the time being of the manor of which the same are holden, in any case where the lease proposed to be granted could not according to the custom of the manor be effectually made without the licence of the lord, such respective consents to be testified by the persons whose consents are hereby required respectively being parties to and signing and sealing such deeds before the execution thereof by such incumbent, to lease any part of the glebe lands or other lands of or belonging to such benefice, either with or without any farmhouses, cottages, barns, or other agricultural buildings or conveniences, parcel of or belonging to such benefice, to any person whomsoever, for any term of years not exceeding fourteen years, to take effect in possession, and not in reversion or by way of future interest, so that there be reserved on every such lease, payable to the incumbent for the time being of such benefice quarterly in every year, during the continuance of the term thereby granted, the best and most improved yearly rent that can be reasonably gotten for the same, without taking any fine, foregift, premium, or other consideration for granting such lease, and so that no such lessee be made punishable for waste by any clause or words to be contained in such lease, and so that the lessee do thereby covenant with the incumbent granting such lease, and his successors, for due payment of the rent thereby to be reserved, and of all taxes, charges, rates, assessments, and impositions whatsoever which shall be payable in respect of the premises thereby leased, and do further covenant with such incumbent and his successors, that he will not assign or underlet the hereditaments comprised in such lease, or any part thereof, for all or any part of the term thereby granted, without the consent of the bishop of the diocese for the time being and the patron and incumbent for the time being of the said benefice, to be testified by their respectively being parties to and sealing and delivering the deed or instrument by which any assignment or underlease of the same premises, or any part thereof, may be effected; and that he will in all respects cultivate and manage the lands and hereditaments thereby leased according to the most improved system of husbandry, in that part of the country where such lands and hereditaments are locally situated, so far as such system may not be inconsistent with any express stipulation to be contained in such lease; and that he will keep, and at the end of the term leave, all the lands comprised in such lease, together with the gates, drains, and fences of every description, and other fixtures and things thereupon or belonging thereto, in good and substantial repair and condition; and that he will at all times during the continuance of the term keep the buildings comprised in such lease, or to be erected during the term upon the lands thereby demised, or on any part thereof, insured against damage by fire, in the joint names of the lessee, his executors or administrators, and of the incumbent of the benefice for the time being, in three-fourths at the least of the value thereof; and that he will lay out the money to be received by virtue of any such insurance, and all such other sums of money as shall be necessary, in substantially rebuilding, repairing, and reinstating, under the direction of a surveyor to be for that purpose appointed by the incumbent of such benefice for the time being and such lessee, by some writing under their respective hands, such messuages or buildings as shall be destroyed or damaged by fire; and so that there be inserted in every such lease a reservation for the use of such incumbent and his successors of all timber trees and trees likely to become timber, and of all saplings and underwoods, and of all mines and minerals, except as is hereinafter provided; and also a power of re-entry, in case the rent thereby to be reserved shall be unpaid for the space of twenty-one days next after the same shall become due, or in case the lessee shall be convicted of felony, or shall become a bankrupt, or shall take the benefit of any Act or Acts of Parliament now in force or hereafter to be passed for the relief of insolvent debtors, or shall compound his debts, or assign over his estate and effects for payment thereof, or in case any execution shall issue against him or his effects, or in case such lessee shall not from time to time duly observe and perform all the covenants and agreements on his part in such lease to be contained; and so that the lessee in each such lease do execute the same or a counterpart thereof: Provided always, that any stipulation, covenant, condition, or agreement in any such lease to be contained, on the part of the lessee, for the adoption and use of any particular mode or system of cultivation, or for the drainage or subdividing, or embanking or warping (in those places where the system of improvement of land called warping is or may be practised), of all or any of the lands comprised in such lease, or for the erection of any new or additional farmhouses, barns, or outhouses, or other farm buildings, which the condition or local situation of the lands to be comprised in such lease may require or render expedient, or for putting in repair any houses, edifices, or buildings to be comprised in any such lease, or for making any substantial improvements on the premises, or for the reservation or payment of any additional rent or rents, or penalty on breach of any of the covenants or agreements contained in any such lease, shall not be deemed or construed to be a fine, foregift, premium, or consideration for the granting of such lease within the meaning of this Act: Provided also, that nothing herein contained shall be construed to preclude the lessor in any such lease from covenanting that the lessee shall be entitled to have or take from off the demised premises brick earth, stone, lime, or other materials for the erection or repair of any buildings, or for the construction or repair of drains, or for any other necessary improvements, and sufficient rough timber, to be assigned by the incumbent for the time being, or his agent duly authorized, for any of the purposes aforesaid, and for the making or repair of gates and fences: Provided also, that the custom of the country as to outgoing tenants shall apply to each lease to be granted under this Act, except so far as the lease shall contain any express stipulation to the contrary: Provided also, that the term to be granted by any such lease as aforesaid may be twenty years in any case where the lessee shall covenant thereby to adopt and use any mode or system of cultivation more expensive than the usual course, or to drain or subdivide, or embank and warp, at his expense, any part of the demised premises, or to erect, at his own expense, on the said premises, any buildings, or to repair in a more extensive manner and at a greater expense than is usually required of lessees of farms any buildings on the demised premises, or in any other manner to improve, at his expense, the demised premises or any part thereof.

11. That the authority given by this Act shall not render valid any lease to be granted in the manner hereinbefore mentioned, unless the parsonage house or other the house of residence of or belonging to the benefice, and all offices, outbuildings, yards, gardens, orchards, and plantations to such parsonage house or other house of residence adjoining and appurtenant, and which may be necessary or convenient for actual occupation with such parsonage house or other house of residence, and also so much glebe land or other land of or belonging to the benefice, and situated the most conveniently for actual occupation by the incumbent, as, together with the site of such parsonage house or other house of residence, offices, and outbuildings, and with such yards, gardens, orchards and plantations as aforesaid, shall amount to ten acres at least, if there shall be ten or more acres of such land situated within five miles from the parsonage or other the house of residence, or if there shall be less than ten acres so situated then the whole of such land, shall be reserved out of or not be comprised in such lease, and not be comprised in any subsisting lease for the time being which shall have been previously granted under the authority of this Act: Provided always, that in any case where the lands comprised in any lease granted under the authority of this Act shall be situate five miles or upwards from the parsonage house or other the house of residence, or (in case there shall be no parsonage house, or other house of residence) from the church or chapel of the benefice to which such lands shall belong, the provision herein contained for the reservation of a stipulated number of acres of the glebe land or other land of or belonging to the benefice shall not be applicable.

III. That whenever any lease is intended to be granted under the authority of this Act a competent land surveyor shall be appointed by the bishop of the diocese and the patron and incumbent of the benefice, by some writing under their respective hands; and such surveyor shall make a map or plan under an actual survey of the lands proposed or intended to be leased, and of the other lands of or belonging to the benefice, or of such part or parts of the said other lands as will sufficiently shew to the bishop of the diocese and the patron of the benefice the relative positions or local situations and quantities of the lands proposed or intended to be leased, and of the lands (if any) intended to be reserved, and as will enable them to form an accurate judgment of the situation and convenience for actual occupation of the lands intended to be reserved; and such surveyor shall certify that the lands intended to be leased, and such buildings and other hereditaments (if any) as are intended to be leased therewith, are proper to be leased to a tenant under the provisions of this Act, and (in any case where the provision hereinbefore contained respecting the reservation of a stipulated number of acres may be applicable) that the lands which are intended to remain unlet are such part of the glebe land or other land of or belonging to the benefice as is situated the most conveniently for actual occupation by the incumbent thereof; and such surveyor shall also make a valuation on actual survey of the lands and hereditaments proposed or intended to be leased, and shall report what is the best yearly rent which ought to be reserved upon a lease of such lands and hereditaments under the circumstances under which such lease is proposed or intended to be granted, and shall state the course of husbandry or management of such lands and hereditaments which ought in the opinion of such surveyor to be adopted by the tenant thereof; and in any case where it is proposed that the lease shall contain special covenants on the part of the lessee for the drainage or subdividing, or embanking or warping, of all or any of the lands to be comprised in the lease, or for the erection of any new or additional farmhouses, barns, or outhouses, or other farm buildings, or for putting in repair any houses, edifices, or buildings to be comprised in the lease, or for making any substantial improvement in the premises, such surveyor shall certify that in his opinion the covenants for those purposes are proper covenants to be entered into by the lessee under the circumstances of the case, and he shall state the amount by which the yearly rent to be reserved by the proposed lease ought in his judgment to be diminished in respect or on account of the lessee entering into such covenants; and in any case where it is proposed that the lessee shall be entitled to have or take from off the demised premises, brick earth, stones, lime, or other materials, or rough timber, for any of the purposes hereinbefore mentioned, he shall also certify that in his opinion the covenants on the part of the lessor for those purposes are proper to be entered into, and that he has taken the matter into his consideration in estimating the amount of rent to be reserved by the proposed lease; and such surveyor shall in all cases also report upon and state such other matters or things (if any) connected with such intended lease, or the lands and hereditaments proposed or intended to be therein comprised, as he shall, by such bishop, patron, and incumbent, or any of them, be directed to report upon; and the map or plan, certificate, valuation, and report of such surveyor shall be respectively signed by such surveyor, and verified by his declaration to be made before any Justice of the Peace, and shall, immediately upon the completion thereof, respectively be delivered to the bishop of the diocese: Provided always, that in all cases in which there shall be in the possession of the bishop of the diocese, or of the patron or incumbent of any benefice, or of the parish officers of the parish in which such benefice may be comprised, any map or plan made under an actual survey of the parish, or of such part thereof as shall include the lands proposed or intended to be demised, a copy of or an extract from such map or plan may be substituted for the map or plan hereinbefore directed to be made by any such surveyor as aforesaid.

IV. That the receipt in writing of the incumbent by whom any lease shall be granted under the authority of this Act, acknowledging that he has received the counterpart, or an attested copy in all cases where there shall be only one part, of such lease, and signed by such incumbent, and indorsed on the lease, shall be conclusive evidence that the counterpart or lease (as the case may be) has been duly executed by the lessee, and also in all cases where there shall be only one part of such lease that the attested copy is a true and faithful transcript of the original lease; and the execution by the bishop and patron, whose consents are hereby made requisite, of any lease to be granted under the authority of this Act, shall be conclusive evidence that the lease does not comprise any lands which ought not to be leased under the provisions of this Act, and that a proper portion of the glebe land remains unleased, and that the rent reserved by such lease is the best and most improved rent that could be reasonably gotten for the lands and hereditaments comprised therein at the time of granting such lease, and that all the covenants contained in such lease are proper covenants.

V. That no surrender of any lease which shall have been made under the authority of this Act shall be valid to any purpose whatsoever unless the bishop of the diocese and the patron and incumbent of the benefice to which the lands or hereditaments comprised in such lease shall belong shall respectively be made parties to and execute the deed or instrument by which such surrender shall be made; and every such surrender shall have operation from the time only when such deed or instrument as aforesaid shall have been executed by all the persons whose execution thereof is hereinbefore required.

And after reciting that there are within divers dioceses certain exempt jurisdictions called peculiars, belonging to the archbishops and bishops of other dioceses, and it is expedient that all the powers, authorities, and duties by this Act given to or imposed upon the bishop of the diocese should, as to such peculiars, be given to and imposed upon the archbishop or bishop to whom the same respectively belong;—

It is Enacted,

VI. That all the powers, authorities, and duties by this Act given to or imposed upon the bishop of any diocese shall, with respect to the several peculiars locally situated within such diocese, be exercised and performed by the archbishop or bishop to whom such peculiars shall respectively belong, and not by the bishop within whose diocese such peculiar shall be locally situated, but that with respect to all peculiars belonging to any other person than archbishops or bishops such powers, authorities, and duties shall be exercised and performed by the bishop of the diocese within which such peculiars shall be locally situated.

VII. That whenever the consent or concurrence of the patron of any benefice, or of the lord for the time being of any manor, is hereby required, and the patron of such benefice, or the lord for the time being of such manor, (as the case may be,) shall happen to be a minor, idiot, lunatic, or feme covert, or beyond seas, it shall be lawful for the guardian, committee, husband, or attorney (as the case may be) of such patron or lord (but in the case of a feme covert not being a minor, idiot, or lunatic, or beyond seas, with her consent in writing,) to execute the instrument by which such consent or concurrence is to be testified, in testimony of the consent or concurrence of such patron or lord; and such execution shall, for the purposes of this Act, be deemed and taken to be an execution by the patron of the benefice or by the lord of the manor (as the case may be).

VIII. That in any case in which the consent or concurrence of the patron of any benefice is hereby required, and the patronage of such benefice shall be in the Crown, the consent or concurrence of the Crown shall be testified in the manner hereinafter mentioned; (that is to say,) if such benefice shall be above the yearly value of 20*l.* in the King's books, the instrument by which such consent or concurrence shall be testified shall be executed by the Lord High Treasurer or First Lord Commissioner of the Treasury for the time being; and if such benefice shall not exceed the yearly value of 20*l.* in the King's books, such instrument shall be executed by the Lord High Chancellor, or Lord Keeper or Lords Commissioners of the Great Seal, for the time being; and if such benefice shall be within the patronage of the Crown in right of the duchy of Lancaster, such instrument shall be executed by the Chancellor of the said duchy for the time being; and the execution of such instrument by such person or persons shall be deemed and taken, for the purposes of this Act, to be an execution by the patron of the benefice.

IX. That in any case in which the consent or concurrence of the patron of any benefice is hereby required, and the right of patronage of such benefice shall be part of the possessions of the duchy of Cornwall, the consent or concurrence of the patron of such benefice to the exercise of such power shall be testified in the manner hereinafter mentioned; (that is to say,) the instrument by which such consent or concurrence is to be testified shall, whenever there shall be a Duke of Cornwall, whether he be of full age or otherwise, be under his Great or Privy Seal, or if there be no Duke of Cornwall, and such benefice shall be in the patronage of the Crown in right of the duchy of Cornwall, such instrument shall be executed by the person or persons who is or are authorized to testify the consent or concurrence of the Crown; and such instrument, being so sealed or executed, shall be deemed and taken, for the purposes of this Act, to be an execution by the patron of the benefice.

X. That in any case in which the consent or concurrence of the patron of any benefice or of the lord of any manor is hereby required, and the patronage of such benefice, or (as the case may be) the lordship of such manor, shall belong to any dean and chapter, or collegiate or other corporate body having a common seal, the consent or concurrence of such dean and chapter, or collegiate or other corporate body, shall be testified by the sealing of the instrument by which such consent or concurrence is to be testified with the common seal of such dean and chapter, collegiate or other corporate body.

XI. That the person or persons (if not more than two), or the majority of the persons (if more than two), or the corporation, who or which would for the time being be entitled to the turn or right of presentation to any benefice if the same were then vacant, shall, for the purposes of this Act, be considered to be the patron thereof: Provided nevertheless, that in the case of the patronage being exercised alternately by different patrons, the person or persons (if not more than two), or the majority of the persons (if more than two), or the corporation, who or which would for the time being be entitled to the second turn or right of presentation to any benefice, if the same were then vacant, shall, for the purposes of this Act, jointly with the person or persons or corporation entitled to the first turn or right of presentation, be considered to be the patron thereof.

XII. That in all cases in which any person shall sustain any more than one of the aforesaid characters of bishop of the diocese, patron, lord of the manor, and incumbent, in respect of any benefice to which the provisions of this Act extend, every such person shall or may at any time act in both or all of the characters which he shall so sustain as aforesaid, and execute and do all and every or any of such deeds and acts as are hereby authorized to be executed and done, as effectually as different persons, each sustaining one of those characters, could execute and do the same.

XIII. That whenever any lands or hereditaments proposed to be leased under the provisions of this Act are or shall be vested in any trustee or trustees, in trust for or for the benefit of any incumbent hereby empowered to grant leases as aforesaid, in such a manner as that the net income or three fourth parts at the least of the net income of such lands and hereditaments is, are, or shall be payable for the exclusive benefit of such incumbent, all the powers of this Act which, in case such lands and hereditaments had been legally vested in such incumbent for the sole and exclusive benefit of such incumbent, might have been exercised by such incumbent in relation to or affecting the same lands and hereditaments, shall or may be exercised by such incumbent in the same or the like manner as the same might have been exercised by such incumbent in case the same lands and hereditaments were legally vested in such incumbent as aforesaid; but in order to give legal effect to any lease to be executed in relation to any such lands and hereditaments, in pursuance of this Act, the trustee or trustees of the premises intended to be affected thereby shall be made a party or parties to such lease (in addition to the other parties whose concurrence is hereby declared to be requisite to any such lease), and shall join in the demise intended to be thereby made; and the trustee or trustees of any such lands or hereditaments is and are hereby directed and required at all times to execute any lease to which he or they may be made a party or parties, with a view to give legal effect to any such lease as aforesaid, as soon as the same may be tendered to him or them for execution, after the same shall have been duly executed by the incumbent beneficially entitled to such premises, and the bishop and patron, whose consents are hereby declared to be requisite to the validity of any lease granted by such incumbent; and the fact that any such lease is executed by the said other parties shall be a sufficient authority for the execution thereof by the trustee or trustees of the same premises, and it shall not at any time afterwards be necessary for such trustee or trustees, or for any other person or persons, to prove that such deed was executed by such other parties, or any of them, prior to the execution thereof by such trustee or trustees; provided that no trustee shall by virtue of or under this provision be compellable to execute any lease whereby he shall render himself in any way liable, further than by a covenant for quiet enjoyment by any lessee against the acts of the trustee executing such deed.

xiv. That the part of every lease granted under this Act, which shall belong to any incumbent, or, in case there shall not be more than one part of any such lease, an attested copy thereof, and every surrender to be made under this Act, together with the writing by which a surveyor shall have been appointed as aforesaid, and the map or plan, or copy of or extract from a map or plan, (as the case may be,) certificate, valuation, and report hereinbefore directed to be made before the granting of such lease, shall, within six calendar months next after the date of such lease, be deposited in the office of one of the registrars of the diocese wherein such benefice shall be locally situated, to be perpetually kept and preserved therein, except where the benefice shall be under the peculiar jurisdiction of any archbishop or bishop, in which case the several documents before mentioned shall be deposited in the office of the registrar of the peculiar jurisdiction to which such benefice shall be subject; and such registrars respectively, or their respective deputies, shall, upon any such deposit being so made, sign and give unto the incumbent a certificate of such deposit; and such lease or attested copy and other documents so to be deposited shall be produced, at all proper and usual hours, at such registry, to the incumbent of the benefice for the time being, or to the patron of such benefice for the time being, or to any person on their or either of their behalf, applying to inspect the same; and an office copy thereof, respectively certified under the hand of the registrar or his deputy, (and which office copy, so certified, the registrar or his deputy shall in all cases, upon application in that behalf, give to the incumbent for the time being of such benefice,) shall in any action against the lessee, and in all other cases, be admitted and allowed in all courts whatsoever as legal evidence of the contents of such lease, or of any such other document, and of the due execution of the counterpart of such lease by the lessee, if there shall be any counterpart, and of the due execution of the lease and of every such other document by the parties who on the face of such office copy shall appear to have executed the same; and every such registrar shall be entitled to the sum of 5s., and no more, for so depositing as aforesaid the documents hereinbefore directed to be deposited, and for certifying the deposit thereof, and the sum of 1s., and no more, for each search and inspection, and the sum of 6d., and no more, over and besides the stamp duty (if any) for each folio of seventy-two words of each office copy so certified as aforesaid.

That from and after the commencement of this Act, if any person should be convicted of the said offence hereinbefore last specified, such person shall not suffer death, or have sentence of death awarded against him for the same, but shall be liable to be transported beyond the seas for the term of the natural life of such person, or for any term not less than seven years, or to be imprisoned for any term not exceeding four years.

XVI. That whosoever shall be convicted of any offence which by any Act or Acts in force in Ireland amounts to the crime of piracy, and is thereby made punishable with death, shall not suffer death, or have sentence of death awarded against him for the same, but shall be liable, at the discretion of the Court, to be transported beyond the seas for the term of the natural life of such person, or for any term not less than fifteen years, or to be imprisoned for any term not exceeding three years.

XVII. That all persons who shall be convicted of any of the felonies hereinbefore specified as principals or accessories before the fact, and who shall be punishable by transportation under and by virtue of this Act, shall be liable, previously to their being transported, to be imprisoned, with or without hard labour, in the common gaol or house of correction, or to be confined in the penitentiary, for any term not exceeding four years nor less than one year, in case the Court before whom such person shall be convicted shall think fit.

XVIII. That any principal in the second degree or accessory before the fact who, in respect of any of the offences above set forth or referred to, would be punishable with death, shall instead thereof be punishable in the same manner as the principal in the first degree is by this Act made punishable.

XIX. That in awarding the punishment of imprisonment for any offence punishable under this Act it shall be lawful for the Court to direct such imprisonment to be with or without hard labour in the common gaol or house of correction, and also to direct that the offender shall be kept in solitary confinement for any portion or portions of such imprisonment, whether the same be with or without hard labour, not exceeding one month at any one time, and not exceeding three months in any one year, as to the Court in its discretion shall seem meet.

And after reciting that by 52 Geo. 3. c. 143, it was among other things enacted, that in all cases where any act to be done or committed, after the passing of the now-recited act, in breach of or in resistance to any part of the laws for collecting His Majesty's revenue in Great Britain, would, by the laws then in force, subject the offender to suffer death as guilty of felony without benefit of clergy, by virtue of the said laws or any of them, such act so to be done or committed should be deemed and taken to be felony with benefit of clergy, and punishable only as such, unless the same should also be declared to be felony without benefit of clergy by the now-recited Act: And that it is expedient to assimilate the law in Ireland in that respect with that of Great Britain:—

It is Enacted,

XX. That when any act to be done or committed by any person in Ireland, in breach of or in resistance to any part of the laws for collecting Her Majesty's revenue in Ireland, would, by the laws now in force there, subject the offenders to suffer death, by virtue of the said laws or any of them, such act so to be done or committed shall be deemed and taken to be punishable only as such act if done or committed in Great Britain may be punishable by any Act or Acts in force in Great Britain.

XXI. That nothing in this Act contained shall be construed to extend to the alteration or repeal of any of the powers, provisions, or regulations contained in an Act, 7 Geo. 4. c. 74, intituled 'An Act for consolidating and amending the Laws relating to prisons in Ireland, or in any Act or Acts for amending the same.

XXII. That this Act shall commence and take effect on the 1st of October 1842.

XXIII. That this Act may be amended or repealed in this present session of Parliament.

It is Enacted,

1. That the said building shall be called "The Pentonville Prison," and shall be used as a prison for such offenders as are hereinafter specified, and shall be within the provisions of an Act, 5 & 6 Will. 4. c. 38, and of 2 & 3 Vict. c. 56, intituled 'An Act for the better ordering of Prisons.'

II. That the said prison, and all the lands, tenements, and hereditaments thereunto belonging, with the appurtenances thereof, and all persons in respect thereof, shall be wholly freed and discharged from all taxes, rates, assessments, and charges whatsoever.

III. That from and after the expiration of five years after the passing of this Act the said prison, and all lands, tenements, and hereditaments purchased before the passing of this Act for the purposes thereof, under the powers of this Act shall become and remain absolutely vested in Her Majesty, her heirs and successors; and that if any proceedings shall be taken before the expiration of the said term of five years, upon which judgment shall be obtained for the recovery of the possession of any such lands, tenements, and hereditaments, then, within two calendar months after such judgment shall be obtained, there shall be paid or tendered to the person obtaining such judgment, instead of such lands, tenements, or hereditaments, his costs on the proceedings for obtaining such judgment, and such sum of money as a jury, in the manner hereinafter mentioned, shall find to have been the value of the said lands, tenements, and hereditaments.

iv. That the jury which shall try any proceeding brought for the recovery of the possession of any of the said lands, tenements, or hereditaments shall at the same time ascertain the value thereof at the time when they were conveyed for the purposes of this Act, or when possession was taken thereof; and the value so found shall be certified by the presiding Judge under his hand, and such certificate shall be delivered to the persons seeking to recover possession thereof, and the value so ascertained shall be the amount to be paid, instead of such lands, tenements, and hereditaments.

v. That it shall be lawful for Her Majesty, with the advice of her Privy Council, to nominate and appoint any number of fit persons, not being less than seven or more than eleven, to be Commissioners for governing the said prison; and it shall be lawful for Her Majesty, with the like advice, from time to time to remove all or any of the said Commissioners, and to appoint others in their stead, or instead of such as shall die, or resign, or be unable by sickness or otherwise to attend.

vi. That it shall be lawful for the said Commissioners, with the approval of one of Her Majesty's principal Secretaries of State, to appoint for the said prison a governor, a chaplain or chaplains, being clergymen not having any other cure of souls, and a medical officer, and, with the like approval, to remove all or any of them; and it shall also be lawful for the said Commissioners to appoint, and at their pleasure to remove, so many other officers and servants as one of Her Majesty's principal Secretaries of State shall deem to be necessary for the service and discipline of the prison; and the Secretary of State, with the approval of the Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury, shall fix the salaries to be paid to the said governor, chaplain or chaplains, medical officer, and other officers and servants of the prison: Provided always, that no chaplain so to be appointed shall officiate at the said prison until he shall have obtained a licence for that purpose from the bishop of the diocese of London, nor for any longer time than while such licence shall be in force; and notice of every such appointment of a chaplain shall be sent to the bishop by the said Commissioners within one calendar month next after such appointment.

vii. That it shall be lawful for the Secretary of State, if he shall deem it necessary, to require any person employed in the said prison to give security for the due performance of his duties, in such sums, and with such collateral securities, and in such form as the Secretary of State shall direct.

viii. That if any person appointed to any office or employment in the said prison who shall be removed from his office or employment shall refuse or neglect to quit the said prison, or to give up possession of any house, building, or apartment therein or belonging thereto, within such period as shall be fixed by the Secretary of State in any order or notice in writing, not being less than forty-eight hours after the delivery to such person of any such order or notice, then it shall be lawful for any Justice of the Peace acting for the county of Middlesex, on application of any one of the said Commissioners, by warrant under the hand and seal of such Justice, to direct the sheriff of the county to remove such person out of the prison, and the said sheriff shall thereupon clear the possession thereof, so far as relates to any part of the prison, or any house, building, or apartment therein or belonging thereto, occupied by or in possession of such person, in like manner as upon a writ of habere facias possessionem.

ix. That the said Commissioners shall have the same powers and duties with respect to the said prison which the visiting Justices of any other prison have with respect to their prison; and all enactments respecting the visiting Justices of any prison shall be deemed to apply to the said Commissioners with respect to the Pentonville Prison; and the said Commissioners shall hold meetings, and they or any three of them shall be empowered from time to time to make and alter rules for their meetings, and for all matters relating thereunto, and also for the government of the said prison, and for the duties and conduct of the governor and other officers of the prison, and for the diet, clothing, maintenance, employment, and discipline of the convicts imprisoned therein, as to the said Commissioners shall seem fit: Provided, that no such rule, whether it be original, or an amendment or revocation of a former rule, shall be enforced until it shall have been approved by one of Her Majesty's principal Secretaries of State.

x. That the said Commissioners shall from time to time appoint one or more of themselves to visit the Pentonville Prison during the intervals between their meetings, and, if they shall think fit, may delegate power to such visitors or any of them to make any order or give any direction, in cases of pressing emergency within the said prison, which might be made or given by the said Commissioners, provided that every such order or direction shall be in writing, and shall be reported, with the circumstances by which the same was occasioned, to the Commissioners at their next meeting.

xi. That the Commissioners of the said prison, and their successors, shall be a body corporate, and shall sue and be sued by the name of "The Commissioners for the Government of the Pentonville Prison."

xii. That the Commissioners shall have power to make contracts with any persons whomsoever for the clothing, diet, and other necessities for the maintenance and support of the convicts confined in such prison, and for the implements or materials for any kind of manufacture or trade in which convicts confined in such prison shall be employed, and also to carry on such manufacture or trade in such prison, and to sell such goods, wares, and merchandise, as shall there be wrought or manufactured.

xiii. convey bridge to be conveyed every such convict to the said prison, and if, upon examination by the medical officer of the Pentonville Prison, he shall appear fit to be received into the prison, shall there deliver him, or cause him to be delivered, into the custody of the governor of the Pentonville Prison, with a true copy, attested by such sheriff or gaoler, of the caption and order of the Court by which such convict was sentenced, containing the sentence of every such convict by virtue of which he shall be in the custody of such sheriff or gaoler, and also a certificate specifying such particulars within the knowledge of the sheriff or gaoler concerning such convict as may be from time to time directed by one of Her Majesty's principal Secretaries of State; and the governor of the Pentonville Prison shall give a receipt in writing for every convict received into his custody to the sheriff or gaoler, for his discharge; and all reasonable expenses which the sheriff or gaoler shall incur in every such removal shall be paid by the county, riding, division, city, borough, liberty, or place for which the Court in which the offender shall be convicted shall have been holden.

XV. That when any convict who shall be ordered to be confined in the said prison shall be brought thither, in pursuance of the powers contained in this Act, he shall continue in the custody of the person in whose custody he shall have been brought to the prison until he shall have been examined by the medical officer, and until it be certified by the medical officer that he is fit to be received into the prison, and if the medical officer shall certify that he is not fit to be received there, he shall be conveyed back in the same custody to the prison or place of confinement from which he was brought.

XVI. That every convict who shall be received into the custody of the governor of the Pentonville Prison shall continue there until he shall be transported according to law, or conditionally pardoned, or shall become entitled to his freedom, or until the Secretary of State shall direct the removal of such convict to any other prison or place of confinement in which he may be lawfully imprisoned: Provided always, that every such convict shall nevertheless be within the provisions of an Act, 5 Geo. 4. c. 84, intitled, 'An Act for the Transportation of Offenders from Great Britain,' in case one of Her Majesty's principal Secretaries of State shall direct that he shall be afterwards removed from the Pentonville Prison as herein provided.

XVII. That no convict who shall have been received into the custody of the governor of the Pentonville Prison shall be dismissed from the said prison at the end or other determination of his term, if he shall then labour under any acute or dangerous distemper, unless at his request; and when such convict shall be finally discharged such decent clothing, and such assistance in money, or otherwise, as shall be judged proper by the Commissioners, shall be given to such convict.

XVIII. That such convicts may be employed in work at the said prison, every day in the year, except Sundays, Christmas Day, Good Friday, and any day appointed for a general fast or thanksgiving, so many hours, not exceeding twelve, exclusive of the time allowed for meals and exercise, as the Commissioners shall order: Provided always, that the said Commissioners, by a written order, may allow any convict, at his own request, to labour for a longer time than is required by the rules of the prison.

XIX. That no person, except the Commissioners, officers, and servants of the prison, or such persons as shall be authorized according to the rules made by the said Commissioners, shall be allowed at any time to enter any part of the prison or airing yards allotted to or used by the prisoners, or to converse or hold communication of any kind with any of them.

XX. That after delivery of any such convict as aforesaid into the custody of the governor of the Pentonville Prison, such governor or other person having the custody of convicts under his direction shall, during the term for which such convicts shall be ordered to remain in his custody, have the same powers over such convicts as are incident to the office of sheriff or gaoler, and in case of any abuse of such custody, or other misbehaviour or negligence in the discharge of his office, shall be liable to the same punishment to which a gaoler is now liable by law.

XXI. That if any convict in the Pentonville Prison shall assault the governor, or any officer or servant employed therein, the Commissioners may order him to be prosecuted for the said offence, and upon conviction thereof such convict shall be liable to be imprisoned for any term not exceeding two years, in addition to the term for which at the time of committing such offence he was subject to be confined, and shall also be liable to corporal punishment, if the Court shall so order.

XXII. That it shall be lawful for one of Her Majesty's principal Secretaries of State at any time to order any convict to be removed from the Pentonville Prison as incorrigible; and in every such case the convict so removed shall be liable to be transported, under his original sentence of transportation, to the full extent of the term specified in such sentence, and shall be liable to all the consequences of such sentence, in the same manner as if no order for sending him to the Pentonville Prison had been made.

XXIII. That if any convict confined in the said prison shall become or be found to be insane during such confinement, and be so reported by the Commissioners to one of Her Majesty's principal Secretaries of State, it shall be lawful for such Secretary of State, by warrant under his hand, to order that such insane convict shall be forthwith removed to such lunatic asylum as the said Secretary of State may judge proper; and every convict so removed shall remain under confinement in such asylum, or in any other lunatic asylum to which such convict may be lawfully removed, until it shall be duly certified to one of Her Majesty's principal Secretaries of State by two physicians or surgeons that such convict has become of sound mind, whereupon, if the time for which such convict was sentenced to be imprisoned shall not have expired, the Secretary of State shall issue his warrant to the governor or other person having the care of such asylum, ordering that such convict be remanded to the Pentonville Prison, or, if the period of imprisonment of such convict shall have expired, that he be discharged.

XXIV. That every convict who shall be ordered to be imprisoned in the Pentonville Prison, who at any time during the term of such imprisonment shall break prison, or who, while being conveyed to such prison, shall escape from the person or persons having the lawful custody of such convict, shall be punished by an addition not exceeding three years to the term of his imprisonment, and if afterwards convicted of a second escape or breach of prison shall be adjudged guilty of felony; and every convict in the Pentonville Prison who at any time during the term of his imprisonment shall attempt to break prison, or who shall forcibly break out of his cell, or make any breach therein with intent to escape therefrom, shall be punished by an addition not exceeding twelve calendar months to the term of his imprisonment.

XXV. That every person who shall rescue any convict who shall be ordered to be imprisoned within the Pentonville Prison, either during the time of his conveyance to the said prison or of his imprisonment therein, and also every person who shall aid in any such rescue, shall be guilty of felony; and every person having the custody of any such convict as aforesaid, or being employed by the person having such custody as a keeper, under keeper, turnkey, assistant, or guard, who shall knowingly and wilfully allow such convict to escape, and also every person who, by supplying arms, tools, or instruments of disguise, or otherwise, shall in any manner aid any such convict in any escape, though no escape be actually made, and every person who shall attempt to rescue any such convict, or aid in any such attempt, though no rescue be actually made, shall be guilty of felony; and every person having such custody as aforesaid who shall carelessly allow any such convict to escape shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and being lawfully convicted of such misdemeanor shall be liable to fine or imprisonment, or to both, at the discretion of the Court.

XXVI. XXIX. By this Act,

After reciting that by 56 Geo. 3. c. 58, brewers of, dealers in, and retailers of beer in Great Britain are prohibited from receiving or taking into or having in their custody, or making or using, or mixing with or putting into any worts or beer, any liquor, extract, calx, or other material or preparation such as had been theretofore or as should thereafter be made use of for or in the darkening of the colour of worts or beer, other than brown malt, ground or unground, as commonly used in brewing: And that by 7 & 8 Geo. 4. c. 52, brewers in Ireland are prohibited from receiving into or having in their custody or possession, or using in brewing, or mixing with or putting into any worts or beer, any ingredients, preparation, or material whatsoever, in addition to or for or as a substitute for malt or hops, or for the purpose of diluting or darkening the colour of worts or beer, other than brown malt, ground or unground, as commonly used in brewing: And that the brown malt mentioned in the said recited Acts is malt made brown or dark by being more highly dried on the malt kiln of the maltster in completing the process of malting, and known also as blown malt: and that malt prepared by being roasted in cylinders after the process of malting has been completed, and commonly known as roasted malt or roasted amber malt, has been found to be a preferable material in brewing for darkening or improving the colour of beer and ale; but from the difficulty of distinguishing unmaltered grain when roasted from roasted malt great frauds may be committed on the revenue of Excise on malt by the use of such roasted malt; and it is therefore expedient to provide regulations for the preparation, sale, and use of the same:—

It is Enacted,

- I. That from and after the commencement of this Act no malt shall be roasted for sale, nor shall any roasted malt be sold, sent out, or delivered by any person, other than a roaster of malt or dealer in roasted malt duly licensed and entered under the provisions of this Act.
- II. That from and after the 5th of July 1842, every roaster of malt before he shall begin to roast any malt, and every dealer in roasted malt before he shall sell, send out, or deliver any such malt, shall take out an Excise licence, authorising such person to carry on the trade or business of a roaster of malt or dealer in roasted malt, and shall at the expiration of such licence, and yearly from year to year so long as such person shall carry on the said trade or business respectively, renew the same, paying yearly for such licence, if a roaster of malt, the sum of 20*l.*, and if a dealer in roasted malt the sum of 10*l.*, and every such licence shall be in force until the 5th of July in each year, and shall then expire; and every person who shall carry on the trade or business of a roaster of malt, by roasting any malt, or selling, sending out, or delivering any roasted malt, or of a dealer in roasted malt by selling, sending out, or delivering any quantity thereof, without having taken out or renewed and having then in force such licence as aforesaid, shall forfeit 100*l.*
- III. That the duties by this Act imposed on licences to be taken out by roasters of malt and dealers in roasted malt shall be under the management of the Commissioners of Excise for the time being, and shall and may be raised, levied, collected, answered, and recovered, paid over and accounted for, in such and the like manner, and in or by any of the general or special ways, means, or methods by which any other duties of Excise on licences are or may be raised, levied, collected, answered, or recovered, paid over and accounted for; and every such licence shall be in such form as the Commissioners of Excise shall direct, and shall be granted by the said Commissioners, or their officers duly authorized to grant licences under any law or laws of Excise; and all enactments, provisions, regulations, pains, penalties, and forfeitures under any law or laws of Excise relating to licences shall extend to and be put in force in respect of such licences, and the duties thereon, and the persons required to take out and renew the same respectively, as fully and effectually as if such enactments, provisions, regulations, pains, penalties, and forfeitures were repeated and re-enacted in this Act.
- IV. That every roaster of malt shall, before beginning to roast any malt, make a true and particular entry in writing, signed by such roaster of malt, of every warehouse, storehouse, shop, room, or other place, and where situated, intended to be made use of by him for the receiving, preparing, roasting, and keeping of malt, and also of every furnace, cylinder, or other utensil to be made use of in roasting malt, by delivering such entry to the officer of Excise in whose survey his premises shall be situated; and in every such entry every warehouse, storehouse, shop, room, or other place, and every furnace, cylinder, and other such utensil as aforesaid shall be distinguished by a particular number or letter, or number and letter or letters, and in default thereof every such roaster of malt shall, for every unentered warehouse, storehouse, shop, room, or place, furnace, cylinder, or other such utensil, forfeit 200*l.*; and every unentered furnace, cylinder, or other utensil, and all malt found therein, shall be forfeited; and every dealer in roasted malt shall, before receiving, selling, sending out, or delivering any roasted malt, in the same manner make a like entry of every warehouse, storehouse, shop, room, and place to be made use of by him for receiving, storing, or keeping any roasted malt, on pain of forfeiting the like penalty; and all malt of any description, unroasted or roasted, found in any unentered warehouse, storehouse, shop, room, or other place, made use of by any roaster of or dealer in roasted malt, shall be forfeited.
- V. That every roaster of malt and every dealer in roasted malt shall mark and number, and at all times, on demand in writing of the supervisor of Excise, legibly re-mark and re-number, every warehouse, storehouse, shop, room, and other place, and every furnace, cylinder, and other utensil required to be entered by such roaster of malt or dealer respectively, with a distinguishing number or letter, or number and letter or letters, corresponding to the description thereof in the entry of such roaster of malt or dealer respectively; and every warehouse, storehouse, shop, room, or other place, furnace, cylinder, or other utensil, made use of for receiving, preparing, roasting, or keeping malt, which shall not be so marked or numbered, or re-marked or re-numbered, or which shall not correspond with the description thereof in the entry, shall be deemed and taken to be unentered.

vi. (18th June 1842.)

ABSTRACT OF THE ENACTMENTS.

1. Committee may grant a certificate of indemnity to any person examined before them.
2. Act may be amended this session.

By this Act,

After reciting that the Commons of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland in Parliament assembled have appointed a committee to inquire "whether corrupt compromises have been entered into in the cases of election petitions presented from Harwich, Nottingham, Lewes, Penryn, and Falmouth, Bridport, and Reading, for the purpose of avoiding investigation into gross bribery alleged to have been practised at the elections for the aforesaid towns, and whether such bribery has really taken place:" and that the object of the appointment of the said committee may be better accomplished, and the truth of the several matters connected therewith be more effectually discovered, if such committee shall have the power of indemnifying the persons who may give evidence before it touching the same:—

It is Enacted,

1. That it shall be lawful for the committee appointed in pursuance of the said resolution to give to any person examined by or before it a certificate in writing, signed by the chairman authorized by the committee, stating that such person, upon his or her examination, appears to have made a true and faithful disclosure touching all acts or matters to which he or she has been so examined, and such person so receiving such certificate shall be and is hereby freed, indemnified, and discharged of, from, and against all penal actions, forfeitures, punishments, disabilities, incapacities, and all criminal prosecutions, which he or she may have been or may become liable or subject to, or which he or she may have incurred or may incur, at the suit of Her Majesty, her heirs or successors, or any other person or persons, for or by reason or means of or in relation to any act, matter, or thing done or committed by such person in respect of the withdrawing, or of having withdrawn, compromised, or abandoned any election petition or petitions relating to the boroughs or places before mentioned, or in anywise relating thereto, or to any bribery, corruption, or intimidation touching which he or she shall have been examined by or before the said committee.

II. That this Act may be amended or repealed by any Act to be passed in this present session of Parliament.

CAP. XXXII.

AN ACT for better recording Fines and Recoveries in Wales and Cheshire.

(18th June 1842.)

ABSTRACT OF THE ENACTMENTS.

1. All fines levied in the late Courts of Great Sessions in Wales and the Court of Session in Cheshire, shall be held to be good in law, notwithstanding any neglect in keeping the record.
2. Certain fines taken to be levied with proclamations.
3. Certain recoveries declared good in law.
4. Fines and recoveries may be inrolled in the office of Registrar of Court of Common Pleas.
5. Saving the amending power of Court of Common Pleas.
6. Act may be amended, &c.

By this Act,

After reciting that the records of fines levied and recoveries suffered in the lately abolished Courts of Great Sessions in the principality of Wales, and the lately abolished Court of Session in the county palatine of Chester, were in many cases so irregularly and carelessly engrossed and kept, that divers purchasers and others whose titles were intended to be secured by and under the said fines and recoveries are in danger to have the same impeached, notwithstanding that the said fines and recoveries had duly passed all the offices, and that the lands intended to be thereby assured are sufficiently described in the proceedings upon such fines and recoveries :—

It is Enacted,

I. That all fines levied in the lately abolished Courts of Great Sessions in the principality of Wales, or in the lately abolished Court of Session of the county palatine of Chester, of which the writ of covenant was duly returned and compounded, and of which the acknowledgment was before the Judge or by commissioners duly taken and allowed, and of which the said writs and concords, with other proceedings, were lodged in the office of the prothonotary of the county in which the lands named in such writs are situated, shall be holden good and firm in law, notwithstanding the misprision or neglect of any prothonotary, deputy prothonotary, secondary, or other officer of any of the said courts, or their clerks, or any other public officer whatsoever, to file the same, or to engross the chirograph or foot of such fine, to indorse or record the proclamations thereof, or to inrol or docket the said fine, or do any other thing which by his office he ought to have done after the acknowledgment of the said fine.

II. That where it shall be needful to prove that any fine which appears to have been duly acknowledged was levied with proclamations in any of the said courts, it shall be taken to have been so levied, and shall have all the force of a fine levied with proclamations, although no chirograph or foot of such fine be found indorsed with the proclamations, nor any entry of them or any of them appear on record, if such fine were duly inrolled or entered on the plea roll of the session in which it was levied, or docketed in the docket roll or docket book of such session, so as to set forth the names of the parties and the places in which the lands are situated of which such fine was levied; or if within three years from the passing of this Act, or such further time as the Court of Common Pleas shall in any case allow, such fine shall have been docketed, in such form as aforesaid, in docket rolls or docket books of parchment or vellum, by the several late prothonotaries of the said abolished courts, or in case of the death or inability of any such prothonotary by some person or persons appointed for that purpose by the Master of the Rolls; or if within the said period of three years, or such further time as the Court of Common Pleas shall in any case allow, the writ of covenant, and the concord and all other proceedings of such fine, shall have been inrolled, with the allowance of the said Court, in a book or books, roll or rolls of parchment or vellum, as hereinafter provided: Provided always, that any such fine may be reversed by writ of error issued within twenty years from the levying thereof.

III. That all recoveries suffered in any of the said abolished courts whereof the writ of entry was duly returned, and the appearance of the tenant and vouches or vouchees duly recorded by the Court, or the warrant or warrants of attorney duly executed and allowed, and of which the said writ and other proceedings (if any) was or were lodged in the office of the prothonotary of the county in which the lands named in the said writ are situated, shall be holden good and firm in law, notwithstanding the non-inrolment or non-exemplification of such recovery, or any other misprision or neglect of any prothonotary or other officer as aforesaid to do anything which by his office he ought to have done after the recording of the appearance of the tenant and vouches or vouches, or the execution and allowance of the warrant or warrants of attorney: Provided nevertheless, that where no inrolment on the plea roll of the session in which such recovery was suffered, or any exemplification of a pretended inrolment thereof, sealed with the judicial seal of the Court, or any entry on the remembrance roll sufficient to prove the arraignment of the writ of entry, can be found or produced, no such recovery shall be holden good by virtue of this Act, unless within three years after the passing of this Act, or such further time as the Court of Common Pleas shall in any case allow, the writ of entry or other proceedings extant of record touching the said recovery shall be inrolled as hereinafter provided, or such recovery shall have been docketed in full and ample manner as aforesaid: Provided also, that any such recovery may be reversed by writ of error issued within twenty years from the suffering thereof.

IV. That, subject to such orders as the Court of Common Pleas from time to time shall make, any person may at any time henceforward cause the writ, concord, chirograph, proclamation, appearance, warrant of attorney, and all or any other proceedings in any fine or recovery levied or suffered in any of the said abolished courts, and now extant among the public records thereof, to be inrolled in the office of the registrar of certificates and affidavits of acknowledgments of deeds by married women in the Court of Common Pleas, which office, for the purposes of an Act passed in the 27 Eliz. c. 9, intituled 'An Act for Reformation of Errors in Fines and Recoveries in the Twelve Shires of Wales and Counties Palatine, and for Exemplification of Fines and Recoveries generally,' and under such of the provisions of the said Act as are now capable of taking effect, shall be deemed to be the inrolment office therein named: Provided always, that no such inrolment of any writ of covenant or writ of entry shall be made as aforesaid where such writ shall not have been duly filed upon the proper file of the session in which the same was returnable, unless the compounding of such writ shall be proved to the satisfaction of the said registrar by an entry thereof duly made in the book of the compounder of king's silver for the county in which the lands named in such writ are situate; and in every such case such entry or certificate of composition made shall be inrolled together with such writ.

V. Declared and enacted, That the Court of Common Pleas shall have the same power of amending any fine or recovery, and the record or inrolment thereof, whether as now extant, or as such fine or recovery, or any proceedings thereof, shall hereafter be inrolled in manner aforesaid, as if the same had been originally levied, suffered, or had in the Court of Common Pleas.

VI. That this Act may be amended or repealed by any Act to be passed in this session of Parliament.

CAP. XXXIII.—IRELAND.

AN ACT to amend and explain so much of Two Acts, of the Sixth and Seventh Years of His late Majesty, and of the First Year of Her present Majesty, as relates to the Execution of Civil Bill Decrees for the Possession of Land in Ireland.

(18th June 1842.)

ABSTRACT OF THE ENACTMENTS.

1. Sheriffs in Ireland may appoint deputies for the execution of civil bill decrees for delivering possession of lands.
2. Sheriffs indemnified from penalties for having allowed decrees to be irregularly executed, and for non-execution, &c.; and said executions declared valid.
3. Sheriffs may plead the general issue, &c.
4. Recited Acts shall remain in force.
5. Act may be amended this session.

By this Act,

After reciting that by 6 & 7 Will. 4. c. 75, certain provisions were made for the appointment of bailiffs for the execution of the decrees or orders of the civil bill courts therein mentioned; and it was also thereby enacted, that civil bill decrees for possession of lands should be executed by the sheriff, and also decrees, so far as respected costs in ejectment cases, and that every sheriff should be entitled to and be paid a sum of 10s. 6d., and no more, for executing every decree for delivering possession made by an assistant barrister or Judge on appeal; and the said sheriffs were thereby required to execute all such decrees in person, or by his deputy, within a week after the same should be delivered to him and required by the party to execute the same: And by 7 Will. 4. & 1 Vict. c. 43, so much of the said first-recited Act as relates to the appointment of bailiffs for the purposes aforesaid, and to certain other matters, was repealed, and other provisions were made in relation thereto; but it was provided that decrees for delivering possession made by an assistant barrister or Judge on appeal should be executed by the sheriff or his deputy in person, in manner and within the time and for the fee in the said first-recited Act in that behalf directed: And that doubts have arisen whether, under the said recited provisions, sheriffs in Ireland have power to appoint any deputy, other than their under-sheriffs, for the purpose of executing such civil bill decrees for the possession of lands; And that it is expedient to remove such doubts:—

It is Enacted,

I. That it shall and may be lawful to and for all sheriffs in Ireland, when and as often as they shall be required so to do by any plaintiff in any civil bill ejectment decree, by themselves, or their under-sheriffs acting in their names and on their behalf, by any writing or writings to be indorsed on any civil bill decrees for the possession of land, now made or hereafter to be made, to authorize, nominate, and appoint any person or persons whom such sheriff or sheriffs may think fit to act as deputy or deputies of such sheriffs, and at the peril of such sheriff and sheriffs to execute all decrees for delivering possession of land made by any assistant barrister or Judge on appeal, and for the costs of such decrees; and that such deputy or deputies shall execute the same in manner and within the time in the first hereinbefore in part recited Act directed in that behalf, and shall have for such purpose all and singular the same powers and authorities as the sheriff or sheriffs, under-sheriff or under-sheriffs, by whom he or they shall be appointed: Provided always, that no larger or other fee shall be paid to the sheriff for executing, either in person or by deputy, any decree for delivering the possession of land, than the said sum of 10s. 6d. in the said first-recited Act specified, and that no fee whatever shall be paid or payable to any deputy or deputies to be made or appointed under or in pursuance of the provisions hereinbefore contained.

And for the relief of such sheriffs as may have been unable to execute such decrees for possession of lands, or for the costs of such decrees, in person or by their deputies, or who may have executed such decrees by any other persons, and for removal of all doubts as to the validity of such execution of such decrees,—

It is Enacted,

II. That any sheriff who may have at any time previous to the passing of this Act omitted to execute any such decree as aforesaid, in person or by his deputy, or who may have executed the same by any person other than his sub-sheriff, shall be and is hereby indemnified and discharged of and from all liabilities, penalties, and damages whatsoever by reason of such omission, or by reason of having executed any such decree by any person other than his sub-sheriff; and that every such decree at any time previous to the passing of this Act executed by any person thereunto authorized by any such sheriff, and on his behalf, shall be deemed and taken to have been duly executed to all intents and purposes, and that the execution of such decree by any such person as aforesaid shall be alike good, valid, and effectual as if the same had been executed by the sheriff in person or by his deputy.

III. SCHEDULE (B.)

No. VII.—Rules for assessing and charging the Properties under Schedule (B.)

The duties last before mentioned shall be charged in addition to the duties to be charged under Schedule (A.) on all the properties in this Act directed to be charged to the said duties, according to the general rule in Number I. Schedule (A.) before mentioned, on the full amount of the annual value thereof estimated as by this Act is directed (except a dwelling-house, and the domestic offices thereunto belonging, and which dwelling-house and offices shall not be occupied, by virtue of one and the same demise, with a farm of lands for the purpose of farming such lands, or with a farm of tithes for the purpose of farming the same; and except warehouses or other buildings occupied for the purpose of carrying on a trade or profession); provided that in all cases where lands are subject to a rent-charge in lieu of tithes under the Act passed for the commutation of tithes, and in all other cases where lands in England are not subject to tithes, or to any modus or composition real in lieu thereof, there shall be deducted out of the duties contained in this Schedule a sum not exceeding one-eighth part thereof; and in all cases where such lands are subject to a modus or composition real, and not subject to any tithes, there shall be deducted out of such duties so much thereof as, together with the like rate on such modus or composition real, shall not exceed one-eighth part of such duties as aforesaid; and in all cases where such lands are subject to a modus or composition real in lieu of certain specific tithes, and also are subject to certain other specific tithes, or where such lands are free of certain specific tithes and are subject to certain other specific tithes, the annual value of such lands shall, for the purpose of charging the duties under this Schedule, be estimated at the rack-rent at which the same would let by the year if wholly free from tithes, and there shall be deducted therefrom the amount or value of one-eighth of the said duties chargeable on the said estimate, as in cases of tithe-free lands: Provided also, that any person being lessee and occupier of tithes or teinds taken in kind, or being the occupier of the lands from whence such tithes or teinds shall arise, and compounding for the same, shall be charged in respect of the occupation at the rate of 2d. for every 20s. of the annual value thereof, estimated as aforesaid: Provided also, that the several properties hereinafter described in Number VIII. shall be assessed and charged in manner therein mentioned.

No. VIII.—Rules for estimating the Properties hereinafter next mentioned under Schedule (B.)

The profits arising from lands occupied as nurseries or gardens for the sale of the produce, and lands occupied for the growth of hops, shall be estimated according to the rules contained in Schedule (D.), and the duty shall be charged at the rate contained in the said Schedule; and when the said duty shall have been so ascertained, the same shall be charged under Schedule (B.) as profits arising from the occupation of lands, except where the lands so occupied for the growth of hops shall be part of a farm held under one demise, or by the same person as owner, and shall not exceed one-tenth part of such farm, in which case the duty thereon under this Schedule shall be charged together in one sum as for a farm by the said general rule in Schedule (A.) mentioned.

No. IX.—Rules for charging the said Duties under Schedules (A.) and (B.)

First.—The said duties, except where other provisions are made as aforesaid for estimating particular properties, shall be estimated according to the general rule contained in Schedule (A.), and shall be charged on and paid by the occupier for the time being, his executors, administrators, and assigns:

Second.—Every person having the use of any lands or tenements shall be taken and considered, for the purposes of this Act, as the occupier of such lands or tenements:

Third.—The said several duties shall on each assessment thereof be levied on the occupier for the time being without any new assessment, notwithstanding any change in the occupation thereof: Provided that every tenant on quitting the occupation shall be liable for the arrears at the time of so quitting, and for such further portion of time as shall then have elapsed, to be settled and levied by the respective Commissioners, and repaid to the occupier by whom the same shall have been paid: and the executors or administrators of any tenant who shall die before the payment of such assessment shall be liable in like manner as the testator or intestate would have been if living: Provided also, that every tenant quitting before the time of making the assessment shall be liable for such portion of the year as shall have elapsed at the time of his so quitting, to be adjusted and settled by the respective Commissioners.

No. X.—Rules for estimating the annual Value of Properties before described in Schedules (A.) and (B.) or either of them.

First.—Where any landlord shall be subject to any covenant or agreement to pay or satisfy, out of the rent reserved on any lands or tenements, any parochial rates, taxes, or assessments which by law are a charge on the occupier, or any composition for tithes; or where any rector, vicar, or other person entitled to any rent or other annual payment to be made in lieu of tithes (except a rent-charge confirmed under the Act passed for the commutation of tithes), or any composition for tithes, shall pay or satisfy out of the amount thereof any such parochial rates, taxes, or assessments charged on such tithes, rent, composition, or other annual payment aforesaid, then and in every such case the annual value shall be estimated for the purposes of this Act exclusive of such rates, taxes, or assessments, and of such composition for tithes, to be computed on the amount thereof bond fide paid by such landlord or other person aforesaid in and for the year preceding the year of assessment; or where the owner shall be also occupier of such lands or tenements, and shall have paid any parochial rates, taxes, or assessments charged on the same, or any composition for tithes thereon, then the said annual value shall be also estimated exclusive of such rates, taxes, and assessments and composition for tithes, to be computed in like manner as aforesaid:

- Second.—Where any tenant of lands or tenements shall be subject to any covenant or agreement to pay or satisfy any aids, taxes, rates, or assessments by law chargeable on or payable by the landlord, the amount thereof which shall have been bond fide paid by such tenant in and for the year preceding the year of assessment shall, in making the estimate for the purpose of charging the duty in respect of occupation, be added to the rent reserved, in case the same shall have been let within the period of seven preceding years, and if not so let, the estimate shall be made according to the general rule in Schedule (A.), with the like addition thereto of the amount of such payment.
- Third.—Where the amount of rent of lands or tenements reserved in money shall depend in the whole or in part on the price of corn or grain, the estimate for the purpose of charging the duties in Schedule (A.) shall be made on the amount payable according to the average prices or fiars fixed in the year preceding the year appointed for payment of the duty, and in the same manner by which such rents have usually been ascertained between the landlords and tenants; but where the whole or a part of the rent shall be reserved in corn or grain, then the said estimate shall be made on the like average price or fiar computed on the quantity of corn or grain delivered or to be delivered in the year appointed for payment of the duty; or where such computation cannot be made, the estimate aforesaid may be made on the annual value of such lands estimated according to the said general rule:
- Fourth.—Where the amount of rent reserved on lands or tenements shall depend on the actual produce thereof, either in respect of the price or quantity of such produce, the estimate for the purpose of charging the duties in Schedule (A.) shall be made on the amount or value of such produce in the year preceding the year appointed for payment of the duty, according to the prices fixed and according to the quantity produced in that year, by the same rules and in the same manner by which such rents have usually been ascertained between the proprietors and their lessees or tenants, and where the prices or fiars shall vary in the two years of assessment, or the amount of produce shall vary in those years, the assessment shall, on appeal or surcharge, be rectified accordingly:
- Fifth.—Every estimate of such property in Scotland shall be made without reference to the cess or tax roll or valued rents heretofore used in Scotland, or any stent thereon, and shall be made according to the general rule contained in Schedule (A.) to the best of the belief and judgment of the Commissioners, assessors, and others employed in charging the said several duties.

LXIV. That upon every account of the annual value of the several properties aforesaid, to be charged under Schedules (A.) and (B.) delivered in manner before directed to the assessor, he shall make an assessment of the said property on the amount of the sum ascertained by such account, if he shall be satisfied with such amount; but if he shall not be satisfied therewith, or if no such account shall have been returned, or if the occupier or other person aforesaid shall not be resident within the limits of the district of such assessor, and no such return shall have been made, then the said assessor shall estimate, to the best of his judgment, the annual value of the said property of which no sufficient account shall have been delivered, and make an assessment of the same accordingly; and in doing so it shall be lawful for such assessor in every case relating to lands or tenements to be estimated according to the said general rule by the annual value thereof, where such annual value cannot be otherwise ascertained, and he is hereby required in every such case, to make such assessment according to the following rules; (videlicet),

No. XI.

- First.—Where the last rate made for the relief of the poor in any parish or place shall be made throughout by a pound rate on the annual value, as the same would be estimated according to Schedule (A.), the assessment thereon to be made under this Act shall be made on the same sums respectively as in such rate:
- Second.—Where the said rate shall be made throughout by such pound rate on any proportionate part of the annual value as aforesaid, the proportion thereof shall be observed as in the said rate, but the assessment thereon to be made under this Act shall be made at the same sums respectively as they would have been estimated at if the said rate had been made on the full amount of such annual value:
- Third.—Where properties of different kinds shall be rated in the said rate according to different proportions of the value thereof as aforesaid, or shall be rated therein at different rates of such value, but nevertheless the properties of the same kind shall be rated in a due proportion to each other, both as to the value and rate of charge, in every such case the rule of rating lands, both as to the value and the rate of charge, shall, in making the assessment under this Act, be observed throughout, as well with respect to such lands as to the other properties therein rated, so far as relates to such rates as shall be made either on the full value of the properties or on any proportionate part thereof:
- Fourth.—In all cases not falling within the three preceding rules, but nevertheless where the properties shall appear to the assessor to be rated in the said rate in the same proportion to each other, though the proportion of such rate to the value of the property rated be not known, and the assessor is able to ascertain the rack rent of all or any of the properties which shall have been so let within the period of seven years preceding within the limits of the parish or place where the said assessors shall act, he shall make an estimate of such properties on the amount of such rents respectively, and the amount contained in the estimates so made shall form the basis on which the estimates of other properties, of which the rack rent shall not have been so ascertained, shall be made, and he shall make his estimate of all other property in a sum bearing the same proportion, as near as the same can be computed, to the amount of such first estimates, as the sums at which all such other properties of which the rent has been so ascertained are valued at in such rate bear to the sum charged in the said rate on the said properties first estimated; and he shall apportion the sum so estimated on such other properties in the same proportion, as near as the same can be computed, as they are respectively rated at in such rate, and shall make his assessment under this Act accordingly; and in cases where the same rule of proportion shall not have been observed in rating different kinds of property, then the assessor shall make an estimate as above directed upon each of such kinds of property for the purpose of forming a basis on which the estimates of other properties of the same kind may be made.

LIV. Provided and enacted, That where any dwelling house or tenement, together with the offices, gardens, and lands occupied therewith, or any lands separately occupied, shall be under the annual value of 10*l.*, and the assessor shall be able to estimate the said value, either by the rules before mentioned, or from his own knowledge, or otherwise, it shall be lawful for him to estimate such property accordingly, to the best of his judgment, and to make an assessment thereon, without requiring a return of the annual value as aforesaid, unless the surveyor or inspector shall object to such estimate, and shall require a notice for that purpose to be delivered; and if any assessor, not having given such notice, shall neglect to estimate the true annual value of the said properties, and to assess the same according to this Act, he shall forfeit any sum not exceeding 10*l.*

LXVI. That in case any tenant at rack rent shall produce to the assessor the lease or agreement in writing under which he immediately holds any premises to be charged as aforesaid according to the general rule, the production of which lease or agreement every such assessor is hereby authorized to demand whenever the same shall appear to him necessary; and in case it shall appear by such lease or agreement that the same premises shall have been let within the period of seven preceding years, and no other consideration in money than the rent reserved shall be contained in such lease or agreement, it shall be lawful for such assessor to make his assessment according to such rent, anything before contained to the contrary notwithstanding; but such assessment shall not be binding, in case it shall appear to the Commissioners that the said lease or agreement doth not express the full consideration, whether in money or value, for the demise, or the rent bond fide paid for the same, or that the rent reserved is less than the rack rent on occasion of repairs or improvements done or to be done by the lessee or assigns, or is made in any other respect with intent to conceal the annual value of such premises, or to diminish the estimate to be made thereon, or hath been assigned to such tenant, or any former tenant, for any consideration in money or value paid or agreed to be paid: Provided always, that regard shall be had to the cases before mentioned, where the amount of the reserved rent shall be increased by reason of any covenant or agreement by the landlord to discharge the tenant's taxes, rates, assessments, or duties before mentioned, or where the same shall be decreased by reason of any covenant or agreement by the tenant to discharge the landlord's taxes, rates, or assessments, or on occasion of any expenses incurred or to be incurred by the lessee or assigns, whether mentioned or not mentioned in such lease or agreement, and to the deductions to be made on account of any aid or public rate or assessment before described: Provided also, that upon every demise for years of lands made or to be made in consideration of a rent reserved, and also in consideration of certain improvements to be made in the lands demised at the proper cost and charge of the lessee or tenant, if it shall be proved to the satisfaction of the Commissioners for general purposes acting for the division where such lands are situate that the rent reserved hath been settled on the estimate of the medium annual value of the said lands, computed on an average for the whole term granted in expectation of the progressive improvement of the said farm at the cost and charge of the said lessee or tenant, and the said annual rent is fixed and made payable to the same amount in each year on the said average, whereby the said rent so estimated and made payable did or doth exceed the just annual value of the said lands as the same were or are worth to be let at rack rent at the commencement of the term granted by the said demise, then and in such case the estimate of the annual value of the said lands, and the assessment thereupon, shall be made and computed according to the following rules; (that is to say,) in regard that the rent reserved hath been settled on a fair average of the annual value of the said lands, computed on the whole of the term so granted, the said Commissioners, on due proof of the circumstances before mentioned, shall cause the said duty payable in respect of the property in the said lands to be computed and charged on the amount of the rent so reserved and made payable as aforesaid, for each year of assessment, without variation, during the said term, subject nevertheless to such deductions as by this Act are allowed; and the said Commissioners shall also cause the said duty payable in respect of the occupation of the said lands to be computed and charged on the full and just value of the said lands, to be ascertained at the times and in manner hereinafter mentioned; (that is to say,) on all such demises made before the passing of this Act, the annual value of the said lands shall be the rack rent at which the same are worth to be let by the year, to be ascertained at the commencement of the first year of assessment after the passing of this Act, by a valuation to be made thereof under the powers and according to the directions herein contained, and to the satisfaction of the said Commissioners, which valuation shall be in force for the term limited for the continuance of this Act, if the said demise shall not sooner expire; and the amount ascertained by such valuation shall be deemed to be the rack rent at which the said lands are worth to be let for the said term, if the said demise shall not sooner expire, and the assessment thereupon shall in each year of the said term be made on the said valuation; and on all such demises to be made after the passing of this Act the annual value of the said lands shall be the rack rent at which the same are worth to be let by the year, to be ascertained at the commencement of the said demise, by a like valuation to be made thereof in manner aforesaid.

LXVII. That in case any tenant at rack rent under any parol demise from year to year, within the period mentioned in the said general rule, or any tenant who, by reason of any mortgage or other contract, shall not have the custody or possession of or the power over any lease or agreement in writing under which he holds the premises demised within the said period, and who shall give reasonable proof to the Commissioners why he is unable to produce the same, shall deliver to the assessor an account in writing signed by such tenant of the actual amount of the annual rent reserved on such demise, such account so delivered shall be deemed a compliance with this Act, in all cases where he may be called upon under the authority of this Act to produce such lease or agreement; and it shall be lawful for such assessor to make his assessment according to such rent, anything before contained to the contrary notwithstanding; but such assessment shall not be binding in case it shall appear to the said Commissioners that the said account doth not express the full consideration for such demise, or the rent bond fide paid for the same, or that the rent reserved is less than the rack rent on occasion of any payments as aforesaid made or to be made by such tenant, or is made in any other respect with intent to conceal the annual value of the premises held under such demise, or to diminish the assessment to be made thereon: Provided always, that lands held for a longer period than seven years by any tenant under a demise from year to year, or at will, shall be estimated and assessed at the annual value thereof, unless the tenant shall shew and prove to the satisfaction of the said Commissioners that the same lands are held under a demise which commenced by agreement made and a rent fixed within the period of seven years, on the determination of the former demise thereof, by due notice within the said period.

LXVIII. That every person who shall wilfully deliver any such account as aforesaid which shall be false, or who shall wilfully refuse, neglect, or omit to produce any lease or agreement with intent to conceal the annual value of the premises therein comprised, or to diminish the estimate to be made thereon, shall forfeit the sum of 20*l*., and shall be liable to be charged in treble the duty hereby directed to be charged as aforesaid, computed on the annual value of the premises held under such demise, estimated according to this Act; and the inspector and surveyor are hereby respectively required to surcharge the same, and the Commissioners are required to make an assessment accordingly.

LXIX. That every tenant of lands, tenements, or heritages in Scotland shall, within ten days after the assessor shall have left at his usual place of abode, or at any dwelling house or other place on the premises to be charged with the assessment, a note in writing requiring the same, produce to such assessor the tack or lease or other agreement or articles in writing, under which such tenant holds such lands or tenements, or where the same shall not be in the power, custody, or possession of such tenant, or there shall be no such tack, lease, or agreement or articles, then he shall leave with such assessor, or at his dwelling house, within the time before mentioned, a note in writing of the actual rent annually reserved and payable, and of any other valuable consideration given or to be given to the landlord of such lands and tenements as a further consideration for such tenancy, under the penalty of treble the duty hereby chargeable thereon, in case of any wilful neglect to comply with such notice; and it shall be lawful for such assessor to make his assessment on the production of such lease or agreement or articles, according to the rent therein reserved and made payable; and in case of non-production of such lease or agreement or articles in writing, then upon the rent reserved or made payable, according to the account thereof delivered as aforesaid, if he shall be satisfied that the said lands, tenements, or heritages have been bond fide let at the reserved rent notified to him as aforesaid, without other valuable consideration; but in case such assessor shall not be satisfied with the notification given to him, or in case no such notification shall be given, then such assessor shall make the assessment as directed in the foregoing rules: Provided always, that if the farm occupied by such tenant shall be distant more than ten miles from the dwelling-house of such assessor, it shall be competent to such tenant to lodge his lease or note in writing of the rent with the nearest Justice of the Peace, or with the clergyman of the parish where the farm is situated; and the said Justice of the Peace or clergyman respectively shall be obliged to shew the said lease or note of the rent to the said assessor when required.

LXX. That the said several duties shall be assessed on all lands, tenements, and hereditaments, whether occupied at the time of assessment or not; and so far as respects the duties chargeable under Schedule (A.), in case any lands charged to the said duties shall be unoccupied, and no distress can be found on the same at the time such duties shall be payable, it shall be lawful for the collector of the parish or place where the said lands are situate for the time being, at any time after, to enter upon the said lands when there shall be any distress thereupon to be found, and the distress to seize and sell, under the like powers as he might have distrained on the same lands if in the occupation of such person at the time the duties became due: Provided always, that the said duties, or either of them, shall not be levied on any house which shall be or become unoccupied for such year, or portion of the year, as the same shall be unoccupied, but the assessment thereupon for such year, or portion of the year, as aforesaid, shall, upon appeal, be discharged or diminished by the Commissioners, on due proof of the time during which such house remained unoccupied.

LXXI. That where by any assessment the duties shall be charged on tithes or teinds, and the same shall not be paid within the respective times limited by this Act, it shall be lawful for the collector and officer respectively to distrain upon such tithes or teinds, or any other goods or chattels of the owner of such tithes or teinds, wherever the same can be found, and to seize, take, and sell so much thereof as shall be sufficient for levying the said assessment, under and subject to the like powers granted by the said Acts relating to the duties of assessed taxes in other cases.

LXXII. That when any assessment shall be charged on any composition for tithes or teinds, or any rent or payment in lieu thereof, the occupier of the lands and premises charged with such composition, rent, or payment shall be answerable for the duties so charged, and may deduct the same out of the next payment on account thereof; and where any assessment shall be charged on the profits of manors or royalties, or of markets or fairs, or on tolls, fisheries, or any other annual or casual profits not distrainable, the owner or occupier, or receiver of the profits thereof, shall be answerable for the duties charged thereon, and may retain and deduct the same out of such profits; and in every such case the collector shall distrain upon such persons respectively by any of the ways and means prescribed by the said Acts relating to the duties of assessed taxes.

LXXIII. Provided and enacted, That no contract, covenant, or agreement between landlord and tenant, or any other persons, touching the payment of taxes and assessments to be charged on their respective premises, shall be deemed or construed to extend to the duties charged thereon under this Act, nor to be binding contrary to the intent and meaning of this Act; but that all such duties shall be charged upon and paid by the respective occupiers, subject to such deductions and repayments as are by this Act authorized and allowed; and all such deductions and repayments shall be made and allowed accordingly, notwithstanding such contracts, covenants, or agreements.

LXXIV. That the respective assessors shall make their assessments on all lands, tenements, and hereditaments, or heritages within the limits of those places for which they are to act, and shall set down therein the full and just annual value of all such lands and premises estimated in each particular case, according to the directions of this Act, together with the names and surnames of the occupiers and proprietors thereof, and shall deliver the same, together with all returns which shall have been made to them, as well of such annual value as of any deduction claimed to be made therefrom, to the said Commissioners for general purposes, such returns being first progressively numbered; and whenever the said assessors shall not be able to make their assessments according to the provisions of this Act, or shall be obstructed therein, it shall be lawful for them to make application to the said Commissioners, or to any inspector or surveyor, who shall severally instruct such assessor in making his assessments, and assist him in the execution of this Act, according to the powers and authorities hereby vested in them respectively.

LXXV. That the assessors to be appointed for the said duties in England shall, at the time of bringing in their assessments if required so to do by any surveyor or inspector of the said duties, or by the respective Commissioners, give notice to the overseers of the poor of the parish or place where they shall act, to produce or cause to be produced to the said Commissioners the book or books, or a true copy thereof, in which shall have been entered the rates made for the relief of the poor of such parish or place, and also a true copy of the last rate made for the relief of the poor in such parish or place, and such overseers shall without fail produce such book or books to the said Commissioners, or deliver the same to the said inspector or surveyor, for their use, and the said assessors shall declare in writing, signed by them, whether the said rates are made on the full value of the properties therein, or on any and what proportionate part thereof, to the best of their knowledge and belief; and the said Commissioners shall, in case the said surveyor or inspector shall allege and shew to the satisfaction of the said Commissioners that the said assessments or any of them have not been made according to the directions of this Act, examine the said assessors, and also the overseers of the poor for the same parish or place, or any of them, being duly summoned for that purpose, on their oaths, touching the proportions between the said rates and the value of the properties charged therein, and whether the properties, or any and which of them, have been valued therein at the amount or at any and what proportion of the annual value thereof respectively, and what ought to be the just proportion between the rates on the different properties therein charged, if the amount of the values thereof, and the same proportion between the rates, had been observed throughout the rate, and also what property shall have been omitted to be rated, and which of the properties in the parish or place shall be entitled to be assessed on the profits or on an average of the profits according to this Act; and the said inspector or surveyor shall carefully examine the assessments made by the same assessors with the last rate made for the relief of the poor, in order that he may the better ascertain whether the said assessments have been made on all the properties situate in each parish, and according to the directions prescribed by this Act, and from the result of the said inquiries may rectify the same in any particulars which in his judgment may be requisite before the Commissioners allow and sign such assessment as herein directed; and in so doing may pursue, if he think fit, the rules in No. XI. of this Act before mentioned, relating to the said rates for relief of the poor.

LXXVI. That the several Commissioners, inspectors, surveyors, and assessors acting respectively in the execution of this Act, or any person authorized by them respectively, shall have liberty from time to time, and at all seasonable times, to inspect and take copies of or extracts from any book kept by any parish officer or other person, of or concerning the rates made for the relief of the poor, or any other public taxes, rates, or assessments, in any place within the limits for which they shall be appointed, without the payment of any fee whatever; and if any person in whose custody or power any of the said books shall be shall refuse or neglect to permit the said inspection, or the copies or extracts to be made as aforesaid, or to attend the said Commissioners with any such book when required so to do in pursuance of this Act, such person so offending shall forfeit any sum not exceeding 20*l.* nor less than 5*l.*

LXXVII. That it shall be lawful for the assessors in each parish or place in Scotland, and they are hereby required, to take to their assistance the schoolmaster in such parish or place, for the purpose of making such assessments of the lands and other premises within their respective limits; and at the time of bringing in their assessments they shall make oath of the truth of the same, and that such assessments are made according to the best of their skill and judgment, and shall submit to be examined on oath before the said Commissioners in all matters and things concerning the said assessments which the said Commissioners shall require for their information.

LXXVIII. That in cases where the occupier or other person chargeable shall, upon due notice under this Act, omit to produce an account in writing as aforesaid of the amount of the annual value of the property in his occupation, estimated according to the general rule in Schedule (A.) or such other rules in the said Schedule as are applicable to such property, or shall have delivered an account with which the Commissioners shall be dissatisfied, the several assessors, inspectors, and surveyors, having first obtained an order in that behalf, signed by the said Commissioners, and taking to their assistance such person or persons of skill as shall be named in such order, shall, after two days' notice to the occupier, have full power, at all seasonable times in the daytime, to view and examine any lands or other property chargeable, in order to make a survey thereof, or otherwise to ascertain the annual value at which the same ought to be charged by virtue of this Act, and for so doing shall have liberty to enter upon any lands or grounds, whether inclosed or not, and to value the same, and to measure and survey the same if they cannot otherwise ascertain the annual value thereof.

LXXIX. That within a reasonable time after the respective surveyors and inspectors shall have had the examination of the assessments delivered by the assessors, the Commissioners shall proceed to take the same into consideration, and in case the surveyor or inspector shall not have objected thereto, and the said Commissioners shall be satisfied that the said assessments have been made truly and without fraud, and so as to charge the several properties contained therein with the full duty which ought to be charged upon them respectively, the said Commissioners shall allow and sign such assessments: Provided always, that in case the surveyor or inspector shall object to any such assessment, and shall apply for a revision thereof, suggesting in writing to the Commissioners any error, mistake, or fraud in making the same, it shall be lawful for the said Commissioners, according to the best of their judgment, to rectify such assessment, so that the duty may be fully charged, according to the intent and meaning of this Act.

LXXX. That so soon as the assessments for any parish or place under Schedules (A.) and (B.) shall be allowed and signed as aforesaid the Commissioners shall cause notice thereof and of the day for hearing appeals therefrom to be given in such manner as they shall judge expedient, which notice may be given, either by delivering a copy of such assessment to the assessor of such parish or place, for the inspection of the parties charged thereby, together with a public notice of the day of appeal, to be affixed on or near to the church door or on any other public place in the parish, or by delivering to each party charged the amount of his assessment, together with a note of the day of appeal, and such notices shall be made and given at least fourteen days before the day of appeal so fixed.

LXXXI. That if upon appeal any dispute shall arise touching the annual value of any lands, tenements, hereditaments, or heritages, and the Commissioners shall deem it necessary that a valuation thereof should be taken and made by any person of skill, it shall be lawful for them to direct the appellant to cause such valuation to be made by any person to be named by the said Commissioners, the costs and charges whereof shall abide the final determination of the said Commissioners, and it shall be lawful for them to make an assessment according to such valuation, and to require the same to be verified on the oath of the person making the same; but in case the appellant shall not proceed with effect to cause such valuation to be made as aforesaid, the said Commissioners shall make an assessment according to the best of their judgment: Provided always, that it shall be competent to the said Commissioners, in every such case where the valuation so made shall exceed the value put upon the same lands, tenements, hereditaments, or heritages by the appellant, to direct the costs and charges attending the same to be paid by him; but if they shall be of opinion that such costs and charges have not been incurred through any default of the said appellant, they shall direct the same to be paid by the collector of the parish or place, who, on the certificate of the Commissioners present at the time of the determination, shall pay the same, and the sum so paid shall be allowed to such collector in his accounts with the proper officer for receipt, on delivering to him such certificate, together with the receipt and voucher for such payment.

LXXXII. Provided and enacted, That if on appeal the occupier of any premises held under a demise at rack rent shall produce and shew to the Commissioners the lease, tack, or agreement in writing, or shall prove by any lawful evidence to be produced on his part, in case there shall be no such lease, tack, or agreement in writing, the annual amount of the rent at which such premises are let, it shall be lawful for the said Commissioners, in case such rent hath been fixed by agreement commencing within the period of seven years mentioned in the said general rule, and they shall be satisfied that such lease, tack, or agreement doth express the full consideration for the demise under which such occupier shall hold the same, or that the rent bond fide paid by such occupier for the same hath been duly shewn to them in evidence, and that such demise is made wholly in consideration of such reserved rent, without any intention to conceal or diminish the annual value of such premises, or other fraudulent intention whatever, to abate and deduct from such assessment so much as in their judgment will reduce the rate to a just rate on such rent: Provided always, that if it shall appear to the said Commissioners that any lands, tenements, hereditaments, or heritages shall have been assessed at an annual value less than the actual rent at which the same shall be let, or (if not let) at less than the rent at which the same might be let, it shall be lawful for the said Commissioners to enlarge and increase such assessment to such sum as a like rate on such rent would amount unto, as well with respect to the rate on the property as the rate on the occupation of such lands, tenements, hereditaments, or heritages.

LXXXIII. That whenever by any flood or tempest loss shall be sustained on the growing crops, or on the stock on lands demised to a tenant at a reserved rent, without fine or other sum paid, given, or contracted for in lieu of a reserved rent, or any part thereof, or the said lands, or any part thereof, shall by such flood or tempest be rendered incapable of cultivation for any year, and it shall be proved on oath to the satisfaction of the Commissioners for general purposes acting for the division where the said lands are situate, that the owner of the said lands hath in consideration of such loss abated or agreed to abate to his tenant the whole or any proportion of the rent reserved or payable by such tenant for any year of such demise, it shall be lawful for the said Commissioners to abate in the assessment made in respect of the property in the said lands for the same year for which such rent hath been abated, and to discharge therefrom the whole or the like proportion of duty as the said owner shall appear on such proof as aforesaid to have abated of or from the rent reserved and made payable to him on such demise; and it shall also be lawful for the said Commissioners in every such case to abate in the assessment made in respect of the occupation of the said lands for the same year, and to discharge therefrom the like proportion of duty as shall have been abated or discharged from the assessment made in respect of the property on the said lands for the cause aforesaid.

LXXXIV. That whenever from the cause aforesaid the like loss shall be sustained on the lands of any infant, idiot, lunatic, or other proprietor incapable of consenting to any abatement in the rent as aforesaid, being in the occupation of any such tenant as aforesaid, and the same shall be proved on oath before the said Commissioners to their satisfaction, it shall be lawful for them to abate in the assessment made in respect of the occupation of the said lands, and to discharge the whole or any part of the said duty, and in proportion to the loss so sustained, and to the amount which the said Commissioners shall be of opinion would or ought to have been abated as aforesaid, if the said lands had belonged to a proprietor of full age and of sound mind, and capable of such consent as aforesaid.

LXXXV. That whenever from the cause aforesaid the like loss shall be sustained on lands in the occupation of the owner, and the same shall be proved on oath before the said Commissioners to their satisfaction, it shall be lawful for them to abate in the several assessments made in respect of the property in or occupation of the said lands, and to discharge the whole or any part of the said respective duties, and in proportion to the loss so sustained, and to the amount which the said Commissioners shall be of opinion would or ought to have been abated as aforesaid if the said lands had been demised to a tenant, and a proportionate abatement had been made to such tenant under the circumstances of the said loss.

LXXXVI. That if any person shall be guilty of making any false claim for such abatement as aforesaid, or shall be guilty of any fraud or contrivance in making such claim, or in obtaining any such abatement, or shall fraudulently or untruly declare the amount or value of such loss, or the amount or value of any abatement made or agreed to be made in the rent of the lands in his occupation, on account of such loss, with intent fraudulently to obtain any such abatement, he shall forfeit the sum of 50*l.*, and treble the amount of duty charged on him in respect of the said lands; and if the owner of any such lands, or any other person whatever, shall aid, abet, or assist any person charged to the said duties in making such false or fraudulent claim, or shall fraudulently or untruly declare the amount or value of any abatement made or agreed to be made in the rent of the said lands or the amount of such loss, with intent fraudulently to obtain for himself, or for his tenant, or for the owner or tenant of the said lands, any such abatement as aforesaid, every such owner or other person aforesaid shall forfeit the sum of 100*l.*

LXXXVII. That the first assessment to be made after the 5th of April 1842, of the duties chargeable under either of the Schedules marked (A.) or (B.) of this Act, shall be and remain in force for the space of three years, without requiring returns from the parties charged therein for the second or third year of such assessment, and without altering the names of the parties charged, notwithstanding a change in the occupation or interest of or in the premises charged in such assessment may have happened; and the like sums shall be levied thereon for the second and third years respectively as shall or ought to have been levied thereon for the first year, and the assessment shall be subject to the like exemptions and allowances for the second and third years respectively as were granted for the first year; and the amount charged in such assessment shall be paid by four instalments in each year, on the days and times herein specified for payment of such instalments, subject nevertheless to be varied and altered in the following cases; (videlicet,)

First.—If the inspector or surveyor shall find or discover that any person hath been under-rated in such assessment, or omitted to be charged therein for the first year, or hath obtained an exemption or allowance for the first year which ought not to be allowed for the second or third year, it shall be lawful for such inspector or surveyor to surcharge such assessment for the second or third year, in like manner in all respects as he is authorized to surcharge the assessment under the like circumstances for the first year of assessment, provided that such surcharge shall be made in the single duty, and no increase shall be made thereon above the rate of duty hereby granted, unless the Commissioners shall be of opinion that the assessment for the first year was, in the particular surcharged, deficient through the wilful default or neglect of the party to be charged:

Second.—If any person not chargeable in the first year of assessment shall become chargeable in the second or third year it shall be lawful for the assessor, inspector, or surveyor to require the like returns, and to proceed to the assessment of such person in like manner for the second or third year, as if the whole assessment of the parish, place, or district had commenced in that year:

Third.—If any person shall find himself aggrieved by the continuance of such assessment for the second or third year, by occasion of his being over-rated therein, he may appeal from the same in that year on delivering ten days notice of such his intention to the inspector or surveyor, together with a true and perfect Schedule of the annual value of the property charged on him for that year, in like manner as he might have appealed against the same assessment under the like circumstances for the first year, and no payment on such assessment for the first or second year shall be construed to preclude such appeal; provided that for any vexatious appeal without reasonable cause it shall be lawful for the Commissioners to award reasonable costs for the attendance of the inspector, surveyor, or assessor to be added to the assessment and levied therewith for the use of such inspector, surveyor, or assessor, and which shall be paid to them respectively in like manner as any other payments under this Act may be made to them:

Fourth.—It shall be lawful for the respective collectors to levy and gather the assessment for the second and third years respectively on the occupiers for the time being by the same rate or book which shall have been delivered to them for the first year, unless the Commissioners shall revoke the appointment of the said collectors, or shall alter or vary the assessments, and deliver to them a new rate or book for the second or third year:

Fifth.—The duplicates of the Commissioners shall be made for each year, and delivered to the proper officer for receipt and at the Head Office for Stamps and Taxes, containing the like particulars for the second and third years respectively as are herein required for the first year of assessment, varying only the amounts therein to be specified if the case shall require the same; and all the powers, regulations, matters, and things contained in this Act for rectifying any assessment, or increasing or diminishing the duty according to circumstances, or for levying the same, shall be in force for the second and third years respectively, in respect of the sums to be levied in those respective years, and shall be applied in those respective years, as fully and effectually as if the assessment had been made for those years respectively under the directions and regulations of this Act.

LXXXVIII. That the duties hereby granted, contained in the Schedule marked (C.), shall be assessed and charged under the following rules, which rules shall be deemed and construed a part of this Act, and to refer to the said last-mentioned duties, as if the same had been inserted under a special enactment.

SCHEDULE (C.)

Rules for assessing and charging the Duties under Schedule (C.)

The said last-mentioned duties shall be paid by the persons and corporations respectively intrusted with the payment of the annuities, dividends and shares of annuities, therein charged, on behalf of the persons, corporations, companies, or societies entitled thereto, their executors, administrators, successors, or assigns, and shall be assessed by the Commissioners hereby authorized or appointed for those purposes; and shall extend to all public annuities whatever payable in Great Britain out of any public revenue in Great Britain or elsewhere, and to all annuities payable in Ireland out of the revenue of the United Kingdom, to or for the use or benefit of any person not resident in Ireland, and also to all dividends and shares of such annuities respectively which shall become payable after the 5th day of April 1842, except in the following cases of exemption from the said duties; viz.

First.—The stock, dividends, or interest of any friendly society legally established under any Act of Parliament relating to friendly societies; provided it shall appear by the rules of any such society deposited or to be deposited with the Commissioners for the Reduction of the National Debt, or with the trustees of any savings bank, that the sums assured by any such society to any individual, or to any person nominated by or to claim under him, shall not exceed the sum of 200*l.*, or the amount of any annuity or annuities granted or to be granted by any such society to any individual, or to any person nominated by or to claim under him, shall not exceed the sum of 30*l.* per annum: provided also, that when any property belonging to any such society shall be invested in the public securities in the Bank of England, the said last-mentioned property shall be duly claimed and proved by any trustee or treasurer of any such society, or by any member thereof, before the said Commissioners for special purposes:

Second.—The stock or dividends of any savings bank established or to be established under the provisions of an Act, 9 Geo. 4, intitled, 'An Act to consolidate and amend the Laws relating to Savings Banks,' arising from investments with the Commissioners for the Reduction of the National Debt; and also the dividends or interest payable by the trustees of any savings bank upon any funds therein deposited belonging to any depositor or to any charitable institution:

Third.—The stock or dividends of any corporation, fraternity, or society of persons, or of any trust established for charitable purposes only; or which, according to the rules or regulations established by Act of Parliament, charter, decree, deed of trust, or will, shall be applicable by the said corporation, fraternity, or society, or by any trustee, to charitable purposes only, and in so far as the same shall be applied to charitable purposes only; or the stock or dividends in the names of any trustees applicable solely to the repairs of any cathedral, college, church, or chapel, or any building used solely for the purpose of divine worship, and in so far as the same shall be applied to such purposes, provided the application thereof to such purposes shall be duly proved before the said Commissioners for special purposes by any agent or factor on the behalf of any such corporation, fraternity, or society, or by any of the members or trustees :

Fourth.—The stock or dividends transferred to the accounts in the books of the Bank of England in the name or under the description of the Lord High Treasurer of England or of the Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury, or the Commissioners for the Reduction of the National Debt, in pursuance of any Act or Acts of Parliament ; provided that the Governor and Company of the Bank of England shall from time to time cause to be transmitted to the said Commissioners for special purposes an account of the total amount of stock which shall have been transferred to the said respective accounts, also the payments to be made by the Commissioners for the Reduction of the National Debt on account of the Waterloo subscription funds :

Fifth.—The stock or dividends belonging to Her Majesty, in whatever name the same may stand in the books of the Bank of England, and also the stocks or dividends of any accredited minister of any foreign state resident in Great Britain, provided the property thereof shall, if standing in the name of any trustee, be duly proved before the said Commissioners for special purposes by such trustee.

And for the assessing and charging of the said annuities payable to the Company of the Bank of England and to the South Sea Company respectively, at the receipt of the Exchequer as aforesaid, and the profits attached thereto respectively, and also for the assessing and charging of all annuities payable by the Commissioners for Reduction of the National Debt, and the dividends and shares of all other annuities, payable out of any public revenue, which are or shall be intrusted for payment to the Companies of the Bank of England and South Sea respectively ;

It is Enacted,

LXXXIX. That the respective companies, corporations, and Commissioners having the distribution or payment of the said several annuities, dividends, and shares shall from time to time, as often as the payments thereon shall become due, deliver to the respective Commissioners, appointed for the purpose of assessing the duties thereon as aforesaid, true and faithful accounts in writing, in books to be provided for that purpose, of the several amounts of such annuities and profits attached to the same, which shall be paid to the said companies respectively, in respect of their corporate stock, and of such dividends and shares of annuities as shall be intrusted to any of such companies, corporations, or Commissioners, for payment to the persons, corporations, and companies entitled thereto, and the amount of duty chargeable thereon at the rate before directed, without deduction on any pretence whatever, except as herein is allowed, distinguishing therein the separate account of each person, corporation, company, and society entitled unto any part, dividend, or share of such annuities respectively, as the same shall stand in the books of the said respective companies, or at the said Exchequer, in such manner as that the part, dividend, and share of each person, corporation, company, and society, of or to such annuities respectively, may be distinctly charged and assessed to the said duty ; and the said respective Commissioners shall from time to time make an assessment of the duty which shall appear to be chargeable on the accounts so delivered to the best of their judgment and belief, and shall from time to time deliver the said books of assessments, signed by them respectively, to the said Commissioners for special purposes ; and the said Commissioners for special purposes shall forthwith cause two certificates on parchment to be made out, under their hands and seals, containing the total amounts of duty, and of the annuities, dividends, and shares whereon the said duty shall have been charged contained in each assessment, together with the proper title or description of the corporation, company, or persons having the distribution or intrusted with the payment of such annuities, dividends, and shares respectively ; and they shall transmit one of such certificates to the respective Commissioners for making such assessments, and the other certificate to the Head Office for Stamps and Taxes in England.

And for the assessing and charging of the annuities, dividends, and shares of annuities payable by the Governor and Company of the Bank of Ireland out of the public revenue of the United Kingdom to persons not resident in Ireland,—

xc. That in every case in which payment of any such annuities, dividends, and shares of annuities as last aforesaid shall be demanded or applied for by any attorney, agent, trustee, or other person for or on the behalf or for the use or benefit of any person not resident in Ireland, the person demanding or applying for the payment of such annuities, dividends, or shares of annuities, before receiving the same, shall (whether he shall be required to do so by the said governor and directors of the said bank or not) deliver to the cashier of the said bank a declaration, signed by such applicant, containing a statement of the amount and description of the stock in respect of which such annuities, dividends, or shares are payable, and the name and place of abode of every person for whom, or on whose behalf, or for whose use or benefit, such applicant requires the payment thereof, and declaring whether or not such last-mentioned person was resident in Ireland, within the intent and meaning of this Act, at the time when such annuities, dividends, and shares respectively became payable ; and in every case in which payment of any such annuities, dividends, or shares of annuities shall be demanded or applied for by any person for or on the behalf of any other person, under or by virtue of any letter or power of attorney, or other delegated authority, the said governor and directors, or the cashier or other officer of the said bank, having the payment of any such annuities, dividends, or shares of annuities, shall, before paying the same, require such declaration and statement to be made and delivered as hereinbefore directed ; and if the person demanding or applying for such payment shall refuse to make or sign and deliver such declaration and statement on being required to make and deliver the same as aforesaid, the person for whom or on whose behalf he shall demand or apply for such payment shall be deemed to be not resident in Ireland, and such annuities, dividends, or shares of annuities shall be charged accordingly with the duties granted by this Act : provided always, that no person (other than a member of either house of Parliament entitled to be exempted from the duties of assessed taxes under the provisions in that behalf contained in the Acts relating to the said last-mentioned duties) shall be deemed to be resident in Ireland, within the intent and meaning of this Act, who shall have been absent from Ireland, at one time or several times, for a period equal in the whole to six months or more during the space of one year immediately preceding the day on which such annuities, dividends, and shares shall respectively have become payable.

xcI. That whenever it shall appear by any such declaration or statement as aforesaid that any such annuities, dividends, or shares of annuities are payable by the said Governor and Company of the Bank of Ireland, to or for the use or benefit of any person not resident in Ireland, and also whenever any person applying for payment of any such annuities, dividends, or shares of annuities shall refuse to make or sign and deliver such declaration and statement, on being required to make and deliver the same as aforesaid, the Commissioners hereinbefore appointed for that purpose shall assess and charge the duties hereby granted upon and in respect of all such annuities, dividends, and shares of annuities, and shall make out and transmit their certificates of such assessments in like manner as is hereinbefore provided with respect to the assessments to be made by the Commissioners appointed for assessing and charging the duties on annuities payable out of the revenue of the United Kingdom in England; and in all other cases where any such annuities, dividends, or shares of annuities shall be payable by the said governor and company to or for the use or benefit of any person not resident in Ireland, but which shall not be assessed and charged by the said Commissioners in the manner hereinbefore directed, by reason of the fact of such non-residence not having been made to appear to them in manner aforesaid, such annuities, dividends, and shares which have been received or become payable in the preceding year shall be accounted for in Great Britain by the person entitled thereto, or beneficially interested therein, and shall be charged and assessed under the rules and regulations of Schedule (D.) of this Act, whether the same shall be received in Great Britain or not.

xcII. That if any person shall receive of the Governor and Company of the Bank of Ireland any annuity, dividend, or share of annuity payable out of the public revenue of the United Kingdom, for or on the behalf of or for the use or benefit of any person not resident in Ireland, without previously delivering to the cashier of the said bank the declaration and statement by this Act directed to be delivered in such case, or if any person shall make, sign, or deliver any declaration or statement which shall not truly set forth the name and place of residence of the person, and of every person for whom, or on whose behalf, or for whose use or benefit, he shall apply for payment of any such annuity, dividend, or share of annuity as aforesaid, the person who shall neglect or omit to deliver such declaration and statement as aforesaid, or who shall make, sign, or deliver any untrue declaration or statement, shall be liable to the payment to Her Majesty of treble the amount of the duty chargeable on such annuity, dividend, or share of annuity; and if any person shall wilfully and fraudulently omit to deliver such declaration and statement, or shall wilfully make, sign, or deliver any false declaration or statement, or shall make or practise any fraudulent contrivance or device whatever, with intent to defraud Her Majesty of the duty chargeable under this Act on any such annuity, dividend, or share of annuity as aforesaid, he shall forfeit the sum of 100*l.* over and above treble the amount of the said duty.

xcIII. That the respective corporations, companies, and persons entitled unto such annuities and profits attached thereto, or intrusted with the payment of the annuities, dividends, or shares of such public annuities as are hereinbefore described, shall, on notice of the amount of each assessment, from time to time to be made as aforesaid (which notice shall be given from time to time, as and when the annuities, dividends, and shares aforesaid shall become payable, and before payment thereof), set apart and retain the amount of duty so assessed for the purposes of this Act; and every such setting apart and retaining of the said duties shall be deemed a payment thereof by and on the behalf of the persons, corporations, and companies entitled unto the said annuities, dividends, and shares respectively; and all persons, corporations, and companies entitled to such annuities or profits attached thereto or to any part thereof, or to such dividends or shares of annuities as aforesaid, are hereby required, on receipt of the residue of the said annuities, profits, dividends, and shares, over and above the duty so assessed, to allow such payments in respect of the said assessments; and the corporations and persons having the distribution of such annuities, or intrusted with such payments, shall be and are hereby acquitted and discharged of so much money, as if the same had actually been paid unto the persons to whom such annuities, profits, dividends, and shares did or might belong, or were by law payable.

xcIV. That all monies so set apart at the Bank of England, the Bank of Ireland, and the South Sea House respectively, and by the Commissioners for the Reduction of the National Debt, as before directed, shall be paid from time to time into the account to be kept at the Bank of England with the Receiver General of Stamps and Taxes, as hereinafter directed, accompanied with a certificate of the amount of the assessment under which the same shall be so paid, under the hands of two or more of the Commissioners making such assessment; and the Governor and Company of the Bank of England shall also cause the amount of such assessment as shall from time to time be charged on the trading profits of the said company to be paid into the said account.

xcV. Provided and enacted, That in respect of any of the annuities, dividends, and shares of annuities, chargeable under Schedule (C.) by the respective Commissioners for those purposes, it shall not be required of them to make an assessment for any amount or payment, where the half-yearly payment on such annuities, dividends, or shares shall not amount to 50*s.*, but that the annuities, dividends, and shares whereof the half-yearly payment shall not amount to 50*s.* shall be accounted for and charged under the third case of Schedule (D.) by which profits of an uncertain annual value are directed to be charged: Provided also, that no person shall be required to return any statement of the profits of such annuities, dividends or shares, the half-yearly payment whereof shall amount to 50*s.* or more, and which are hereinbefore directed to be assessed in manner aforesaid, or be liable to any penalty for not returning the same, but all such dividends and shares whereof the half-yearly payment shall not amount to 50*s.*, and which shall be paid without such assessment, shall be duly returned in the manner before directed, under the penalty before contained.

xcVI. That every person (other than the Governor and Company of the Bank of England, the Directors of the East India Company, and the Commissioners for the Reduction of the National Debt,) intrusted with the payment of annuities, or any dividends or shares of annuities, payable out of the public revenue of any colony or settlement belonging to the Crown of the United Kingdom, to any persons, corporations, or companies in Great Britain, or acting therein as agent, or in any other character before described, shall, without further notice or demand thereof, deliver or cause to be delivered into the Head Office for Stamps and Taxes in England an account in writing containing their names and residences, and a description of the annuities, dividends, and shares intrusted to them for payment, within one calendar month after the same shall have been required by public notice in the London Gazette, and shall also, on demand by the inspector authorized for that purpose by the Commissioners of Stamps and Taxes, deliver or cause to be delivered to him, for the use of the said Commissioners for special purposes, true and perfect accounts of the amount of annuities, dividends, and shares payable by them respectively; and the said Commissioners for special purposes shall make an assessment thereon under Schedule (C.) at the rate before prescribed, subject to diminution on occasion of any exemptions to be allowed by the said Commissioners for special purposes, giving notice of the amount thereof to the respective persons intrusted with such last-mentioned payments, who shall respectively pay the duty on the said annuities, dividends, and shares, on behalf of the persons, corporations, and companies entitled unto the same, out of the monies in their hands; and they shall be acquitted of such payments in like manner, and the like proceedings in all respects shall be had under the said Commissioners for special purposes, as are before directed in respect of annuities payable out of the public revenue of the United Kingdom: Provided always, that the persons intrusted with such payment shall from time to time pay the duty so assessed thereon into the Bank of England, to the account to be kept at the Bank of England as aforesaid with the Receiver General of Stamps and Taxes, and shall be answerable for such payment, and which duty so assessed shall, in default of such payment, be recoverable against the persons respectively intrusted with such payments as other duties charged on the parties may be recovered against them; and if any person intrusted with the payment of any such last-mentioned annuities, or any dividends or shares thereof, in the manner herein mentioned, or acting therein as agent, or in any other character herein described, shall neglect or refuse to deliver an account of his name and residence in the manner herein directed, or, after demand, shall neglect or refuse to deliver an account as aforesaid of the amount of such annuities, dividends, and shares as he is intrusted with the payment of, or in the payment of which he shall act as agent, or in any other character herein described, he shall forfeit the sum of 100*l.*, over and above the duty chargeable on such annuities, shares, or dividends.

xcvii. That any interest payable out of the public revenue on securities issued or to be issued at the Exchequer or other public office, by whatever names such securities shall be called, shall be charged to the said duties under the rules contained in Schedule (C.) by the Commissioners for assessing the profits of offices in the said Exchequer or other office aforesaid at which the same shall be made payable, and the interest payable by the East India Company on the bonds issued or to be issued by them shall be charged to the said duties under the like rules by the Commissioners hereinbefore appointed for that purpose, which said Commissioners respectively shall execute this Act, in relation to the profits arising from such securities and bonds as aforesaid, in like manner as the Commissioners appointed by this Act are empowered to assess the profits arising from annuities payable out of the public revenue in other cases; and the said Commissioners respectively hereby authorized to execute this Act in relation to such securities and bonds as aforesaid shall appoint assessors and collectors of the said duties arising from such securities and bonds from and amongst the officers intrusted with the payment or discharge of such securities and bonds, who shall respectively at the time of payment or discharge thereof compute the duty thereon, and after such computation shall enter the same in a certificate of assessment, and certify the same to the proper officer appointed for the payment or discharge of such securities and bonds, which officer is hereby empowered to stop and detain the said duty, and to pay the same into the Bank of England to the credit of the Receiver General of Stamps and Taxes, in discharge of such assessment; and every person receiving or purchasing any such security or bond in circulation, with current interest thereon, shall be entitled and is hereby empowered to deduct from such interest the proportion of duty which will become chargeable thereon, in like manner and under the like powers and penalties as may be done in other cases of payment of interest, and as if such current interest were then due and charged to the said duty; and the like computation and assessment shall be made whenever a new security or bond shall be issued in discharge of any former security or bond, with interest, or in discharge of interest due on any former security or bond; and the person receiving such new security or bond in exchange for any former security or bond, with interest, or for such interest, shall pay to the proper officer at the time of receiving such new security or bond the full duty computed on the interest payable on the said former security or bond.

xcviii. Provided and enacted, That all claims of exemption under any of the rules contained in Schedule (C.) from the said duties on annuities, dividends and shares of annuities, payable out of the revenue of the United Kingdom, shall be made to the Commissioners for special purposes at the Head Office for Stamps and Taxes in England, according to the following rules; (videlicet.)

First.—Every claim shall be made in writing, in such form as the Commissioners of Stamps and Taxes shall direct, and the said Commissioners for special purposes shall require the same to be verified on the affidavit of every such person as they shall think necessary, such affidavit to be made as before directed in all cases cognizable before the said Commissioners, and they shall have authority to demand and require, from every such person as they shall think proper to be examined touching such claim, true answers upon oath, to be made as before directed, to all such questions as they shall think material in such claim:

Second.—Whenever the Commissioners for special purposes shall have allowed any such exemption, they shall give an order for payment of the sums retained for the duties on such annuities, dividends and shares, in respect of which they shall have allowed such exemption, to the respective claimants, or to the attornies or agents who shall have been authorized to receive the said annuities, dividends and shares, on behalf of the said claimants; and such payment shall be made in like manner as is hereinbefore provided with respect to allowances to be granted under Number V. of Schedule (A.) of this Act.

xcix. That if any person shall, with intent to defraud Her Majesty, falsely or fraudulently make any claim to be exempted, either in his own behalf or any other, from the duty charged on such annuities, or any dividends or shares thereof, contrary to the intent of this Act, every such person shall forfeit the sum of 100*l.*, and if such claim shall be made by any person in his own behalf he shall moreover be liable to be assessed in treble the duty to be charged on the said annuities and shares.

c. That the duties hereby granted, contained in the Schedule marked (D.), shall be assessed and charged under the following rules, which rules shall be deemed and construed to be a part of this Act, and to refer to the said last-mentioned duties, as if the same had been inserted under a special enactment.

SCHEDULE (D.)

The said last-mentioned duties shall extend to every description of property or profits which shall not be contained in either of the said Schedules (A.), (B.), or (C.), and to every description of employment of profit not contained in Schedule (E.).

and not specially exempted from the said respective duties, and shall be charged annually on and paid by the persons, bodies politic or corporate, fraternities, fellowships, companies, or societies, whether corporate or not corporate, receiving or entitled unto the same, their executors, administrators, successors, and assigns respectively.

Rules for ascertaining the said last-mentioned Duties in the particular Cases herein mentioned.

First Case.—Duties to be charged in respect of any trade, manufacture, adventure, or concern in the nature of trade, not contained in any other Schedule of this Act.

RULES.

First.—The duty to be charged in respect thereof shall be computed on a sum not less than the full amount of the balance of the profits or gains of such trade, manufacture, adventure, or concern upon a fair and just average of three years, ending on such day of the year immediately preceding the year of assessment on which the accounts of the said trade, manufacture, adventure, or concern shall have been usually made up, or on the 5th of April preceding the year of assessment, and shall be assessed, charged, and paid without other deduction than is hereinafter allowed: Provided always, that in cases where the trade, manufacture, adventure, or concern shall have been set up and commenced within the said period of three years, the computation shall be made for one year on the average of the balance of the profits and gains from the period of first setting up the same; Provided also, that in cases where the trade, manufacture, adventure or concern shall have been set up and commenced within the year of assessment, the computation shall be made according to the rule in the sixth case of this Schedule:

Second.—The said duty shall extend to every person, body politic or corporate, fraternity, fellowship, company, or society, and to every art, mystery, adventure, or concern carried on by them respectively, in Great Britain or elsewhere, as aforesaid; except always such adventures or concerns on or about lands, tenements, hereditaments, or heritages as are mentioned in Schedule (A.), and directed to be therein charged:

Third.—In estimating the balance of profits and gains chargeable under Schedule (D.), or for the purpose of assessing the duty thereon, no sum shall be set against or deducted from, or allowed to be set against or deducted from, such profits or gains, on account of any sum expended for repairs of premises occupied for the purpose of such trade, manufacture, adventure, or concern, nor for any sum expended for the supply or repairs or alterations of any implements, utensils, or articles employed for the purpose of such trade, manufacture, adventure, or concern, beyond the sum usually expended for such purposes according to an average of three years preceding the year in which such assessment shall be made; nor on account of loss not connected with or arising out of such trade, manufacture, adventure, or concern; nor on account of any capital withdrawn therefrom; nor for any sum employed or intended to be employed as capital in such trade, manufacture, adventure, or concern; nor for any capital employed in improvement of premises occupied for the purposes of such trade, manufacture, adventure, or concern; nor on account or under pretence of any interest which might have been made on such sums if laid out at interest; nor for any debts, except bad debts proved to be such to the satisfaction of the Commissioners respectively; nor for any average loss beyond the actual amount of loss after adjustment; nor for any sum recoverable under an insurance or contract of indemnity:

Fourth.—In estimating the amount of the profits and gains arising as aforesaid no deduction shall be made on account of any annual interest, or any annuity or other annual payment, payable out of such profits or gains.

Second Case.—The duty to be charged in respect of professions, employments, or vocations, not contained in any other Schedule of this Act.

RULES.

First.—The said duty on employments shall be construed to extend to every employment by retainer in any character whatever, whether such retainer shall be annual, or for a longer or shorter period; and to all profits and earnings of whatever value, subject only to such exemptions as are hereinafter granted:

Second.—The duty to be charged shall be computed at a sum not less than the full amount of the balance of the profits, gains, and emoluments of such professions, employments, or vocations (after making such deductions, and no other, as by this Act are allowed), within the preceding year, ending as in the first case, to be paid on the actual amount of such profits or gains, without any deduction, subject to the like provisions as are made in the first case in respect of the period of average, in the cases of setting up and commencing such profession, employment, or vocation within the period herein limited:

Third.—The third and fourth rules in the first case shall also extend to the profits arising under the second case, as far as they are applicable.

Rules applying to both the preceding Cases.

First.—In estimating the balance of the profits or gains to be charged according to either of the first or second cases, no sum shall be set against or deducted from, or allowed to be set against or deducted from such profits or gains, for any disbursements or expenses whatever, not being money wholly and exclusively laid out or expended for the purposes of such trade, manufacture, adventure, or concern, or of such profession, employment, or vocation; nor for any disbursements or expenses of maintenance of the parties, their families or establishments; nor for the rent or value of any dwelling-house or domestic offices, or any part of such dwelling-house or domestic offices, except such part thereof as may be used for the purposes of such trade or concern, not exceeding the proportion of the said rent or value hereinafter mentioned; nor for any sum expended in any other domestic or private purposes, distinct from the purposes of such trade, manufacture, adventure, or concern, or of such profession, employment, or vocation:

Second.—The computation of the duty to be charged in respect of any trade, manufacture, adventure, or concern, or any profession, whether carried on by any person singly or by any one or more persons jointly, or by any corporation, company, fraternity, or society, shall be made exclusive of the profits or gains arising from lands, tenements, or hereditaments, occupied for the purpose of such profession, trade, manufacture, adventure, or concern:

Third.—The computation of duty arising in respect of any trade, manufacture, adventure, or concern, or any profession, carried on by two or more persons jointly, shall be made and stated jointly and in one sum, and separately and distinctly from any other duty chargeable on the same persons, or either or any of them; and the return of the partner who shall be first named in the deed, instrument, or other agreement of copartnership (or where there shall be no such deed, instrument, or agreement, then of the partner who shall be named singly, or with precedence to the other partner or partners, in the usual name, style, or firm of such copartnership, or, where such precedent partner shall not be an acting partner, then of the precedent acting partner), and who shall be resident in Great Britain (and who is hereby required, under the penalty herein contained for default in making any return required by this Act, to make such return on behalf of himself and the other partner or partners whose names and residences shall also be declared in such return), shall be sufficient authority to charge such partners jointly: Provided always, that where no such partner shall be resident in Great Britain, then the statement shall be prepared and delivered by their agent, manager, or factor resident in Great Britain, jointly for such partners, and such joint assessment shall be made in the partnership name, style, firm, or description; and no separate statement shall be allowed in any case of partnership, except for the purpose of the partners separately claiming an exemption as herein directed, or of accounting for separate concerns; provided that if any partner being entitled to exemption shall declare the proportion of his share in such partnership, trade, profession, or concern, in order to a separate assessment for the above purpose, it shall be lawful to charge such partner separately; but if no such claim be made, then such assessment shall be made jointly, according to the amount of the profits and gains of such partnership: Provided also, that any joint partner in such trade, profession, or concern, which shall have been already returned by such precedent partner as aforesaid, may return his name and place of abode, and that he is such partner, without returning the amount of duty payable in respect thereof, unless the Commissioners respectively shall think proper to require a further return, in which case it shall be lawful for such Commissioners to require from every such partner the like return, and the like information and evidence, as they are hereby entitled to require from the precedent partner:

Fourth.—If amongst any persons engaged in any trade, manufacture, adventure, or concern, or in any profession, in partnership together, any change shall take place in any such partnership, either by death, or dissolution of partnership as to all or any of the partners, or by admitting any other partner therein, before the time of making the assessment, or within the period for which the assessment ought to be made under this Act, or if any person shall have succeeded to any trade, manufacture, adventure, or concern, or any profession, within such respective periods as aforesaid, the duty payable in respect of such partnership, or any of such partners, or any person succeeding to such profession, trade, manufacture, adventure, or concern, shall be computed and ascertained according to the profits and gains of such business derived during the respective periods herein mentioned, notwithstanding such change therein or succession to such business as aforesaid, unless such partners, or such person succeeding to such business as aforesaid, shall prove, to the satisfaction of the respective Commissioners, that the profits and gains of such business have fallen short or will fall short from some specific cause, to be alleged to them, since such change or succession took place, or by reason thereof:

Fifth.—Every statement of profits to be charged under this Schedule shall include every source so chargeable on the person delivering the same on his own account, or on account of any other person, and every person shall be chargeable in respect of the whole of such duties in one and the same division, and by the same Commissioners (except in cases where the same person shall be engaged in different partnerships, or the same person shall be engaged in different concerns relating to trade or manufacture in divers places, in each of which cases a separate assessment shall be made in respect of each concern at the place where such concern is singly carried on ought to be charged as herein directed), and every such statement on the behalf of any other person for which such person shall be chargeable as acting in any of the characters before described, or on the behalf of any corporation, fellowship, fraternity, company, or society, shall include every source chargeable as last aforesaid, and shall be delivered in that division where such person, corporation, fellowship, fraternity, company, or society would be chargeable if acting on his or their own behalf.

Third Case.—The duty to be charged in respect of profits of an uncertain annual value not charged in Schedule (A.)

First.—The duty to be charged in respect thereof shall be computed at a sum not less than the full amount of the profits or gains arising therefrom within the preceding year, ending as in the first case, to be paid on the actual amount of such profits or gains, without any deduction:

Second.—The profits on all securities bearing interest payable out of the public revenue (except securities before directed to be charged under the rules of Schedule (C.)), and on all discounts, and on all interest of money, not being annual interest, payable or paid by any person whatever, shall be charged according to the preceding rule in this case:

Third.—Whenever the Commissioners shall, on examination, find that any lands, occupied by a dealer in cattle, or by a dealer in or seller of milk, (which lands shall have been estimated and charged on the rent or annual value), are not sufficient for the keep and sustenance of the cattle brought on the said lands, so that the rent or annual value of the said lands cannot afford a just estimate of the profits of such dealer, it shall be lawful for the said Commissioners to require a return of such profits, and to charge such further sum thereon as, together with the charge in respect of the occupation of the said lands, shall make up the full sum wherewith such trader ought to be charged in respect of the like amount of profits charged according to the first rule in this case.

Fourth Case.—The duty to be charged in respect of interest arising from securities in Ireland, or in the British Plantations in America, or in any other of Her Majesty's dominions out of Great Britain, and foreign securities, except such annuities, dividends, and shares as are directed to be charged under Schedule (C.) of this Act.

The duty to be charged in respect thereof shall be computed on a sum not less than the full amount of the sums (so far as the same can be computed) which have been or will be received in Great Britain in the current year, without any deduction or abatement.

Fifth Case.—The duty to be charged in respect of possessions in Ireland, or in the British plantations in America, or in any other of Her Majesty's dominions out of Great Britain, and foreign possessions.

The duty to be charged in respect thereof shall be computed on a sum not less than the full amount of the actual sums annually received in Great Britain, either for remittances from thence payable in Great Britain, or from property imported from thence into Great Britain, or from money or value received in Great Britain, and arising from property which shall not have been imported into Great Britain, or from money or value so received on credit or on account in respect of such remittances, property, or value brought or to be brought into Great Britain, computing the same on an average of the three preceding years, as directed in the first case, without other deduction or abatement than is hereinbefore allowed in such case.

Sixth Case.—The duty to be charged in respect of any annual profits or gains not falling under any of the foregoing rules, and not charged by virtue of any of the other Schedules contained in this Act.

The nature of such profits or gains, and the grounds on which the amount thereof shall have been computed, and the average taken thereon (if any), shall be stated to the Commissioners, and the computation shall be made either on the amount of the full value of the profits and gains received annually, or according to an average of such period greater or less than one year, as the case may require, and as shall be directed by the said Commissioners; and such statement and computation shall be made to the best of the knowledge and belief of the person in receipt of the same or entitled thereto.

CI. Provided and enacted, That nothing herein contained shall be construed to restrain any person carrying on, either solely or in partnership, two or more distinct trades, manufactures, adventures, or concerns in the nature of trade, the profits whereof are made chargeable under the rules of Schedule (D.), from deducting or setting against the profits acquired in one or more of the said concerns the excess of the loss sustained in any other of the said concerns over and above the profits thereof, in such manner as may be done under this Act where a loss shall be deducted from the profits of the same concern, or to restrain any of such persons from making separate statements thereof, or to restrain any such person renting a dwelling house, part whereof shall be used by him for the purposes of any trade or concern or any profession hereby charged, from deducting or setting off from the profits of such trade, concern, or profession such sum not exceeding two third parts of the rent bond fide paid for such dwelling house, with the appurtenances, as the said respective Commissioners shall on due consideration allow; and the respective Commissioners shall have authority to allow such deductions as in other cases, and to assess such person accordingly.

CII. That upon all annuities, yearly interest of money, or other annual payments, whether such payments shall be payable within or out of Great Britain, either as a charge on any property of the person paying the same by virtue of any deed or will or otherwise, or as a reservation thereout, or as a personal debt or obligation by virtue of any contract, or whether the same shall be received and payable half-yearly or at any shorter or more distant periods, there shall be charged for every 20s. of the annual amount thereof the sum of 7d., without deduction, according to and under and subject to the provisions by which the duty in the third case of Schedule (D.) may be charged; provided that in every case where the same shall be payable out of profits or gains brought into charge by virtue of this Act no assessment shall be made upon the person entitled to such annuity, interest, or other annual payment, but the whole of such profits or gains shall be charged with duty on the person liable to such annual payment, without distinguishing such annual payment, and the person so liable to make such annual payment, whether out of the profits or gains charged with duty, or out of any annual payment liable to deduction, or from which a deduction hath been made, shall be authorized to deduct out of such annual payment at the rate of 7d. for every 20s. of the amount thereof, and the person to whom such payment liable to deduction is to be made shall allow such deduction, at the full rate of duty hereby directed to be charged, upon the receipt of the residue of such money, and under the penalty hereinafter contained, and the person charged to the said duties having made such deduction shall be acquitted and discharged of so much money as such deduction shall amount unto, as if the amount thereof had actually been paid unto the person to whom such payment shall have been due and payable; but in every case where any annual payment as aforesaid shall, by reason of the same being charged on any property or security in Ireland, or in the British plantations, or in any other of Her Majesty's dominions, or on any foreign property or foreign security, or otherwise, be received or receivable without any such deduction as aforesaid, and in every case where any such payment shall be made from profits or gains not charged by this Act, or where any interest of money shall not be reserved or charged or payable for the period of one year, then and in every such case there shall be charged upon such interest, annuity, or other annual payment as aforesaid the duty before mentioned, according to and under and subject to the several and respective provisions by which the duty in the third case of Schedule (D.) may be charged: Provided always, that where any creditor on any rates or assessments not chargeable by this Act as profits shall be entitled to such interest, it shall be lawful to charge the proper officer having the management of the accounts with the duty payable on such interest, and every such officer shall be answerable for doing all acts, matters, and things necessary to a due assessment of the said duties, and payment thereof, as if such rates or assessments were profits chargeable under this Act, and such officer shall be in like manner indemnified for all such acts, as if the said rates and assessments were chargeable.

CIII. That if any person shall refuse to allow any deduction authorized to be made by this Act out of any payment of annual interest of money lent, or other debt bearing annual interest, whether the same be secured by mortgage or otherwise, he shall forfeit for every such offence treble the value of such principal money or debt; and if any person shall refuse to allow any deduction authorized to be made by this Act out of any rent or other annual payment mentioned in the ninth and tenth rules of No. IV. Schedule (A.), or out of any annuity or annual payment mentioned in Schedules (C.) or (E.), or in the next preceding clause, save such annual interest as aforesaid, every such person shall forfeit the sum of 50l.: and all contracts, covenants, and agreements made or entered into, or to be made or entered into, for payment of any interest, rent, or other annual payment aforesaid, in full, without allowing such deduction as aforesaid, shall be utterly void.

CIV. That whenever it shall be proved, to the satisfaction of the said respective Commissioners acting in the district where any person making the application shall reside, that any interest of money, annuity, or other annual payment shall be annually paid out of the profits and gains bond fide accounted for and charged by virtue of this Act at the rate and according to the rules specified in Schedule (D.), without any deduction on account thereof, it shall be lawful for such Commissioners to grant a certificate thereof, under the hands of any two of them, in such form as shall be provided under the authority of this Act, which certificate shall entitle the person so assessed, upon payment of such interest, annuity, or other annual payment, to abate and deduct so much thereof as a like rate on such interest, annuity, or other annual payment would amount unto; and every person to whom such interest, annuity, or other annual payment shall be paid shall allow such deductions and payments, upon receipt of the residue of such interest, annuity, or other annual payment, and the person paying the same shall be acquitted and discharged of so much money as a like rate thereon would amount unto, as if the same had actually been paid unto the person to whom such interest, annuity, or other annual payment shall have been due and payable; provided no such certificate shall be required where such payments are to be made out of the profits or gains arising from lands, tenements, hereditaments, or heritages, as before mentioned, or of any office or employment of profit, or out of any annuity, pension, stipend, or any dividend or share in such public annuities as are herein mentioned, but such deductions may be made without having obtained such certificate.

cv. Provided and enacted, That any corporation, fraternity, or society of persons, and any trustee for charitable purposes only, shall be entitled to the same exemption in respect of any yearly interest or other annual payment chargeable under Schedule (D.) of this Act, in so far as the same shall be applied to charitable purposes only, as is hereinbefore granted to such corporation, fraternity, society, and trustee respectively in respect of any stock or dividends chargeable under Schedule (C.) of this Act, and applied to the like purposes; and such exemption shall be allowed by the Commissioners for special purposes, on due proof before them, and the amount of the duties which shall have been paid by such corporation, fraternity, society or trustee in respect of such interest or yearly payment, either by deduction from the same or otherwise, shall be repaid, under the order of the said Commissioners for special purposes, in the manner hereinbefore provided for the repayment of sums allowed by them, in pursuance of any exemption contained in the said Schedule (C.)

CVI. That every person being a householder (except persons engaged in any trade, manufacture, adventure, or concern, or any profession, employment, or vocation,) shall be charged to the said duties contained in Schedule (D.) by Commissioners acting for the parish or place where his dwelling house shall be situate; and every person engaged in any trade, manufacture, adventure, or concern, or any profession, employment, or vocation, shall be chargeable by the respective Commissioners acting for the parish or place where such trade, manufacture, adventure, or concern shall be carried on, or where such profession, employment, or vocation shall be exercised, whether such trade, manufacture, adventure, or concern shall be carried on, or such profession, employment, or vocation shall be exercised, wholly or in part only in Great Britain, or whether such person shall be engaged in one only or more of such concerns, except where the same person shall be engaged in different concerns, and a loss from one concern shall be set off or deducted from the profits of another concern; and every person not being a householder, nor engaged in any trade, manufacture, adventure, or concern, nor in any profession, employment, or vocation, who shall have any place of ordinary residence, shall be charged by the Commissioners acting for the parish or place where he shall ordinarily reside; and every person not hereinbefore described shall be charged by the Commissioners acting for the parish or place where such person shall reside at the time of beginning to execute this Act in each year by giving such general notices as are herein mentioned, or shall first come to reside after the time for giving such general notices; and every such charge made in such parish or place shall be valid and effectual, notwithstanding the subsequent removal of the person so charged from the parish or place; and in order that the place where the said last-mentioned duties are to be charged may be ascertained, every person is hereby required, on the delivery of any list or statement as aforesaid, at the same time to deliver a declaration in writing signed by him declaring in what place he is chargeable, and whether he is engaged in any trade, manufacture, adventure, or concern, or in any profession, employment, or vocation, or not, and if he shall be so engaged in any trade, manufacture, adventure, or concern, or any profession, employment, or vocation, also declaring the place where the same shall be carried on or exercised, and every particular concern, profession, or employment in which he shall be engaged in such place in Great Britain, whether wholly in Great Britain, or in part only, as aforesaid; provided that where any trade shall be carried on in Great Britain by the manufacture of goods, wares, or merchandize, the assessment thereon shall be at the place of manufacture, although the sales of such goods, wares, or merchandize shall be elsewhere: Provided always, that every person not being engaged in any trade, manufacture, adventure, or concern, or in any profession, employment, or vocation, having two or more houses or places at which he shall be ordinarily resident, shall be charged at such of the parishes or places wherein the dwelling house is situate in which he shall be ordinarily resident at the time of beginning to execute this Act in each year in manner aforesaid, or in which he shall first come ordinarily to reside after giving such general notices as aforesaid: Provided always, that the duty to be assessed by virtue of this Act, in respect of the profits or gains arising from possessions or securities in Ireland, upon any person resident in Great Britain as aforesaid, may be stated to and assessed by the respective Commissioners acting for the respective places where the persons receiving or entitled unto the same shall reside; and if the same shall be received by any agent, attorney, or factor, such agent, attorney, or factor shall make such return of the name and place of abode of the person entitled thereto as is herein required to be made of other persons of full age resident in Great Britain, and if the person entitled thereto shall not be of full age, or not resident in Great Britain, such agent, attorney, or factor shall be answerable for doing all acts, matters, and things required by this Act to be done in order to the assessing such profits to the said last-mentioned duties, and paying the same.

CVII. Provided and enacted, That persons holding offices in Ireland, and residing in Great Britain, and persons usually residing in Ireland, and serving in Parliament, who shall or may be exempted from the duties of assessed taxes under the provisions in that behalf contained in the Acts relating to the said last-mentioned duties, shall, under the like circumstances under which such exemptions are to be claimed, be chargeable to the duties under this Act in like manner only as subjects of Her Majesty residing out of Great Britain.

CVIII. That the duty to be assessed by virtue of this Act in respect of the profits or gains arising from foreign possessions or foreign securities, or in the British plantations in America, or in any other of Her Majesty's dominions, may be stated to and assessed by the respective Commissioners acting for the respective places hereinafter mentioned, videlicet, London, Bristol, Liverpool, and Glasgow, according to the regulations hereinafter mentioned, as if such duty had been assessed upon the profits or gains arising from trade or manufacture carried on in such places respectively; and such duty shall be stated to and assessed and charged by the Commissioners acting for such of the said places at or nearest to which such property shall have been first imported into Great Britain, or at or nearest to which the person who shall have received such remittances, money, or value from thence, and arising from property not imported as aforesaid, shall reside; and in default of the owner or proprietor thereof being charged, the trustee, agent, or receiver of such profits or gains shall be charged for the same, and shall be answerable for the doing all such acts, matters, and things as shall be required by this Act to be done, in order to the assessing such profits to the duties granted by this Act, and paying the same, whether the person to whom the said profits belong shall be resident in Great Britain or not: Provided always, that whenever the produce or the profits or gains arising from such possessions or securities as last aforesaid shall have been imported partly into the port of London, and partly into any of the outports of Bristol, Liverpool, or Glasgow, or shall have been received by any person partly in the city of London and partly in any of the said outports, within the period of making up the account on which the duty is chargeable by this Act according to the rules herein contained, the whole of the duty chargeable in respect of such produce, profits, or gains so imported or received shall be assessed and charged by the Commissioners acting for the said city of London, and not elsewhere, and as if the whole of the said produce or the said profits or gains arising within the said period had been imported into or received in London; and whenever such produce or profits or gains arising as aforesaid shall have been within such period wholly imported into or received at the said outports of Bristol, Liverpool, and Glasgow, and different parts thereof shall have been imported into or received at two or more of such outports, the duty chargeable thereon shall be assessed and charged at one of such places only, and in one account, and at such of the said places at which the major part in value of such produce or profits or gains shall have been so imported or received; provided that the statements of such produce, profits, or gains shall be delivered to the Commissioners acting for each place at which any part of the said produce or profits or gains shall have been so imported or received, and transmitted by the respective Commissioners to the Head Office for Stamps and Taxes in England, and the Commissioners of Stamps and Taxes shall cause all such statements to be sent to the Commissioners acting for the place where the duty thereon shall appear by such statements to be chargeable according to this Act, who shall accordingly assess the same in one sum.

CIX. That the profits arising from the docks called the London Docks, the East and West India Docks, and Saint Katherine Dock respectively, situate in the county of Middlesex, shall be assessed by the Commissioners acting for the city of London.

CX. That every person having two residences, or carrying on any trade or exercising any profession in different parishes, places, or in any place different from the place of his ordinary residence, shall, if required by the respective Commissioners, deliver at each such parish or place the like lists, declarations, and statements as he is hereby required to deliver in the parish or place where such person ought to be charged, but shall not be liable to any double charge by reason thereof; and all lists, declarations, and statements containing the amount of profits chargeable under Schedule (D.) may be delivered to the respective persons and in manner herein directed, sealed up, if superscribed with the name and place of abode of, or place of exercising the profession or carrying on trade by, the person by whom the same shall have been made.

CXI. That all statements of profits and gains described in Schedule (D.) (except statements whereon assessments are to be made by the Commissioners for special purposes, as hereinafter authorized,) shall be laid before the additional Commissioners or the Commissioners for general purposes acting as additional Commissioners in their respective districts, who shall appoint meetings for taking all statements then and from time to time to be delivered to them into consideration, within a reasonable time after the inspector or surveyor shall have had the examination of such statements; and in case the said additional Commissioners respectively shall be satisfied that any such statements have been bonâ fide made according to the provisions of this Act, and so as to enable the Commissioners to charge the respective persons returning the same with the full duties with which they ought respectively to be charged on account thereof, and in case no information shall be given to the said Commissioners of the insufficiency thereof, or no objection shall be made thereto by the inspector or surveyor, which he is hereby empowered to make for sufficient cause, the said Commissioners shall direct an assessment to be made of the duties chargeable on such statement by virtue of this Act.

CXII. Provided and enacted, That where the surveyor or inspector shall apprehend the determination made by the said Commissioners to be contrary to the true intent and meaning of this Act, and shall then declare himself dissatisfied with such determination, it shall be lawful for him to require the said Commissioners to state specially and sign the case upon which the question arose, together with their determination thereupon; which case the said Commissioners are hereby required to state and sign accordingly, and to deliver to the said inspector or surveyor, to be by him transmitted to the Commissioners for general purposes for the same district, who shall with all convenient speed return an answer to the case so transmitted, with their opinion thereon subscribed; and according to such opinion the assessment which shall have been the cause of such appeal shall be altered or confirmed.

CXIII. That in every instance in which any person shall have made default in the delivery of any statement, such person not having been otherwise charged to the said last-mentioned duties, or if the said additional Commissioners shall not be satisfied with the statement delivered by any person, or any objection shall be made thereto by the inspector or surveyor, (which he is hereby authorized and required to make in writing, setting forth the cause thereof, whenever he shall see sufficient cause,) or the said Commissioners shall have received any information of the insufficiency of any statement, the said Commissioners shall make an assessment on such person in such sum as, according to the best of their judgment, ought to be charged on him by virtue of this Act; which assessment shall be subject to an appeal, according to the directions hereinafter contained.

CXIV. That whenever the additional Commissioners shall think it proper to refer any statement to the Commissioners for general purposes without making any assessment thereon, it shall be lawful for them so to do on delivering to the last-mentioned Commissioners the case in writing relative to such statement, as the same shall appear to the said additional Commissioners, with any matter in question between them, either as to law or fact; and the said Commissioners for general purposes shall proceed to inquire into the merits of such statement, in like manner as they would have been hereby authorized to do in case the said additional Commissioners had made an assessment on such statement, and the party charged had appealed against the same, and thereupon an assessment shall be made according to the determination of the said Commissioners for general purposes.

cxv. That the inspector or surveyor, being sworn as aforesaid, shall and may at all seasonable times inspect and examine any assessment which shall be made by the additional Commissioners, before the delivery thereof to the Commissioners for general purposes, and in case he shall discover any error in the same which in his judgment shall require amendment, he shall certify the same to the said additional Commissioners by whom the assessment shall have been made, and the said additional Commissioners, upon sufficient cause being shewn to them, shall amend the same as in their judgment the case shall require.

cxvi. That in every case where the inspector or surveyor shall object to the amount of the duty charged by any assessment made by the additional Commissioner, which he is hereby empowered to do in any case upon sufficient cause, he shall state such objection in writing to the said additional Commissioners, who shall thereupon certify the same, together with the reasons for making such assessment, and any information they shall have obtained respecting the same, to the Commissioners for general purposes; and the said inspector or surveyor shall also give such notice thereof to the party assessed as he is required to do by the said several Acts relating to the duties of assessed taxes in cases of surcharge, in order that the party so charged may be at liberty to appear before the said Commissioners for general purposes in support of such assessment.

cxvii. That the said additional Commissioners shall cause certificates of assessments to be duly made out, from time to time as the same shall be completed, distinguishing the ward, parish, or place within their respective districts for which each such assessment shall be made, which shall contain the names and surnames of the parties charged, and the sums which they respectively ought to pay by virtue of this Act, and shall cause such certificates to be entered in books provided for that purpose, according to such forms as shall be transmitted to them by the Commissioners of Stamps and Taxes; and the said additional Commissioners shall sign such assessments, and from time to time deliver the same, so entered and signed, to the Commissioners for general purposes, under cover sealed up, and shall also cause the statements returned to them by the parties so assessed, or by the assessors relating to such assessments, to be delivered at the same time, sealed up in the like manner, to the said Commissioners for general purposes; provided that no assessment made by additional Commissioners, or persons acting as such, shall be delivered to the respective parties until the expiration of fourteen days after the assessment, so signed as aforesaid, shall have been delivered to the Commissioners for general purposes, or the persons acting as such, and the inspector or surveyor shall have had notice thereof.

cxviii. That if any person shall think himself aggrieved by an assessment made by the said additional Commissioners, or by any objection to such assessment made by any surveyor or inspector as aforesaid, it shall be lawful for him, on giving ten days notice thereof in writing to the inspector or surveyor, to appeal to the Commissioners for general purposes in the same district where such assessment was made, who shall hear and determine such appeal; and the Commissioners for general purposes shall from time to time appoint days for hearing appeals as soon after any assessments shall be returned to them by the additional Commissioners as conveniently can be done, and the assessors shall cause notice of the days so appointed to be given to the respective appellants, and the meetings of the Commissioners for the purpose of hearing appeals shall be held from time to time, within the time limited by the said Commissioners, with or without adjournment; and no appeal shall be received after the time so limited, except on the ground of diminution of income, as herein mentioned: Provided always, that if any person shall be prevented, by absence, sickness, or other reasonable cause, to be allowed by the said Commissioners, from making or proceeding upon his appeal within the time so limited, it shall be lawful for the said Commissioners to give further time for that purpose, or to admit the same to be made by any agent, clerk, or servant on the behalf of such appellant.

cxix. That in order that all appeals upon such assessments may be determined in due time, the Commissioners for general purposes shall cause a general notice to be fixed up in their office, or left with their clerk, and also to be affixed on or near to the door of the church or chapel of such parish or place, or of some adjoining parish or place, in cases requiring the same by reason of any such place having no church or chapel, limiting the time for hearing all appeals, and which appeals shall be limited to be heard within a reasonable time after the cause thereof shall have arisen; and no appeal shall be heard after the time limited in such notice, unless the appeal shall be made on behalf of any person who shall be absent out of the realm, or prevented by sickness from attending in person within the time so limited, in which cases it shall be lawful for the said Commissioners to postpone any such appeal from time to time, or to admit other proof than the oath of the party of the truth of the several matters required by this Act to be proved by his oath.

cxx. That upon receiving notice of appeal against any assessment made as last aforesaid, and also in every case where the Commissioners for general purposes shall see cause to allow the objection of such inspector or surveyor to such assessment, the said Commissioners shall direct their precept to the person appealing, to return to them, within the time limited therein, a Schedule containing such particulars as the said Commissioners shall demand, under the authority of this Act, for their information, respecting the property of such person, or the trade, manufacture, adventure, or concern in the nature of trade, or the profession, employment, or vocation respectively carried on or exercised by such person, and the amount of the balance of his profits and gains, distinguishing the particular amounts derived from each separate source before mentioned, or respecting the particulars of the deductions from any of such profits or gains made in such statements or schedules, and which the said Commissioners are hereby empowered and required to demand, at their discretion, whenever the same shall appear to them necessary for the purposes mentioned in this Act, and so from time to time until a complete schedule, to the satisfaction of the said Commissioners, of all the particulars required by them, shall be delivered; and every such precept, being delivered to or left at the last or usual place of abode of the person to whom the same shall be directed, shall be binding upon him according to the exigency thereof; or in case such person shall have removed from the jurisdiction of the said Commissioners, or cannot be found, or his place of abode shall not be known, then, upon fixing such precept on or near to the door of the church or chapel of the place where the Commissioners shall meet in the execution of this Act, such precept shall also be binding upon such person according to the exigency thereof, and such person shall make the return required by the said Commissioners within the time limited in such precept, under the penalty in this Act contained, and subject to such charge as the said Commissioners are hereby authorized to make in such case; to which schedule any inspector or surveyor sworn as aforesaid shall have free access at all reasonable times, and shall take such copies thereof, or of any parts thereof, or extracts from the same, as he shall think necessary for the due execution of this Act.

CXXI. That it shall be lawful for the inspector or surveyor sworn as aforesaid, within a reasonable time, to be allowed by the said Commissioners for general purposes, after he shall have had the examination of such schedules, to object to the same or any part thereof, and to state such objections in writing, and the cause thereof, to the best of his knowledge or information; and the said inspector or surveyor shall, in every case of objecting to any such schedule, deliver a notice in writing of such objection to the party to be charged, or leave the same at his last or usual place of abode, under cover sealed up and directed to such party, in order that he may, if he shall think fit, appeal from the same to the said Commissioners: Provided always, that no assessment shall be confirmed, nor any alteration therein be made, until the appeal upon such objection or assessment shall be heard and determined.

CXXII. That if, upon receiving the objection of such inspector or surveyor to any schedule, the said Commissioners for general purposes shall see cause to disallow such objection, or if, upon the hearing of any such appeal as aforesaid, the said Commissioners shall be satisfied with the assessment made by the additional Commissioners, or after delivery of a schedule they shall be satisfied therewith, and shall have received no information of the insufficiency thereof, the said Commissioners for general purposes shall direct such assessment to be confirmed or altered according to such schedule, as the case may require; provided that in every case where they shall think proper that the said statement on which the additional Commissioners made their assessment, or the schedule delivered to the Commissioners for general purposes, should be verified, they shall direct the assessor to give notice to the person to be charged with the said duties to appear before them to verify the said statement or schedule in the manner hereinafter mentioned; and every such person is hereby required to appear accordingly before the said Commissioners, and, on oath as aforesaid, to verify the contents of his statement or schedule, and to sign and subscribe the same with his proper name; and such oath shall be, that the contents of such statement or schedule are true to the best of his judgment or belief, and that the same contains the just balance of the profits and gains arising from the source or sources therein contained, after making such reductions as are therein stated, and that no deduction whatever than such as is therein stated, and to such amount only as is therein stated, hath been made from the profits or gains accounted for; provided always, that such person shall be at liberty to amend his said statement or schedule before he shall be required to take such oath; and after such oath, and in every case where such statement or schedule shall not have been objected to as aforesaid, and the said Commissioners shall be satisfied therewith, they shall make an assessment according thereto, on the amount therein stated, at which the duty shall have been computed; and every such assessment, made after verification of such statement or schedule, shall be final and conclusive as to the matters contained in such statement or schedule.

CXXIII. That whenever the Commissioners for general purposes shall be dissatisfied with any assessment returned by the additional Commissioners to them, or with any schedule delivered to them, or shall require further information respecting the same, it shall be lawful for the said Commissioners for general purposes to put any question in writing touching such assessment, or the contents of such schedule, or touching any of the matters which ought to be contained therein, or any sums which shall have been set against or deducted from the profits or gains to be estimated in such assessment or schedule, and the particulars thereof, and to demand an answer in writing accordingly from and signed by the person to be charged, and so from time to time whenever the said Commissioners shall think the same necessary, and the said Commissioners for general purposes shall from time to time issue their precept, requiring true and particular answers to be given to such questions within seven days after the service of such precept; and every such person shall make true and particular answers, in writing, signed by him, to such questions, within the time limited by such precept, or shall within the like period tender himself before the said Commissioners for general purposes to be examined by them visd voce to such matters; and every person required to make such answers, or appearing before the said Commissioners to be examined as a party, or as the clerk, agent, or servant of such party, as herein is mentioned, shall be permitted to give his answers, either in writing as aforesaid or visd voce, without having taken any oath, and shall be at liberty to object to any question, and peremptorily to refuse answering the same; and the substance of such answers as he shall give visd voce shall, in his presence, be reduced into writing, and read to him, and he shall be at liberty to alter any part thereof, and also to alter or amend any particular contained in his answers in writing, or in any schedule or declaration, before he shall be called upon to verify the same in the manner herein directed; and every such schedule shall be altered or amended as shall seem requisite, after such inquiry or examination.

CXXIV. That it shall be lawful for the Commissioners for general purposes, in every such case as aforesaid, whenever they shall think the same necessary, to require the person upon whom any assessment hath been made by the additional Commissioners, with which the said Commissioners for general purposes are dissatisfied, or from whom such schedule or answers in writing as aforesaid have been received, with which the said Commissioners are dissatisfied, to appear and verify the same, and, upon the appearance of such person, to permit him to alter or amend such schedule or answers, and thereupon to administer to such person the oath hereinafter mentioned, and also to require any person who shall have been examined visd voce before them to verify his examination on oath, which any one of the said Commissioners is hereby empowered to administer, and such oath shall be, that the contents of the said statements or schedules are true to the best of his knowledge and belief, and contain a full and true account of the balance of all the profits and gains of the deponent chargeable by this Act to the best of his knowledge and belief, and a full and true account of every deduction made from his profits or gains in adjusting such balance, or that the contents of all such answers in writing as shall have been returned to the said Commissioners by him as the same are then stated, or that the contents of his examination, as the same have been reduced into writing, are true; and every such oath shall be subscribed by the party taking the same.

CXXV. That it shall be lawful for the Commissioners for general purposes to summon in like manner any person, whom they shall think able to give evidence or testimony respecting the assessment made or to be made on any other person, to appear before them to be examined, and to examine every such person who shall so appear before them on oath (except the clerk, agent, or servant of the person to be charged, or other person confidentially intrusted or employed in the affairs of such party to be charged, and who shall respectively be examined in the same manner and subject to the same restrictions as are hereinbefore provided for the vidé voce examination of any party touching the assessments to be charged on him), which oath any one of the said Commissioners is hereby empowered to administer; and such oath shall be, that the testimony or evidence to be given by such person shall contain the whole truth, and nothing but the truth, in respect of the matter in question concerning which such evidence or testimony is to be given, and every such oath shall be subscribed by the person taking the same; and if any person, being duly summoned as aforesaid, shall refuse or neglect to appear before the said Commissioners at the time and place to be appointed for that purpose, or if any person, other than such clerk, agent, servant, or person confidentially intrusted or employed as aforesaid, being summoned, shall appear before the said Commissioners, but shall refuse to be sworn, or to subscribe such oath as aforesaid, or, having taken and subscribed such oath, shall refuse to answer any lawful question touching the matter depending before the said Commissioners, every person so offending shall forfeit any sum not exceeding 20*l*.

CXXVI. That if the Commissioners for general purposes, or the major part of them present, after hearing all such appeals as shall be depending before them, or upon any objection made by the inspector or surveyor to any such assessment or schedule, whether such inquiry or examination as aforesaid shall have taken place or not, shall agree to make an assessment according to the statement contained in the said schedule, as the same shall have been returned, or altered or amended upon appeal as aforesaid, they shall direct an assessment to be made of the duties chargeable on the statement contained in the said schedule at the rate contained in this Act; and if the said Commissioners shall think proper to require a verification of the said schedule, they shall give notice in manner aforesaid to the party to appear before them to verify the same, and such verification shall be made by the party in such manner, and such assessment thereupon shall be made, as hereinbefore directed, which assessment shall be final and conclusive; but nevertheless, in every instance where any person shall have neglected or refused to return such schedule according to the exigency of the precept of the said Commissioners, or if any clerk, agent, or servant of such party as aforesaid, being summoned, shall have neglected or refused to appear before the Commissioners to be examined, or if such party, or his clerk, agent, or servant as aforesaid, shall have declined to answer any question put to him by the said Commissioners in writing or vidé voce, or where the schedule delivered shall have been objected to as aforesaid, and such objection shall not have been appealed against within such reasonable time as is directed by this Act, or where any person, being required so to do, shall have neglected or refused to verify his statement or schedule, or his answers or examination in writing, or where the Commissioners shall agree as aforesaid to allow the objections, or any of them, made by such inspector or surveyor, it shall be lawful for the said Commissioners, and they are hereby required, in every such case, according to the best of their judgment, to settle and ascertain in what sums such person ought to be charged, and to make an assessment accordingly, which assessment shall be final and conclusive.

CXXVII. That in every case where the Commissioners for general purposes shall have made any increased assessment upon the amount contained in the statement or schedule of the party to be charged, or shall at any time during the continuance of this Act discover that any increase ought to be made, whether upon the surcharge of the inspector or surveyor, or from his information, or otherwise, it shall be lawful for them to charge such person in a sum not exceeding treble the amount by which the duties shall have been increased; (that is to say,) where the party shall have refused or neglected to deliver any statement or schedule, then in a sum not exceeding treble the amount of the sum which, according to the rate prescribed in Schedule (D.), such person, in the judgment of the said Commissioners, ought to be charged at, to be added to the assessment, and applied as directed by this Act in other cases of increased assessments, and in case a statement or schedule shall have been so delivered, then in a sum not exceeding treble the amount beyond the amount contained in such statement or schedule, unless such person shall in every such case make it appear to the satisfaction of the said Commissioners that the omission complained of did not proceed from any fraud, covin, art, or contrivance, or any gross or wilful neglect.

CXXVIII. That if any person required by the Commissioners for general purposes to make out and deliver any schedule to the person to whom the same ought to be delivered in pursuance of this Act shall refuse or neglect so to do, or shall refuse or neglect to appear before the said Commissioners, or to verify upon oath before them any statement or schedule by him delivered, within the time limited by such Commissioners in pursuance of this Act, every such person so offending shall forfeit any sum not exceeding 20*l*., and treble the duty at which he ought to be assessed.

CXXIX. Provided and enacted, That if any person who shall have delivered a statement or schedule shall discover any omission or wrong statement therein, it shall be lawful for him to deliver an additional statement or schedule rectifying such omission or wrong statement, and such person shall not afterwards be subject to any proceeding by reason of such omission or wrong statement; and if any person shall not have delivered a statement or schedule, within the time limited by the Commissioners for that purpose, it shall be lawful for him to deliver a statement or schedule, in manner herein directed, at any time before a proceeding shall be had to recover the penalty herein mentioned, and no proceeding shall be afterwards had for recovering such penalty; and if any proceeding shall have been actually had before the Commissioners for recovering such penalty, it shall be lawful for the same Commissioners, on due proof to their satisfaction that no fraud or evasion whatever was intended to stay such proceedings, either on the terms of paying or without paying the costs then incurred, as the Commissioners shall think fit; and if any proceeding shall have been commenced in any court, it shall be lawful for the Commissioners to certify, that in their judgment no fraud or evasion was intended by the party making such omission, and it shall be lawful for any Judge of such court, on a summary application, to stay such proceedings on such terms as he shall think fit; or if such person shall have delivered an imperfect statement or schedule, and shall give to the Commissioners a sufficient reason why a perfect statement or schedule cannot be delivered, the said Commissioners, being satisfied therewith, shall give further time, and so from time to time, for the delivery of such statement or schedule; and such person shall not be liable to any penalty for not having delivered such statement or schedule within the time before limited, in case such person shall have delivered as perfect a statement or schedule as from the nature of the case he was enabled to give, and so from time to time as long as the Commissioners shall grant further time as aforesaid.

CXXX. Provided and enacted, That in any case in which an appeal is allowed to be made to the Commissioners for general purposes against any assessment of the duties contained in Schedule (D.) of this Act, or against any objection of the inspector or surveyor to such assessment, or against any surcharge of the said duties, it shall be lawful for the person assessed or charged, if he shall think fit, instead of appealing to the said Commissioners for general purposes, to appeal to the Commissioners for special purposes, upon giving notice thereof in writing to the inspector or surveyor within the time limited for notices of appeal to the Commissioners for general purposes in similar cases, and thereupon every such appeal shall be heard and determined by two or more of the Commissioners for special purposes who shall be directed by the Commissioners of Stamps and Taxes to hear appeals in the district in which such appellant shall be chargeable, and the determination of the said Commissioners for special purposes shall be final and conclusive in the matter: Provided always, that no person who shall claim the exemption hereinafter granted to persons whose annual income is less than 150*l*. shall be allowed to appeal to the said Commissioners for special purposes, but that every such claim shall be determined by the Commissioners for general purposes as hereinafter directed.

CCXXI. Provided and enacted, That it shall be lawful for any person chargeable to the duties contained in the said Schedule (D.), and who shall not claim the said exemption hereinafter granted, to require, if he shall think fit, that all proceedings in order to an assessment upon him, in respect of profits and gains chargeable under the said Schedule, shall be had and taken before the Commissioners for special purposes in the manner hereinafter directed, instead of the additional Commissioners or the Commissioners for general purposes, provided he shall deliver a notice of such request, together with the list, declaration, and statement of such profits and gains, to the assessor of the parish or place, to be by him transmitted to the inspector or surveyor of the district in which the same shall be chargeable, within the time to be limited by the general notice hereinbefore directed to be given for delivery of all such lists and statements as aforesaid; and thereupon the said inspector or surveyor shall examine the said list and statement, and shall compute and assess the duties which, according to his judgment, shall be chargeable upon the party under the said Schedule (D.), and shall make a certificate of such assessment, and deliver the same, together with the said list, declaration, and statement, to the Commissioners for special purposes, who shall examine the same, and make or sign and allow such an assessment of the said duties as shall appear to them to be just and proper, subject to an appeal by the party to be charged, or by the inspector or surveyor objecting to such assessment, in like manner and under the like rules and regulations as in cases of appeal against assessments made by the said additional Commissioners; and every such appeal shall be heard and determined by the Commissioners for special purposes directed by the Commissioners of Stamps and Taxes to hear appeals in such district; provided that if either the party to be charged, or the inspector or surveyor, shall apprehend the determination of the said Commissioners for special purposes on such appeal to be erroneous in any particular, and shall then express himself dissatisfied therewith, the said Commissioners, if required by him, shall state specially and sign the case on which the question arose, together with their determination thereon, and transmit the same to the Commissioners of Stamps and Taxes for their opinion; and the said last-mentioned Commissioners shall, with all convenient speed, state and subscribe their opinion on the case so transmitted, and according to such opinion the assessment which shall have been the subject of appeal shall be altered or confirmed, and the decision of the Commissioners of Stamps and Taxes shall be final and conclusive in the matter; and in every case in which an assessment shall be made by the said Commissioners for special purposes, they shall notify the amount thereof to the party assessed, who shall cause the same to be paid to the Receiver General of Stamps and Taxes, or the proper officer for receipt in England or Scotland, at such time or times and in such manner as the said Commissioners shall direct; and in default of such payment the said Commissioners shall make a duplicate of such assessment, and deliver the same, together with their warrant for levying the amount thereof, to the collector of the duties appointed by the Commissioners for general purposes for the parish or place in which the party assessed shall reside, and such collector is hereby authorized and required to levy and raise the duties so assessed according to the exigency of such warrant.

CCXXII. That wherever by this Act authority is given to the Commissioners for special purposes to make, sign, or allow any assessment, or to hear any appeal, then and in every such case all the powers and authorities, rules and regulations, which under or by virtue of this or any other Act may be exercised or put in force by the said additional Commissioners or the said Commissioners for general purposes, or by or under their warrant, order, or direction respectively, with relation to the making, signing, or allowing of any assessment, or to the proceedings on any appeal before them, or to the collecting, levying, and receiving of any of the duties hereby granted, shall and may lawfully be exercised and put in force by the said Commissioners for special purposes, or by or under their warrant, order, or direction, with reference to any assessment to be made, signed, or allowed by such last-mentioned Commissioners, or any appeal to be heard or determined by them.

CCXXIII. That if within or at the end of the year current at the time of making any assessment under this Act, or at the end of any year when such assessment ought to have been made, any person charged to the duties contained in Schedule (D.), whether he shall have computed his profits or gains arising as last aforesaid on the amount thereof in the preceding or current year, or on an average of years, shall find, and shall prove to the satisfaction of the Commissioners by whom the assessment was made, that his profits and gains during such year for which the computation was made fell short of the sum so computed in respect of the same source of profit on which the computation was made, it shall be lawful for the said Commissioners to cause the assessment made for such current year to be amended in respect of such source of profit, as the case shall require, and in case the sum assessed shall have been paid, to certify under their hands to the Commissioners for special purposes at the Head Office for Stamps and Taxes in England the amount of the sum overpaid upon such first assessment, and thereupon the said last-mentioned Commissioners shall issue an order for the repayment of such sum as shall have been so overpaid, and such order shall be directed to the Receiver General of Stamps and Taxes, or to an officer for receipt or collector of the duties granted by this Act, or to a distributor or sub-distributor of stamps, and shall authorize and require the re-payment of the said sum so overpaid as aforesaid, in like manner as is hereinbefore provided with respect to the allowances to be granted under No. V. of Schedule (A.) of this Act.

CCXXIV. That in case any person charged to the said duties under Schedule (D.), whether the computation thereon shall have been made on the profits of one year or on an average, as herein allowed, shall cease to exercise the profession, or to carry on the trade, employment, or vocation, in respect whereof such assessment was made, or shall die, or become bankrupt or insolvent, before the end of the year for making such assessment, or shall from any other specific cause be deprived of or lose the profits or gains on which the computation of duty charged in such assessment was made, it shall be lawful for such person, or his executors or administrators, to make application to the Commissioners for general purposes of the district, within three calendar months after the end of such year, and on due proof thereof to their satisfaction the said Commissioners shall cause the assessment to be amended, as the case may require, and give such relief to the party charged, or his executors or administrators, as shall be just, and in cases requiring the same the said Commissioners shall direct, in manner before mentioned, repayment to be made of such sum as shall have been overpaid on the assessment amended or vacated: Provided always, that where any person shall have succeeded to the trade or business of the party charged, no such abatement shall be made, unless it shall be proved to the satisfaction of the said Commissioners that the profits and gains of such trade or business have fallen short from some specific cause, to be alleged to them and proved, since such change or succession took place, or by reason thereof, but such person so succeeding to the same shall be liable to the payment of the full duties thereon without any new assessment.

CXXXV. That the persons acting as Commissioners in the execution of this Act shall be charged and assessed to the duties contained in Schedule (D.), if liable thereto, in like manner as any other persons may be charged and assessed to the said duties: Provided always, that any Commissioner whose statement or schedule shall be under consideration, or shall be concerned or interested therein, either for himself or for any other person, in any character before described, shall have no voice, and shall not be present, except upon an appeal, for the purpose of being examined visd voce by the Commissioners then having his assessment or schedule under consideration, but shall withdraw during the consideration and determination thereof.

CXXXVI. That the Commissioners for general purposes acting in relation to the duties contained in Schedule (D.) shall, in their respective books of assessment, enter and cause to be entered the several amounts of the sums assessed by them; and they shall from time to time make out, and transmit to the Commissioners of Stamps and Taxes, accounts of the amount of duty assessed by them, distinguishing the amount charged on each person, which accounts shall severally be made out, with the particulars required by this Act; and they shall also from time to time make out, and transmit to the said Commissioners of Stamps and Taxes, lists containing the name, description, and place of residence of every person assessed by them respectively, as soon as the same conveniently can be done, which lists shall be made out according to an alphabetical arrangement of the respective parishes or places of residence in their respective districts.

CXXXVII. That all assessments upon profits or gains under Schedule (D.) made by the Commissioners for general purposes shall be entered in books, with the names and descriptions of the persons, corporations, companies, or societies to be charged therewith, and their respective places of abode set opposite thereto, and which entries shall respectively be numbered progressively, or lettered, or distinguished by numbers or letters, as the said Commissioners shall think proper; and that when and as soon as the said Commissioners shall have caused to be made any such entry in such book, in case the person charged by such assessment shall have declared his intention to pay the duty to the proper officer for receipt within the time limited by this Act for payment thereof, and in case the said Commissioners shall be satisfied with such declaration, they shall deliver to such person, or to such other person as shall be there attending on his behalf, a certificate under the hands of two or more of such Commissioners, specifying the amount of the sums to be paid within one year upon such assessment; and every such certificate shall be numbered or lettered with the same number or letter as the entry in the book of the said Commissioners to which such certificate shall relate shall be marked and numbered or lettered, without naming or otherwise describing the person charged thereby; which certificate shall, on production thereof, be a sufficient authority to the said officer for receipt from time to time to receive from any person bearing and producing such certificate the amount of the sums therein contained, in such proportions thereof as by this Act are made payable by instalments, and at the times by this Act appointed for payment thereof, or in advance; and on the payment of the sums contained in any such certificate, or any proportion thereof, the said officer for receipt shall give certificates for the same, acknowledging the receipt of the sum paid on account of the certificate of the said respective Commissioners by the number or letter marked thereon as before directed.

CXXXVIII. That in all cases where the Commissioners shall not have received a declaration of the intended payment to the officer for receipt as aforesaid of the duty to be charged under Schedule (D.), or shall not be satisfied with such declaration, they shall deliver a duplicate of the assessments to the collector, with the names and descriptions of the parties charged therewith, together with their warrants for collecting the same, in such form and under the like powers as they are authorized to collect the duty under any of the other Schedules contained in this Act; and if after the receipt of any such declaration the duties shall not be duly satisfied and paid accordingly, the said Commissioners shall cause the names of the defaulters, and the amount of duty assessed on each, to be inserted from time to time in the duplicate of such collector; and the warrant for collecting the same shall be of the like force and effect as if such names and sums had been inserted therein at the time of issuing such warrant.

CXXXIX. That it shall be lawful for the respective Commissioners for general purposes to issue out and deliver to the respective officers for receipt duplicates of the assessments made by them, containing the sums assessed on every person to whom a certificate hath been delivered by letter or number, together with the number or letter set opposite thereto in their respective books before mentioned, without naming such persons, with their warrants for receiving the duties charged by such Commissioners respectively when the same shall become payable as aforesaid; and all such sums shall be paid to the respective officers for receipt, and such part thereof as shall not be so paid to them may be levied and collected as herein is mentioned; and if not so paid, levied, or collected, the same shall be recoverable as a debt to the Queen's Majesty, with full costs of suit, and all charges and expenses attending the same.

CXL. That the duties payable on such last-mentioned assessments shall be paid to the proper officer for receipt, by such instalments as by this Act is directed, before the respective days appointed for such payments, according to the regulations of this Act, or by three or two instalments, or in one sum in full, as the parties shall choose; and the certificates hereby required to be given on such payments shall be delivered to the respective Commissioners, or to one or more of them, or to their clerk, at their office, before the times when the same are hereby made payable, taking his or their receipt for the same.

which receipt shall be a sufficient discharge for the money so paid in satisfaction of so much of the assessment as shall be mentioned in such certificate to be so paid; and if any person shall neglect to pay such duties at the time and in the manner hereby directed for payment thereof, or, having paid the same, shall neglect to deliver the certificate required to be given on such payment as hereinbefore directed, it shall be lawful for the Commissioners for general purposes, and they are hereby required, to deliver a duplicate of all sums assessed on any person who shall have made default in paying or accounting for the payment of the same, together with their warrant, to such collector as they shall appoint to levy the sum in arrear and unpaid, and such duplicate shall be made out, and such sums shall be levied, according to the regulations of the said Acts relating to the duties of assessed taxes.

CXLII. That it shall be lawful for any person to pay in advance to the Receiver General of Stamps and Taxes, or to the proper officer for receipt, any sum of money charged as aforesaid, and to require a certificate acknowledging such payment; and it shall be lawful for the said Receiver General or officer for receipt, on production of the notice or certificate of such assessment at the time of payment of the said duty in advance (the sum so paid not in any case to be less than the sum which appears by such certificate to be payable by two instalments), to make an allowance, at the rate of 4l. per cent. per annum, out of the sum so paid in advance, calculated upon such sum for the period by which the same shall be paid sooner than the period prescribed by this Act for the payment thereof; and in every such case the said Receiver General or officer for receipt shall give the person paying the same a certificate of such payment, specifying therein the number of instalments thereby discharged, and the amount of the allowance for such prompt payment, and referring thereby to the notice or certificate of assessment then produced, and the name, number, or letter therein mentioned; and all such allowances shall be made at the time of paying the said duties; and such certificates as aforesaid, being delivered at the respective offices of the Commissioners for executing this Act, shall be received by them as cash in discharge of the assessments, and shall be allowed to them in their accounts.

CXLIII. That upon the payment of any such sum of money as aforesaid the said Receiver General or officer for receipt shall give such certificate as aforesaid for the whole of the sums so paid, or separate certificates in like form for such portions thereof as shall be required, which certificates shall severally be cut off indentwise from the counter-cheques thereof, which counter-cheques are to remain with the said Receiver General or officer for receipt; and every such certificate shall be denominated in the body thereof to be on account of payments made in discharge of the duties assessed by virtue of this Act; and upon the delivery of any such certificate as last aforesaid to the said Commissioners for general purposes, or at their office, in discharge of the whole or any part of the said duties assessed or charged upon the person delivering such certificate, the said Commissioners or their clerk shall, if required, indorse in writing on the back of the certificate to be given by them or him in such case the amount of the number of instalments of the said duties to be discharged by such payments, which receipts of the said Commissioners or their clerks as aforesaid shall be received, without further proof, as evidence of such payments, in all courts and places and before all persons whatever.

And after reciting that it is expedient to relieve persons who may be willing to compound on the terms hereinafter mentioned for the duties on the profits and gains described in the said Schedule (D.) from making any further return of such profits and gains chargeable in the second and third years of the term limited for the continuance of this Act:—

It is Enacted,

CXLIII. That every person desirous of compounding for the said duties shall deliver the list and statement of his profits and gains chargeable under the said Schedule (D.) in the first year of this Act to the assessor of the parish or place in which such profits are chargeable, in order to an assessment of the duties thereon being made by the said Commissioners for special purposes, and such person shall at the same time also deliver to the said assessor a notice signed by such person of his desire to compound for the duties thereon in the manner allowed by this Act; and when such assessment shall have been made by the said Commissioners (any appeal allowed by this Act and made against the same having been first determined) it shall be lawful for the said Commissioners for special purposes to contract and agree with such person for a composition for the said duties, on the terms hereinafter mentioned, for the period of three years, limited for the continuance of this Act, provided such person shall enter into and sign a contract of composition within the space of one calendar month next after the making of such assessment shall have been notified to him, and his appeal against the same (if any) shall have been determined; and the terms of such composition shall be, the payment in each and every year of the said term of the amount of the said assessment so made as aforesaid, together with an addition thereto at and after the rate of 1s. for every 20s. of the sum assessed as aforesaid, which addition shall be made by the said Commissioners to the said assessment so made for the first year of the said term, and in each subsequent year thereof the assessment of the said duties under Schedule (D.), upon the person who shall have entered into such contract of composition, shall be made by the Commissioners for special purposes in a sum equal to the aggregate amount of the said first year's assessment, with the said additional rate thereon; and it shall not be necessary for such person to deliver any further list, declaration, or statement of profits described in the said Schedule (D.), during the said term of composition: Provided always, that if the person upon whom such assessment as aforesaid shall have been made shall neglect or refuse to enter into and sign such contract of composition within the time herein limited for that purpose, the assessment so made, without the said additional rate, shall be collected, levied, and recovered in like manner as any other assessment made by the Commissioners executing this Act.

CXLVI. That the duties hereby granted, contained in the Schedule marked (E.) shall be assessed and charged under the following rules, which rules shall be deemed and construed a part of this Act, and to refer to the said last-mentioned duties, as if the same had been inserted under a special enactment.

force for one whole year, unless the same shall cease or expire within the year, by lapse, death, or otherwise, from which period the assessment thereon shall be discharged :

Fourth.—The perquisites to be assessed under this Act shall be deemed to be such profits of offices and employments as arise from fees or other emoluments, and payable either by the crown or the subject, in the course of executing such offices or employments, and may be estimated either on the profits of the preceding year, or of the fair and just average of one year of the amount of the profits thereof in the three years preceding ; such years in each case respectively ending on the 5th of April in each year, or such other day of each year on which the accounts of such profits have been usually made up :

Fifth.—In all cases where any salaries, fees, wages, or other perquisites or profits, or any annuities, pensions, or stipends, shall be payable at any public office, or by any officer of Her Majesty's Household, or by any of Her Majesty's receivers or paymasters, or by any agent employed in that behalf, the duties chargeable under this Act in respect of such salaries, fees, wages, perquisites, or profits, or in respect of such annuities, pensions, or stipends, shall be detained and stopped out of the same, or out of any money which shall be payable upon such salaries, fees, wages, perquisites, or profits, or upon such annuities, pensions, or stipends, or for the arrears thereof, whenever the same shall happen, and be applied to the satisfaction of the duties on such offices or employments, or on such annuities, pensions, or stipends respectively, (not being otherwise paid,) in the manner directed by this Act ; and whenever the same so payable shall be assessed by the Commissioners for general purposes in their respective districts, they shall transmit an account of the amount of the duty assessed to the office where the same are payable, in order that the amount so assessed may be there stopped or detained :

Sixth.—In all cases where the salaries, fees, wages, allowances, or profits of any officer chargeable to the said duties shall not arise out of any of the offices mentioned in the foregoing rule, but shall arise from any other office or employment of profit chargeable to the said duties, and the salaries, fees, wages, perquisites, or profits shall be payable at such office by any officer thereof, or by any receiver of the same respectively, or by any agent employed in that behalf, the duties chargeable under this Act in respect of such salaries, fees, wages, perquisites, or profits shall be detained and stopped out of the same, or out of any money which shall be paid upon such salaries, fees, wages, perquisites, or profits, or for arrears thereof, whenever the same shall happen, and be applied to the satisfaction of the duties (not otherwise paid) in the manner directed by this Act :

Seventh.—Such portion of the said duties on offices or employments of profit, or on annuities, pensions, or stipends, as are charged with any sum of money payable to any other person, shall be deducted out of the sum payable to such other person as a like rate on such sum would amount unto ; and all such persons, their agents and receivers, shall allow such deductions and payments upon receipt of the residue of such sums :

Eighth.—Such portion of the said duties charged on any office or employment of profit executed by any deputy or clerk, or other person employed under the principal in such office, and paid by such principal out of the salary, fees, wages, perquisites, or profits of such principal, shall be deducted out of the salary or wages so payable as a like rate on such salary or wages would amount unto ; and all such deputies, clerks, and other persons so employed shall allow to their respective principals such deductions and payments upon the receipt of the residue of such salaries or wages :

Ninth.—In estimating the duty payable for any such office or employment of profit, or any pension, annuity, or stipend, all official deductions and payments made upon the receipt of the salaries, fees, wages, perquisites, and profits thereof, or in passing the accounts belonging to such office, or upon the receipt of such pension, annuity, or stipend, shall be allowed to be deducted, provided a due account thereof be rendered to the said Commissioners, and proved to their satisfaction :

Tenth.—In all cases where any annuity or pension shall be payable out of any particular branch of the public revenue, and at the office of that branch of revenue, the Commissioners acting for that department shall have authority to assess and levy the same as a salary or wages payable thereout.

CXLVII. That every person to be assessed for his office or employment shall be deemed to have exercised the same at the head office of the department under which such office or employment shall be held, and shall be rated for such office or employment as if exercised at such head office, although the duties of such office or employment shall be performed, or the profits or any part thereof arising from such office or employment shall be payable elsewhere, within or out of Great Britain ; and all assessments made on any inferior officer, wherever he shall exercise his office or employment, shall be rated accordingly in the same district where such head office shall be established ; and every office shall be deemed to belong to and to be assessed by or under the principal officers of that department by or under whom the appointment to such office was made, provided that where such appointment shall be made by any inferior officer in any department, then such office shall be assessed by the same Commissioners by whom such inferior officer shall be chargeable for his office : Provided that where any such appointment shall be held under the Great Seal or Privy Seal, either of England or Scotland, or shall be made under the royal sign manual, or where any such appointment shall be under the hands or seals of the Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury, and the same shall not be exercised in the department of the Treasury, then the officer holding the same shall be assessed in that department where the office shall have been executed: Provided also, that nothing herein contained shall be construed to limit the right hereinbefore given to Commissioners of the district of assessing offices before described within their respective jurisdictions, although such offices, or any of them, may not be held under their appointment, or the profits of such offices may not be payable by them or their order.

CXLVIII. Provided and enacted, That nothing herein contained shall extend or be construed to extend to charge any person resident in Ireland with the duties contained in the said Schedule (E.) in respect of any public office or employment the duties whereof are necessarily and permanently performed in Ireland.

CXLIX. Provided and enacted, That the like allowances shall be granted to the trustees of the British Museum, in respect of any charge under Schedule (A.) to be made on the lands and tenements vested in such trustees, as are granted to colleges and other properties mentioned in No. VI. of that Schedule; and the like exemptions shall be allowed in respect of any dividends of stock vested in such trustees, or any of them, or in any other for their use, as are granted to charitable institutions by this Act; and no salary or payment made or to be made out of Her Majesty's Exchequer to such trustees for the use of such institutions shall be charged at the said Exchequer, provided all salaries of officers or persons employed under the said trustees shall be charged on the said officers respectively.

CL. That the several Commissioners authorized to act in the execution of this Act in relation to the duties on offices or employments of profit, and on pensions or stipends, as soon after their appointment respectively as conveniently can be done in their respective departments, shall meet in some convenient place, in order to qualify themselves by taking the oaths prescribed by the said recited Acts relating to the duties of assessed taxes, and shall have power to elect a clerk and assessors, and in cases where the duties cannot be stopped and detained at the department of office of the said Commissioners, or for which the said respective Commissioners shall act, collectors of the said duties to be assessed by them from and amongst the officers in their respective departments, and separate assessors and collectors in each such department, under the cognizance of the same Commissioners, which assessors shall, within a time to be fixed by the respective Commissioners, deliver to them their certificates of assessment, in writing under their hands, to be verified upon their oaths, of the full and just annual value of all offices and employments of profit chargeable under this Act in the department for which they shall be appointed assessors, and of all pensions and stipends, estimated according to this Act, with the names and surnames of the several officers and persons entitled to pensions or stipends, and the several sums of money they ought to pay by virtue of this Act, at the rate of 7d. for every 20s. of such value, without abatement or deduction, and without concealment or favour, upon pain of forfeiture for every neglect in the premises of any sum not exceeding 100*l.* nor less than 20*l.*, which said assessors are hereby strictly enjoined and required, with all care and diligence, to charge and assess themselves, and all other officers, clerks, and persons employed in their respective departments of office, and with respect to the duty on pensions or stipends to charge and assess all persons entitled unto any such pensions or stipends, and respectively to make their assessments according to the provisions of this Act; and every such assessor shall have free access to all documents and papers whatever in their respective offices touching the salaries, fees, wages, perquisites, and profits of any officer, clerk, or person aforesaid, belonging to their respective offices, and touching the amount of the respective pensions or stipends, and shall be at liberty, whenever the same may be necessary, to require returns from the parties themselves, according to the provisions of this Act, that they may be enabled to make a true assessment in pursuance thereof.

CLI. Provided and enacted, That no person shall, in respect of the profits arising from offices or from pensions or stipends chargeable before the respective Commissioners appointed for those purposes in their respective departments of office as aforesaid, be liable to the penalty herein contained for not returning a statement of the profits arising from such office, pension, or stipend, in pursuance of any general notice hereinbefore directed, nor in any case except where the assessor for those profits respectively shall have required a return thereof in pursuance of the next preceding clause.

CLII. That in every case where any person holding such offices or employments, or being entitled unto any pension or stipend as aforesaid, shall claim to be exempt from such assessment, the Commissioners shall nevertheless set down in such assessment the names of such persons, and the full and just annual value of such offices, employments, pensions, or stipends; and the claim to such exemption shall be preferred and examined, and the merits thereof shall be heard and determined, under the regulations of this Act with respect to other assessments.

CLIII. That where any office or employment of profit chargeable by this Act is or shall be executed by deputy, such deputy shall, in all cases where he shall be in the receipt of the profits thereof, be answerable for and shall pay such assessment as shall be charged thereon, and deduct the same out of the profits of such office or employment; and where the salaries, fees, wages, emoluments, or profits of any officer or officers in any such office shall be receivable by any one or more of the said officers for the use of such officer, or as a fund to be divided amongst such officers in certain proportions, the officer or officers receiving such salaries, fees, wages, perquisites, or profits shall be answerable for the duties charged thereon, and shall pay the same, and deduct the same out of the funds provided for such respective offices or employments, before any division or apportionment thereof, and in case of refusal or non-payment thereof shall be liable to such distress as by this Act is prescribed against any person having the office or employment, and to all other remedies and penalties respectively herein contained.

CLIV. That the proper officers, or their respective deputies, and the receivers and paymasters in every public department of office, and in every other office for which Commissioners are hereby intended to be appointed for raising the duties hereby charged on such offices respectively, and any agent by whom any salaries, fees, wages, perquisites, or profits shall be payable, shall, upon request to him made by the assessors of the said duties, deliver gratis true lists or accounts of all such salaries, fees, wages, perquisites, and profits received by him, and belonging to such officers respectively, and of all pensions and stipends payable to them respectively, for the better guidance of the said assessors in charging the same; and if the said assessors shall be dissatisfied with such accounts it shall be lawful for them to require any officer whose office shall not be truly valued in such account to prepare and produce to them, within the like period of time as is limited for the returns of other accounts by this Act, a list or account of the salaries, fees, wages, perquisites, and profits of the office exercised by him, which returns such officer shall be obliged to make under the penalties and forfeitures contained in this Act for not making other returns hereby required; and from the documents and papers in their respective offices the said assessors shall make their assessment upon the persons holding such offices, or entitled unto such pensions respectively, according to the annual value thereof, and shall in like manner as is before directed with respect to assessors for any parish or place bring in their said assessments to the respective Commissioners for their allowance, who shall forthwith set their hands to the same, which assessments shall be in force for one year, commencing and payable at the like periods as the assessments in parishes are made payable; and the said respective Commissioners for the duties on offices shall, in all cases where collectors are authorized to be appointed, cause the like duplicates to be made thereof, and delivered to collectors, with like warrants to collect the said duties, as are before directed to be given to collectors for any parish or place; and the said collectors of the said duties on offices shall have the like authority to demand and levy the said duties as is herein given to collectors of any parish or place: Provided always, that in all cases where the duties, and any salaries, fees, wages, perquisites, or profits of any public office shall be detained and stopped out of the same, or out of any monies which shall be paid thereupon, the respective Commissioners shall cause the like duplicates to be delivered to the proper officers in the respective offices, who shall keep true accounts of all monies stopped and detained under the authority of this Act, and shall be answerable for the same; and the money so detained of the duty on annuities, pensions, or stipends shall be accounted for and paid in the manner hereinafter directed.

CLV. That where any person having, using, or exercising any office or employment of profit which shall be charged to the duties by this Act granted thereon, and the said duties cannot be detained and stopped in the hands of the proper officer, or in the hands of any agent employed to pay the monies due in respect of the said office or employment, or the same monies shall have been paid over to the person having, using, or exercising the said office or employment, and such person shall refuse or neglect to pay the sum of money charged upon him, the Commissioners for raising the duties on the said offices shall and may, by writing under their hands and seals, certify such neglect or refusal, and the sum payable by virtue of this Act, to the Commissioners for executing this Act, in relation to lands, tenements, and hereditaments, in the parish or place where such officer shall reside; and such last-mentioned Commissioners are hereby authorized and required, upon receipt of such certificate, by warrant under their hands and seals, to authorize and empower the respective collectors of the said duties, or the collectors of the parish or place where such officer shall reside, to levy the same, by such ways and means as they are authorized to levy the duties charged by them respectively in pursuance of this Act; and such collectors are hereby required to execute such warrant accordingly, and which shall be executed under the like powers and in like manner as is hereinafter directed, and as if such officer were charged to the said duties in such parish or place; and the monies arising thereby shall be paid to the collectors charged to the said duties on such office or employment.

CLVI. Provided and enacted, That no qualification shall be required of any of the officers or persons herein described to be Commissioners for the duties on offices, or on employments of profit, or on pensions, stipends, annuities, interests, or dividends, contained in the said several schedules, who shall act as such Commissioners by virtue of their several offices, other than such offices respectively; anything herein contained to the contrary notwithstanding.

CLVII. That the respective assessors and collectors appointed to raise and assess, or levy, collect, and pay, the sums of money to be charged on offices or employments of profit, or on annuities, pensions, or stipends payable by Her Majesty by virtue of this Act, and also the inspectors and surveyors acting in relation to the said duties, shall respectively be subject to the penalties and forfeitures for refusing or neglecting the performance of their duty, or for being guilty of any fraud or abuse in executing the same, as are inflicted on such officers respectively for the like offences by the said Acts relating to the duties of assessed taxes.

CLVIII. Provided and enacted, That such of the said duties granted by this Act which may be detained or stopped and deducted out of the sums in respect whereof they shall be charged or deducted shall be respectively detained at such times in each year as the said sums shall be payable to the person entitled thereto.

CLIX. It is Enacted,

- I. That within the Australian colonies the waste lands of the Crown shall be disposed of in the manner and according to the regulations hereinafter prescribed, and not otherwise.
- II. That the waste lands of the Crown in the Australian colonies shall not, save as hereinafter is excepted, be conveyed or alienated by Her Majesty, or by any person or persons acting on the behalf or under the authority of Her Majesty, either in fee simple or for any less estate or interest, unless such conveyance or alienation be made by way of sale, nor unless such sales be conducted in the manner and according to the regulations hereinafter prescribed.
- III. Provided and enacted, That nothing in this Act contained shall extend or be construed to extend to prevent Her Majesty, or any person or persons acting on the behalf or under the authority of Her Majesty, from excepting from sale, and either reserving to Her Majesty, her heirs and successors, or disposing of in such other manner as for the public interests may seem best, such lands as may be required for public roads or other internal communications, whether by land or water, or for the use or benefit of the aboriginal inhabitants of the country, or for purposes of military defence, or as the sites of places of public worship, schools, or other public buildings, or as places for the interment of the dead, or places for the recreation and amusement of the inhabitants of any town or village, or as the sites of public quays or landing places on the sea coast or shores of navigable streams, or for any other purpose of public safety, convenience, health, or enjoyment; and provided also, that nothing in this Act contained shall extend or be construed to extend to prevent Her Majesty, or any person or persons acting on her behalf or under the authority of Her Majesty, from fulfilling any promise or engagement made or hereafter to be made by or on the behalf of Her Majesty in favour of any military or naval settlers in the said colonies respectively, in pursuance of any regulations made by Her Majesty's authority in favour or for the benefit of any such settlers.
- IV. That, save as hereinafter is excepted in reference to blocks of twenty thousand acres of land or upwards, no waste lands of the crown in any of the said colonies shall be so conveyed or alienated as aforesaid until the same shall have been surveyed, and shall have been delineated in the public charts of such colony, in such lots as shall be subsequently offered and put up for sale, which lots shall in no case, save as aforesaid, contain an area exceeding one superficial square mile.
- V. That, under and subject to the various provisions and regulations hereinafter contained, the governor for the time being of each of the said colonies is hereby authorized and required, in the name and on the behalf of Her Majesty, to convey and alienate in fee simple, or for any less estate or interest, to the purchaser or purchasers thereof, any waste lands of the crown in any such colony, which conveyances or alienations shall be made in such forms and with such solemnities as shall from time to time be prescribed by Her Majesty, and being so made shall be valid and effectual in the law to transfer to and to vest in possession in any such purchaser or purchasers any such lands as aforesaid, for any such estate or interest as by any such conveyance as aforesaid shall be granted to him, her, or them.

VI. That once at the least in each of the four usual quarters of the year, and on as many other occasions as to the governor for the time being of any such colony shall seem meet, there shall be holden one or more public sales by auction of the waste lands of the crown within such colony; and that every such governor shall, by proclamation or proclamations, to be from time to time by him for that purpose made in manner hereinafter mentioned, declare with all practicable precision the times and the places at which such auctions will be holden, and what are the lands to be offered for sale at each of such auctions, and what are the upset prices at which they will be offered for sale; and it shall not be lawful for any such governor to sell or to cause to be sold any such lands, unless they shall have been specified as about to be offered for sale by such proclamation as aforesaid, issued at some time within three calendar months next preceding the actual sale thereof.

VII. That in every such proclamation as aforesaid the lands specified therein as about to be offered for sale shall be distinguished into three separate classes, the first of which shall be described as town lots, the second of which shall be described as suburban lots, and the third of which shall be described as country lots; and within the first of the said classes shall be comprised all lands situate within the limits of any existing town to be in that behalf especially named and described by the governor, or within any locality, to be designated by the governor as the site of any town to be thereon erected; and within the second of the said classes shall be comprised all lands situate within the distance of five miles from the nearest point of any existing or contemplated town, unless in any case the governor for the time being of any such colony shall see fit to exclude any such last-mentioned lands from the said class of suburban lots, on the ground that they will not in his judgment derive any increased value from their vicinity to any such town; and within the third of the said classes shall be comprised all lands not comprised within the said first and second classes: Provided nevertheless, that nothing herein contained shall extend or be construed to extend to prevent the putting up for sale of lands of any one or more of the said classes apart from lands of both or either of the other classes.

That none of the waste lands of the crown shall be sold at any such auction in any of the said colonies, unless the sum of 1*l*. at the least for each acre of such land be then and there offered for the same, which sum of 1*l*. per acre shall be the lowest upset price of any of the waste lands of the crown in any of the said colonies, but which lowest upset price shall be liable to be from time to time raised in any such colony in manner hereinafter mentioned.

IX. That it shall be lawful for the governor of any such colony, at his discretion, by any such proclamation or proclamations as aforesaid, to raise the lowest upset price of the waste lands of the crown in any such colony; and it shall be lawful for Her Majesty, by any instructions addressed to any such governor, under Her Majesty's signet and sign manual, with the advice of Her Majesty's Privy Council, either to raise the lowest upset price of the waste lands of the crown in any such colony, or to disallow and reduce back, either wholly or in part, any increase of the said upset price which, in exercise of the authority hereby vested in him, any such governor may, in manner aforesaid, have made of the said upset price, by any such proclamation or proclamations as aforesaid: Provided always, that no such instructions reducing the lowest upset price of land as raised by any such proclamation or proclamations shall be so issued as aforesaid by Her Majesty after the lapse of six months from the receipt by one of Her Majesty's Principal Secretaries of State from such governor of a transcript of any such proclamation: Provided also, that if such upset price be so reduced by Her Majesty as aforesaid, and if any person shall in the meanwhile have purchased of the crown any lands not being town or suburban lots or special lots, it shall be lawful for the governor either to return to such person the difference between the lowest upset price named by the governor and the amount to which such lowest upset price shall have been reduced by Her Majesty, or to grant to such person or persons lands equal in value to the said difference.

X. That it shall not be competent to the governor of any such colony, nor, save as aforesaid, to Her Majesty, to reduce the amount to which, in manner aforesaid, the lowest upset price of lands within such colony may at any time have been so increased by such governor or by Her Majesty.

XI. That in respect of any part not exceeding one-tenth of the whole of the lands of the third class for the first time offered for sale at any such auctions as aforesaid it shall be lawful for any such governor, by any such proclamation or proclamations as aforesaid, to name an upset price higher than the lowest upset price of waste lands in the colony, and such excepted lands of the third class shall be designated as "special country lots;" and that in respect of any lot or lots consisting of lands either of the first or of the second classes, to be comprised in any such sales, it shall be lawful for the governor for the time being to fix the upset price of any such lot or lots at any sum exceeding the lowest upset price of waste lands within the colony in which the same may be situated, and from time to time to raise or lower, as to him may seem requisite for the public interests, the price of such lots consisting of lands of the first or the second class, so always that such upset price shall never be less than the lowest upset price of waste lands within the said colony.

XII. That no land comprised in the said first or second classes shall be sold in any of the said colonies otherwise than by public auction; but that any lands comprised in the third of the said classes shall and may be sold by the governor for the time being of the colony within which the same are situate by private contract, if the same shall first have been put up to public auction in manner aforesaid, and shall not have been sold at such auction; provided that no such land shall be so sold by any such private contract for less than the upset price at which the same was last put up for sale by auction, or if any bidding above that price was made for the same at such last preceding auction, then at less than the amount of such bidding, after deducting the amount of any deposit that may have been paid thereon: Provided also, that if between any two successive sales by auction an increase shall in manner aforesaid have been made of the upset price of lands, no land affected by such increase shall subsequently be sold by private contract until after the same shall again have been put up to sale by auction at such increased upset price.

XIII. That no waste lands of the crown shall be sold in any such colony by any such private contract as aforesaid except for ready money, to be paid at the signing of such contract; and that no waste lands of the Crown shall be sold at any such public auction as aforesaid unless on condition of paying at the time of the sale, in ready money, a deposit, the amount of which shall be fixed by any such proclamation or proclamations as aforesaid, at not less than one-tenth of the whole price, nor unless the purchaser or purchasers shall contract to pay the residue of such price within one calendar month next after the time of such sale by auction, and shall further contract, that on failure of such payment the deposits shall be forfeited, and that the contract shall be thenceforward null and void.

XIV. That by any proclamation or proclamations to be from time to time for that purpose issued by the governor of any such colony, in the manner hereinafter mentioned, it shall be lawful for him to divide such colony, for the purposes hereinafter mentioned, into any number of territorial divisions not exceeding four; and for the purposes and within the meaning of this present Act, but for no other purpose, each of such territorial divisions shall be considered as a distinct and separate colony, saving only that as regards the appropriation hereinafter directed of a certain portion of the proceeds of sales of land to the introduction of emigrants from the United Kingdom, it shall be sufficient that such emigrants be introduced into any part of the entire colony, without reference to the territorial division in which such proceeds of sales may have accrued; and provided always, that it shall be lawful for Her Majesty, by any instructions to be issued by Her Majesty in manner before mentioned, to disallow and annul any such proclamation or proclamations; provided that such instructions be issued within six calendar months next after the receipt by one of Her Majesty's Principal Secretaries of State, from such governor, of the transcript of such proclamation; provided also, that such instructions shall take effect within the said colony upon the receipt thereof by the said governor, and not before.

XV. That if any person or persons shall offer to purchase from the governor of any such colony by private contract any block of unsurveyed land comprising twenty thousand acres or more, and forming, as nearly as the natural landmarks of the country will admit, a parallelogram, of which no one side shall be more than twice the length of any other side, it shall be lawful for the governor, by any such private contract, to effect any such sale, on such terms and conditions as to him shall seem meet, provided that such lands be not sold for less than the lowest upset price of lands per acre in the colony in which the same may be situated, and provided that the purchaser or purchasers of any such lands shall not be entitled to any survey thereof, except so far as may be necessary to ascertain the external marks and bounds thereof.

And after reciting that it may be convenient that means should be provided for the payment within the United Kingdom of the purchase money of waste lands of the crown within the said colonies: And that by a warrant under Her Majesty's sign manual, bearing date on the 10th of January 1840, Her Majesty was pleased to appoint certain persons therein named to be, during Her Majesty's pleasure, Commissioners, in the United Kingdom, for the sale of the waste lands of the crown in Her Majesty's colonies, and for superintending the emigration of Her Majesty's subjects to such colonies;—

It is Enacted,

XVI. That if any person or persons shall pay, for the purchase of waste lands of the crown in any of Her Majesty's Australian colonies, any sum or sums of money to the Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, or to any person or persons to be appointed by the said Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury, or any three of them, to receive the same, the said Commissioners of Colonial Lands and Emigration for the time being are hereby authorized and required, subject to such rules as shall be prescribed for their guidance in that respect by the Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury, to grant, under their hands and seal of office, certificates to any such purchaser or purchasers of the amount of any such payments, which certificates shall, on production thereof to the governor for the time being of any such colony, be received by him as equivalent to the amount of money for which the same shall respectively be given, so far and only so far as the same may be tendered to such governor in payment for the price of any waste lands of the Crown to be there purchased, either at public auction or by private contract, in the manner and subject to the regulations by this present Act prescribed in respect of such purchasers.

XVII. That nothing herein contained shall extend or be construed to extend to prevent the governor of any of the said colonies from granting to any person or persons a licence for the occupation, for any time not exceeding twelve calendar months from the date thereof, of any waste lands of the crown in any such colony, or a licence for felling, removing, and selling the timber growing on any such lands; and that no such lands shall be sold until after the expiration of the licence for the occupation of the same.

XVIII. That all charges which shall be incurred in any of the Australian colonies for the expense of the survey and management of the waste lands of the crown therein, or for effecting such sales by auction or by private contract, or otherwise in carrying into effect the provisions of this present Act within any such colony, shall in the first instance be chargeable upon and defrayed from the proceeds of sales of waste lands, unless provision shall otherwise be made for defraying such charges by any law or ordinance to be enacted by the local legislature of any such colony.

XIX. That, subject to the charge above mentioned, the gross proceeds of the sales of the waste lands of the crown in each of the said colonies shall be appropriated and applied to the public service of the said colonies respectively, in such manner as Her Majesty, or the Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury, or any three of them, shall from time to time direct: Provided always, that one equal half part at least of such gross proceeds shall be and the same is hereby appropriated towards defraying the expense of the removal from the United Kingdom to the colony wherein such revenue accrued of emigrants not possessing the means of defraying the expense of their own emigration thither, which money shall be expended by the Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury, or by such person or persons as shall be authorized by them to expend the same, but subject to such regulations regarding the selection of emigrants, the means to be provided for their conveyance, and their superintendence during the voyage to the colony to which they are destined, and for their reception and settlement in that colony, as shall from time to time be prescribed by Her Majesty in her Privy Council, or through one of Her Majesty's xx. Provided and enacted, That nothing herein contained shall affect or be construed to affect any contract, or to prevent the fulfilment of any promise or engagement, made by or on the behalf of Her Majesty with respect to any lands situate in any of the said colonies in cases where such contracts, promises, or engagements shall have been lawfully made before the time at which this Act shall take effect in any such colony.

xxi. That this Act shall take effect and have the force of law in each of the Australian colonies from the day of the receipt of a copy thereof by the governor of such colony, which day such governor shall certify and make known to the inhabitants of such colony by a proclamation, to be by him for that purpose forthwith issued.

xxii. That by the words "Australian colonies," as employed in this Act, are intended and described the colonies of New South Wales, Van Diemen's Land, South Australia, and Western Australia, and New Zealand, with their respective dependencies, as such colonies are now or shall hereafter be defined and limited, and also any other colonies which may hereafter be established within any of the existing limits of the said five colonies, unless it shall in any case seem fit to Her Majesty, by any instrument under the Great Seal by which any such new colony may be founded, to postpone, either for any period to be therein limited, or indefinitely, as to Her Majesty shall seem meet, the time at which this Act shall take effect within any such new colony, in which case this Act shall take effect therein from the time to be so limited by such commission, and not before.

xxiii. That by the word "governor," as employed in the present Act, is intended and described the person who for the time being shall be lawfully administering the government of any of the said colonies respectively; and that the several proclamations which the governors of the said respective colonies are hereby authorized to issue shall be so issued by him under the public seal of the colony, and shall be made public in the most authentic and formal manner in use in any such colony; and that by the words "waste lands of the crown," as used in the present Act, are intended and described any lands situate therein, and which now are or shall hereafter be vested in Her Majesty, her heirs and successors, and which have not been already granted or lawfully contracted to be granted to any person or persons in fee simple, or for an estate of freehold, or for a term of years, and which have not been dedicated and set apart for some public use.

18. Stealing or fraudulently destroying or concealing wills or testamentary papers, or any document or written instrument being or containing evidence of the title to any real estate or any interest in lands, tenements, or hereditaments:

Provided that nothing herein contained shall be construed to give authority to the Justices of the Peace acting in and for: the cities of London and Westminster, the liberty of the Tower of London, the borough of Southwark, and the counties of Middlesex, Essex, Kent, and Surrey, to try any person or persons for any offence committed or alleged to be committed within the jurisdiction of the Central Criminal Court, which such Justices are restrained from trying under the provisions of an Act, 4 & 5 Will. 4. c. 36, intituled, 'An Act for establishing a new Court for the Trial of Offences committed in the Metropolis and Parts adjoining.'

II. That it shall be lawful for any Judge of one of Her Majesty's superior courts at Westminster, acting under any commission of oyer and terminer and gaol delivery for any county, to issue, if he shall think fit, any writ or writs of certiorari or other process, directed to the Justices of the Peace acting in and for such county, riding, division, or liberty, or to the recorder of any borough situated within the said county, commanding the said Justices and Recorder severally to certify and return, into the court holden under the authority of such commission of oyer and terminer and gaol delivery, all indictments or presentments found or taken before any of the said Justices of the Peace, or Recorder, of any offences which, after the passing of this Act, such Justices or Recorder will not have jurisdiction to try, and the several recognisances, examinations, and depositions relative to such indictments and presentments; and also, if necessary, by writ or writs of habeas corpus, to cause any person or persons who may be in the custody of any gaol or prison, charged with any such offence, to be removed into the custody of the keeper of the common gaol of the county, so that the same offences may be dealt with, tried, and determined according to law, under the authority of the said commission.

III. That every recognizance which shall have been entered into for the prosecution of any person at any court of sessions of the peace, for any offence which after the passing of this Act such Court will not have jurisdiction to try, and every recognizance for the appearance, as well of any witness to give evidence upon any bill of indictment or presentment for any such offence, as of any person to answer our Lady the Queen for or concerning any such offence, or to answer generally before such Court, shall, in case any writ of certiorari or habeas corpus be issued for the purpose of removing such indictment or presentment, or such person so in custody as aforesaid, be obligatory on the parties bound by such recognizance to prosecute and appear, and give evidence, and do all other things therein mentioned, with reference to the indictment or presentment or person so removed as aforesaid, before the Justices of oyer and terminer and gaol delivery acting in and for that county, in like manner as if such recognizance had been originally entered into for prosecuting such offence, appearing, or giving evidence, or doing such other things before the said Justices of oyer and terminer and gaol delivery: Provided always, that one week's notice shall have been given, either personally or by leaving the same at the place of residence as of which the parties bound by such recognizance are therein described, to appear before the court of oyer and terminer and gaol delivery, instead of the said court of sessions of the peace: Provided also, that the Judge who shall grant such writ of certiorari or habeas corpus shall cause the party applying for such writ or writs, whether he be the prosecutor or party charged with such offence, to enter into a recognizance, in such sum, and with or without sureties, as the Judge may direct, conditioned to give such notice as aforesaid to the parties bound by such recognizance to appear before the said court of oyer and terminer and gaol delivery, instead of before the said court of sessions of the peace respectively, and to do such other things with reference to the indictment, presentment, or person removed as such Court or Judge shall direct.

And after reciting that it is expedient to enlarge the powers of Justices of the Peace for dividing their several courts of sessions of the peace:—

6. Agent making consignments contrary to instruction of principal, guilty of misdemeanour.
7. Right of owner to redeem; or to recover balance of proceeds.—In case of bankruptcy, owner to prove for amount paid to redeem, or for value of goods, if unredeemed.
8. Interpretation of Act.
9. Not to affect any contract made before the passing of this Act.

By this Act,

After reciting that by 6 Geo. 4. c. 94, validity is given, under certain circumstances, to contracts or agreements made with persons intrusted with and in possession of the documents of title to goods and merchandize, and consignees making advances to persons abroad who are intrusted with any goods and merchandize are entitled, under certain circumstances, to a lien thereon, but under the said Act and the present state of the law advances cannot safely be made upon goods or documents to persons known to have possession thereof as agents only: And that by the said Act it is amongst other things further enacted, "that it shall be lawful to and for any person to contract with any agent intrusted with any goods, or to whom the same may be consigned, for the purchase of any such goods, and to receive the same of and to pay for the same to such agent, and such contract and payment shall be binding upon and good against the owner of such goods, notwithstanding such person shall have notice that the person making such contract, or on whose behalf such contract is made, is an agent; provided such contract or payment be made in the usual and ordinary course of business, and that such person shall not, when such contract is entered into or payment made, have notice that such agent is not authorized to sell the same, or to receive the said purchase-money:" And that advances on the security of goods and merchandize have become an usual and ordinary course of business, and it is expedient and necessary that reasonable and safe facilities should be afforded thereto, and that the same protection and validity should be extended to bond fide advances upon goods and merchandize as by the said recited Act is given to sales, and that owners intrusting agents with the possession of goods and merchandize, or of documents of title thereto, should in all cases where such owners by the said recited Act or otherwise would be bound by a contract or agreement of sale be in like manner bound by any contract or agreement of pledge or lien for any advances bond fide made on the security thereof: And that much litigation has arisen on the construction of the said recited Act, and the same does not extend to protect exchanges of securities bond fide made, and so much uncertainty exists in respect thereof that it is expedient to alter and amend the same, and to extend the provisions thereof, and to put the law on a clear and certain basis:—

It is Enacted,

I. That from and after the passing of this Act any agent who shall thereafter be intrusted with the possession of goods, or of the documents of title to goods, shall be deemed and taken to be owner of such goods and documents, so far as to give validity to any contract or agreement by way of pledge, lien, or security bond fide made by any person with such agent so intrusted as aforesaid, as well for any original loan, advance, or payment made upon the security of such goods or documents, as also for any further or continuing advance in respect thereof, and such contract or agreement shall be binding upon and good against the owner of such goods, and all other persons interested therein, notwithstanding the person claiming such pledge or lien may have had notice that the person with whom such contract or agreement is made is only an agent.

II. That where any such contract or agreement for pledge, lien, or security shall be made in consideration of the delivery or transfer to such agent of any other goods or merchandize, or document of title, or negotiable security, upon which the person so delivering up the same had at the time a valid and available lien and security for or in respect of a previous advance by virtue of some contract or agreement made with such agent, such contract and agreement, if bond fide on the part of the person with whom the same may be made, shall be deemed to be a contract made in consideration of an advance within the true intent and meaning of this Act, and shall be as valid and effectual, to all intents and purposes, and to the same extent, as if the consideration for the same had been a bond fide present advance of money: Provided always, that the lien acquired under such last-mentioned contract or agreement upon the goods or documents deposited in exchange shall not exceed the value at the time of the goods and merchandize which, or the documents of title to which, or the negotiable security which shall be delivered up and exchanged.

III. Provided and enacted, That this Act, and every matter and thing herein contained, shall be deemed and construed to give validity to such contracts and agreements only, and to protect only such loans, advances, and exchanges, as shall be made bond fide, and without notice that the agent making such contracts or agreements as aforesaid has not authority to make the same, or is acting mala fide in respect thereof against the owner of such goods and merchandize; and nothing herein contained shall be construed to extend to or protect any lien or pledge for or in respect of any antecedent debt, owing from any agent to any person with or to whom such lien or pledge shall be given, nor to authorize any agent intrusted as aforesaid in deviating from any express orders or authority received from the owner; but that, for the purpose and to the intent of protecting all such bond fide loans, advances, and exchanges as aforesaid, (though made with notice of such agent not being the owner, but without any notice of the agent's acting without authority,) and to no further or other intent or purpose, such contract or agreement as aforesaid shall be binding on the owner and all other persons interested in such goods.

IV. That any bill of lading, India warrant, dock warrant, warehouse keeper's certificate, warrant, or order for the delivery of goods, or any other document used in the ordinary course of business as proof of the possession or controul of goods, or authorizing or purporting to authorize, either by indorsement or by delivery, the possessor of such document to transfer or receive goods thereby represented, shall be deemed and taken to be a document of title within the meaning of this Act; and any agent intrusted as aforesaid, and possessed of any such document of title, whether derived immediately from the owner of such goods, or obtained by reason of such agent's having been intrusted with the possession of the goods, or of any other document of title thereto, shall be deemed and taken to have been intrusted with the possession of the goods represented by such document of title as aforesaid, and all contracts pledging or giving a lien upon such document of title as aforesaid shall be deemed and taken to be respectively pledges of and liens upon the goods to which the same relates; and such agent shall be deemed to be possessed of such goods or documents, whether the same shall be in his actual custody, or shall be held by any other person subject to his controul or for him or on his behalf; and where any loan or advance shall be bond fide made to any agent intrusted with and in possession of any such goods or documents of title as aforesaid, on the faith of any contract or agreement in writing to consign, deposit, transfer, or deliver such goods or documents of title as aforesaid, and such goods or documents of title shall actually be received by the person making such loan or advance, without notice that such agent was not authorized to make such pledge or security, every such loan or advance shall be deemed and taken to be a loan or advance on the security of such goods or documents of title within the meaning of this Act, though such goods or documents of title shall not actually be received by the person making such loan or advance till the period subsequent thereto; and any contract or agreement, whether made direct with such agent as aforesaid, or with any clerk or other person on his behalf, shall be deemed a contract or agreement with such agent; and any payment made, whether by money or bills of exchange, or other negotiable security, shall be deemed and taken to be an advance within the meaning of this Act; and an agent in possession as aforesaid of such goods or documents shall be taken, for the purposes of this Act, to have been intrusted therewith by the owner thereof, unless the contrary can be shewn in evidence.

v. Provided and enacted, That nothing herein contained shall lessen, vary, alter, or affect the civil responsibility of an agent for any breach of duty or contract, or non-fulfilment of his orders or authority in respect of any such contract, agreement, lien, or pledge as aforesaid.

vi. Provided and enacted, That if any agent intrusted as aforesaid shall, contrary to or without the authority of his principal in that behalf, for his own benefit and in violation of good faith, make any consignment, deposit, transfer, or delivery of any goods or documents of title so intrusted to him as aforesaid, as and by way of a pledge, lien, or security; or shall, contrary to or without such authority, for his own benefit and in violation of good faith, accept any advance on the faith of any contract or agreement to consign, deposit, transfer, or deliver such goods or documents of title as aforesaid; every such agent shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanour, and being convicted thereof, shall be sentenced to transportation for any term not exceeding fourteen years nor less than seven years, or to suffer such other punishment by fine or imprisonment, or by both, as the Court shall award; and every clerk or other person who shall knowingly and wilfully act and assist in making any such consignment, deposit, transfer, or delivery, or in accepting or procuring such advance as aforesaid, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanour, and being convicted thereof, shall be liable, at the discretion of the Court, to any of the punishments which the Court shall award, as hereinbefore last mentioned: Provided nevertheless, that no such agent shall be liable to any prosecution for consigning, depositing, transferring, or delivering any such goods or documents of title, in case the same shall not be made a security for or subject to the payment of any greater sum of money than the amount which at the time of such consignment, deposit, transfer, or delivery was justly due and owing to such agent from his principal, together with the amount of any bill of exchange drawn by or on account of such principal, and accepted by such agent: Provided also, that the conviction of any such agent so convicted as aforesaid shall not be received in evidence in any action at law or suit in equity against him, and no agent intrusted as aforesaid shall be liable to be convicted by any evidence whatsoever in respect of any act done by him, if he shall, at any time previously to his being indicted for such offence, have disclosed such act, on oath, in consequence of any compulsory process of any court of law or equity in any action, suit, or proceeding which shall have been bond fide instituted by any party aggrieved, or if he shall have disclosed the same in any examination or deposition before any Commissioner of Bankrupt.

vii. Provided and enacted, That nothing herein contained shall prevent such owner as aforesaid from having the right to redeem such goods or documents of title pledged as aforesaid, at any time before such goods shall have been sold, upon repayment of the amount of the lien thereon, or restoration of the securities in respect of which such lien may exist, and upon payment or satisfaction to such agent, if by him required, of any sum of money for or in respect of which such agent would by law be entitled to retain the same goods or documents, or any of them, by way of lien as against such owner, or to prevent the said owner from recovering of and from such person with whom any such goods or documents may have been pledged, or who shall have any such lien thereon as aforesaid, any balance or sum of money remaining in his hands as the produce of the sale of such goods, after deducting the amount of the lien of such person under such contract or agreement as aforesaid: Provided always, that in case of the bankruptcy of any such agent the owner of the goods which shall have been so redeemed by such owner as aforesaid shall, in respect of the sum paid by him on account of such agent for such redemption, be held to have paid such sum for the use of such agent before his bankruptcy, or in case the goods shall not be so redeemed the owner shall be deemed a creditor of such agent for the value of the goods so pledged at the time of the pledge, and shall, if he shall think fit, be entitled in either of such cases to prove for or set off the sum so paid, or the value of such goods, as the case may be.

viii. That in construing this Act the word "person" shall be taken to designate a body corporate or company as well as an individual; and that words in the singular number shall, when necessary to give effect to the intention of the said Act, import also the plural, and vice versa; and words used in the masculine gender shall, when required, be taken to apply to a female as well as a male.

ix. Provided and enacted, That nothing herein contained shall be construed to give validity to or in anywise to affect any contract, agreement, lien, pledge, or other act, matter, or thing made or done before the passing of this Act.

CAP. XLVI.—IRELAND.

AN ACT to amend an Act of the Third and Fourth Years of Her present Majesty, for the Regulation of Municipal Corporations in Ireland.

(1st July 1842.)

ABSTRACT OF THE ENACTMENTS.

1. The Acts 3 & 4 Vict. c. 108, and 3 & 4 Vict. c. 109, shall be deemed to have operation in any borough in which, de facto, burgess lists shall have been revised, a burgess roll made, and the municipal election of the town council been held by barristers appointed by the lord lieutenant.
2. Provision for discontinuing proceedings, questioning elections, &c. under the Act 3 & 4 Vict. c. 108.
3. Removing doubts as to continuation in office of Judges of courts of conscience.—Proviso.
4. Justices of counties at large to which portions of counties of cities, &c. shall have been added, shall exercise jurisdiction as Justices in the portions so added.
5. Interpretation of Act.
6. Act may be altered this session.

By this ACT,

After reciting that by 3 & 4 Vict. c. 108, provision was made for making out on the 5th of September in the first year in which the said Act should come into operation in any borough divided into wards, lists of all persons entitled to be inrolled in the burgess roll according to the provisions of the said Act: And that it is by the said Act also provided, that, on certain days and within certain times specified in the said Act, certain matters should happen and be done with a view to the revision of burgess lists before barristers to be appointed by the lord lieutenant, the making of a burgess roll, and the holding of elections of town councillors, auditors, and assessors before such barristers, in the first year in which the said Act should come into operation in any such borough: And that provision is made by the said Act for the Poor Law Commissioners certifying to the lord lieutenant the day of the making of a rate for the relief of the destitute poor in Ireland in any borough named in the Schedule A. to the said Act annexed, and provision is also made for the lord lieutenant declaring that, upon the day happening next after the expiration of twelve calendar months from the day to be so certified, the said Act should be in force in such borough: And that it is by the said Act also provided, that it should be lawful for the Lord Lieutenant of Ireland, if he should think fit, by the advice of Her Majesty's Privy Council there, to order any convenient day after the said Act should come into operation in any borough for doing the several matters required or authorized by the said Act to happen or to be done on the 5th of September in the first year in which the said Act should come into operation in that borough, instead of the said 5th of September; and it was thereby further provided, that in such case all matters mentioned in such order should be done in the said year on such day as should be mentioned in that behalf in such order, as if the day mentioned in such order had in every instance been mentioned in the said Act instead of the said 5th of September, and not otherwise; and it was further provided, that all things required or authorized by the said Act to happen or to be done on any other day, or within any time from or after any day named in the said Act should be done in the said first year, or such other days and within such other times as should have, in point of time, whether prior or subsequent, the same relation to the day so ordered by the lord lieutenant, instead of the 5th of September, as the days and time mentioned in the said Act had to the said 5th of September, but if any such day should fall on a Sunday, then on the following day; but that no person should be entitled to be inrolled in the burgess roll of any borough in the first year in which the said Act should come into operation in that borough, unless he would have been entitled on the fifth day next before the day so ordered by the lord lieutenant to have his name included in some churchwarden's list, if such list had been made out on the said fifth day next before the day so ordered: And that it is expedient in any borough where lists with a view to the making of a burgess roll have been revised, and a burgess roll has been made, and an election of town councillors has been held before any barrister or barristers appointed for that purpose by the Lord Lieutenant of Ireland, as hereinafter mentioned, that in any such borough the said Act, and all proceedings had with a view to its operation, should have and be in full force and validity, notwithstanding any matters or things required or authorized by the said Act to happen or to be done shall not have happened or shall not have been done on the days or within the times required or authorized by the said Act:—

It is Enacted,

I. That in every case in which in any borough wherein the said Act is now in operation a barrister or barristers (appointed by the Lord Lieutenant of Ireland to revise the lists of burgesses, and to hold the municipal elections in or for such borough, in the first year of the operation of the said Act in such borough,) did revise lists with a view to the making of a Burgess roll for such borough, and did make or cause to be made a book or roll purporting to be a Burgess roll for such borough, and did, by himself or themselves, or his or their lawful deputy or deputies, hold an election of aldermen and town councillors for such borough, in every such case the persons who have been in fact elected aldermen and councillors at such election shall be and shall be deemed and taken to have been duly elected under the provisions of the said Act, at and from the time when such election did in fact take place (of which election the declaration under the hand or hands of the said barrister or barristers, or his or their lawful deputy or deputies, shall be evidence), and that all matters and things required by the said Act to happen or to be done previously to the first election of town councillors in any borough shall be deemed and taken to have happened and to have been done in the borough in which such election was so held previously to such election, and that, from the time when such election was so held in such borough, all the provisions of the said Act, and of another Act, 3 & 4 Vict. c. 109, intitled, 'An Act to annex certain Parts of certain Counties of Cities to adjoining Counties, to make further Provision for Compensation of Officers in Boroughs, to limit the Borough Rate, and to continue for a limited Time "An Act to restrain the Alienation of Corporate Property in Ireland,"' shall have operation and shall apply, and shall be deemed and taken to have had operation and to have applied, in and to such borough in which such election was so held, and in and to the county or counties at large to which any part or district of such borough shall or might be added by virtue of the said last-mentioned Act; and that from the said time when such election was so held in such borough all other elections, and all acts, deeds, contracts, proceedings, rules, orders, judgments, sentences, convictions, awards, presentments, warrants, executions, matters, and things heretofore bond fide made, directed, authorized, done, or performed by or under any mayor, town council, alderman, or councillor so elected and acting bond fide under the said first-recited Act, or in or by any court, or by any Judge, assistant barrister, recorder, grand jury, petit jury, arbitrator, town clerk, treasurer, churchwarden, or any officer, functionary, or person whatsoever, shall have and shall be deemed and taken to have had the same force and validity which they would have or have had if such election of aldermen and town councillors had been duly held, and the several matters and things required or authorized by the said first-mentioned Act had duly happened and been done, according to the provisions, intent, and meaning of the said first-mentioned Act, and no other force or validity.

II. That any proceeding commenced before the passing of this Act in the Court of Queen's Bench (whether the same be still pending there, or a writ of error shall have been brought upon any judgment therein,) for the purpose of questioning the validity of any title to any corporate office, on the ground either that a valid election of town councillors was held, or that a valid election of town councillors was not held, in any borough under the said last-mentioned Act, shall be discontinued immediately upon the passing of this Act, upon payment of the costs incurred up to that time to the party in such proceeding whose title was so questioned, such costs to be taxed between party and party; and the amount of such costs, and of the other costs incurred in such proceeding by the party paying the same, shall be paid to such last-mentioned party by the treasurer of said borough out of the borough fund.

And after reciting that it was among other things enacted by the hereinbefore recited Act, 3 & 4 Vict. that from and after the passing of the said Act all the powers, authorities, and jurisdictions of any existing court for the recovery of small debts, commonly called the Court of Conscience, in every borough, whether established by usage, statute, or otherwise, should continue in the same manner as if the said Act had not been passed, until the lord lieutenant should think proper to determine the same: And that doubts have arisen, in some cases, with respect to the continuance in office of the Judges and other officers of such courts respectively, and it is expedient that such doubts should be removed;—

It is Declared and Enacted,

III. That every person who at the time of the passing of the said Act was a president or Judge or other officer of any such court shall be deemed to have continued in such office and to have been such officer, and shall continue in such office and be and be deemed to be such officer, and entitled to all the fees and emoluments thereof, until or unless such court shall be determined or discontinued, or have been determined or discontinued, by order of the said lord lieutenant, as by the said Act provided, in all cases where the said recited Act has not otherwise provided for the performance of the duties of such president or Judge or other officer of such Court of Conscience: Provided always, that upon the determination or discontinuance of any such Court of Conscience under or by virtue of the said Act all and every of the powers, authorities, and jurisdictions of the president, or Judge or Judges, and other officer or officers of such court respectively, shall wholly cease and determine, save only as to the execution of any decree or decrees or order or orders of such court theretofore lawfully made.

And after reciting that doubts have arisen with respect to the extent of the jurisdiction of the Justices assigned or hereafter to be assigned to keep the peace in and for the respective counties at large to which any portion, place, or precinct has been or hereafter may be added by virtue of the said recited Acts or either of them;—

It is Enacted,

IV. That from and after the passing of this Act the Justices assigned or hereafter to be assigned to keep the peace in and for any county at large to which any part or district of any county of a city or county of a town shall have been added by virtue of the said Acts or either of them shall exercise the jurisdiction of Justices of the Peace in and for such part or district, as fully as by law they and each of them can or ought to do in and for such county at large.

V. That in the construction of this Act the words "borough" and "lord lieutenant" shall have the like meaning as it is provided that the same shall have in the said first-recited Act, and that, in describing any person or thing, any word importing the singular number shall be construed to mean also several persons or things respectively, unless there shall be something in the subject or context repugnant to such construction.

VI. That this Act may be amended or repealed by any Act to be passed in this present session of Parliament.

And after reciting that wheat, barley, rye, and oats are liable to decrease while in the warehouse by natural causes, and it is expedient that the duties should not be charged upon certain deficiency arising from such causes;—

It is Enacted,

LIII. That in respect of any wheat or barley, or any rye, or any oats, lodged in warehouses without payment of duty on the first importation thereof, the following allowances for natural waste shall be made upon the exportation thereof, or upon the entry thereof for home consumption; (that is to say,)

In respect of all wheat, barley, and rye, except as hereinafter provided, which has been in warehouse one month and less than three months, there shall be allowed one and a half per centum :

And in respect of all wheat, barley, and rye, except as hereinafter provided, which has been in warehouse twelve months and upwards, there shall be allowed three per centum :

In respect of oats, except as hereinafter provided, which has been in warehouse one month and less than three months, there shall be allowed two and a half per centum :

In respect of oats, except as hereinafter provided, which have been in warehouse six months and less than twelve months, there shall be allowed four and a half per centum :

And in respect of oats, except as hereinafter provided, which have been in warehouse twelve months and upwards, there shall be allowed five per centum :

Provided nevertheless, that only half the above allowances hereby directed to be made on wheat and barley and oats respectively shall be made upon Spanish wheat and barley and oats respectively, and upon wheat and barley kiln-dried abroad respectively, and that no such allowance shall be made in respect of rye being kiln-dried : Provided also, that no such allowance shall be made unless there shall be an actual deficiency in the quantity of such wheat, rye, barley, and oats originally warehoused.

And after reciting that by one other of the said Acts, 3 & 4 Will. 4, intituled, 'An Act to grant certain Bounties and Allowances of Customs,' a bounty is allowed upon sugar equal in quality to double refined sugar, and it is expedient that the Committee of Sugar Refiners should be required to provide standard sample loaves of refined sugar made upon the patent principle, equal in quality to double refined sugar, for the guidance of the officers of Customs, in their examination of such sugar for the high bounty ;—

It is Enacted,

LIV. That there shall be provided, by and at the expense of the Committee of Sugar Refiners in London, and in like manner, by and at the expense of the Committee of Merchants in Dublin, as many loaves or lumps of sugar made upon the patent principle, and equal in quality to double refined sugar, as the Commissioners of Customs shall think necessary, which loaves or lumps, when approved of by the said Commissioners, shall be deemed and taken to be standard samples, one of which loaves or lumps shall be lodged with the said Committees respectively, and one other with such person or persons as the said Commissioners shall direct, for the purpose of comparing therewith sugar in respect of which bounty is claimed, prepared after the patent principle, and equal in quality to double refined sugar, and fresh standard samples shall in like manner be again furnished by such Committees respectively, and in like manner lodged, whenever it may be deemed expedient by the said Commissioners : Provided always, that no loaf or lump of sugar shall be deemed to be a proper sample loaf or lump of sugar equal to double refined unless it be a loaf or lump complete, nor unless the same shall have been prepared after the patent principle.

LV. That in case any sugar which shall be entered in order to obtain the bounty as-sugar equal in quality to double refined sugar, and made upon the patent principle, shall, on examination by the proper officer, be found to be of a quality not equal to such standard sample, all sugar so entered shall be forfeited, and shall and may be seized.

And after reciting that by the said last-mentioned Act certain drawbacks of the duties payable on the importation of thrown silk are allowed upon the exportation of silk goods manufactured in the United Kingdom, and also certain other drawbacks of such duties are allowed in respect of all deals and timber therein described, used in the mines of tin, lead, or copper in the counties of Devon or Cornwall, or in Ireland, and it is expedient to repeal such drawback ;—

It is Enacted,

LVI. That no such drawback shall be allowed upon any such silk goods the duty whereon shall have been paid after the passing of this Act, nor upon any such deals or timber the duty whereon shall have been paid on or after the 10th of October 1842.

And after reciting that by 3 & 4 Will. 4. c. 59, it is enacted, that the master of every ship bound from certain British possessions shall, before any goods be laden therein, deliver to the collector or comptroller or other proper officer an entry upwards under his hand of the destination of such ship, stating her name, country, and tonnage, and if British the port of registry, the name and country of the master, the country of the owners, the number of the crew, and how many are of the country of such ship ; and that if any goods be laden on board any ship before such entry be made the master of such ship shall forfeit the sum of 50*l*. ; and that before such ship departs the master shall bring and deliver to the collector or comptroller or other proper officer a content in writing under his hand of the goods laden, and the names of the respective shippers and consignees of the goods, and the marks and numbers of the packages or parcels of the same, and shall make and subscribe a declaration to the truth of such content as far as any of such particulars can be known to him ; and that the master of every ship bound from such possessions, whether in ballast or laden, shall before departure come before the collector and comptroller or other proper officer, and answer upon oath all such questions concerning the ship and the cargo, if any, and the crew and the voyage, as shall be demanded of him by such officer ; and that thereupon the collector and comptroller or other proper officer, if such ship be laden, shall make out and give to the master a certificate of the clearance of such ship for her intended voyage, containing an account of the total quantities of the several sorts of goods laden therein, or a certificate of her clearance in ballast, as the case may be; and that if any ship shall depart without such clearance, or if the master shall deliver a false content, or shall not truly answer the questions demanded of him, he shall forfeit the sum of 100*l*.: And that it is further enacted, that no goods shall be stated in such certificate of clearance of any ship from any such possessions to be the produce thereof, unless such goods shall have been expressly stated so to be in the entry outwards of the same; and that all goods not expressly stated in such certificate of clearance to be the produce of such possessions shall, at the place of importation in any other such possession, or in the United Kingdom, be deemed to be of foreign production: And that it is also enacted, that the person entering any such goods shall deliver to the collector or comptroller or other proper officer a bill of the entry thereof, fairly written in words at length, containing the name of the exporter or importer, and of the ship, and of the master, and of the place to or from which bound, and of the place within the port where the goods are to be laden or unladen, and the particulars of the quantity and quality of the goods, and the packages containing the same, and the marks and numbers on the packages, and setting forth whether such goods be the produce of the said possessions or not; and such person shall at the same time pay down all duties due upon the goods; and the collector or comptroller or other proper officer shall thereupon grant their warrant for the lading or unlading of such goods;—

It is Enacted,

LVII. That so much of the said Act as is herein above recited shall from and after the 1st of January 1843 extend to all goods entered for exportation, and to all vessels clearing outwards, in any of the British possessions abroad, except the territories subject to the government of the presidencies of Fort William in Bengal, Fort St. George, and Bombay.

LVIII. Provided and enacted, That where there is no collector or comptroller or officer of Customs at the port or place of shipment of such goods, that then the principal civil officer in the service of Her Majesty at such place, or his sufficient representative, shall be deemed and taken to be the proper officer for the performance of all such duties with respect to such goods as by the said Act are required to be performed by the collector or other officer or officers of Customs.

LIX. That all gold and silver plate, not being battered, which shall be imported from foreign parts after the commencement of this Act, and sold, exchanged, or exposed to sale within the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, shall be of the respective standards now required for any ware, vessel, plate, or manufacture of gold or silver wrought or made in England; and that no gold or silver plate so to be imported as aforesaid, not being battered, shall be sold, exchanged, or exposed to sale within the said United Kingdom until the same shall have been assayed, stamped, and marked, either in England, Scotland, or Ireland, in the same manner as any ware, vessel, plate, or manufacture of gold or silver wrought or made in England, Scotland, or Ireland respectively is or are now by law required to be assayed, stamped, and marked; and that every goldsmith, silversmith, or other person whatsoever, who shall sell or expose to sale in England, Scotland, or Ireland any gold or silver plate so to be imported as aforesaid, and not being battered, before the same shall have been so assayed, stamped, and marked as aforesaid, shall be subject and liable to the like penalties and forfeitures in all respects, and to be recoverable in the same manner, as the penalties and forfeitures now by law imposed upon goldsmiths and silversmiths selling, exchanging, or exposing to sale in England, Scotland, or Ireland respectively any ware or manufacture of gold or silver plate made or wrought in England, Scotland, or Ireland respectively, and not assayed, stamped, and marked as required by law: Provided always, that no article or ware of gold or silver so to be imported as aforesaid shall be liable to be assayed, stamped, or marked as aforesaid which would not be liable to be assayed, stamped, or marked if it had been wrought or made in England.

LX. That in order that gold and silver plate so imported as aforesaid may be assayed, stamped, and marked, it shall and may be lawful for any person to send the same to any assay office in the United Kingdom at which gold and silver plate is now by law required to be assayed, and when so sent it shall be assayed, tested, stamped, and marked in such and the same manner, and be subject to such and the same charges, other than stamp duty, as if the same were British plate by law assayable in such office; and the wardens and officers in each such assay offices, and the persons employed by them, shall have such and the same powers of assaying, touching, testing, marking, cutting, breaking, or defacing such gold and silver plate so sent to be assayed as are now by law exercisable by such wardens, officers, and other persons in respect of gold and plate now by law required to be assayed in such assay offices.

And after reciting that by 9 Geo. 4. c. 93. provisions are made for ascertaining and taking, in manner therein mentioned, the prices of brown or muscovado sugar the produce of the British possessions in America: And that it is expedient that the said provisions should extend and be applicable to brown or muscovado sugar the produce of the British possessions within the limits of the East India Company's charter;—

That goods the produce or manufacture of the islands of Guernsey, Jersey, Alderney, or Sark, when imported from such islands into the British possessions in America or the Mauritius, shall be admitted to entry upon payment of the same duties as are payable upon the like goods the produce or manufacture of the United Kingdom or of any of the said possessions, upon production to the principal officer of Customs at the port of importation of the proofs now required by law that such goods are the production or manufacture of the islands aforesaid.

And after reciting the hereinbefore recited provisoes contained in the said Possessions Act, which provide that no greater proportion of the duties imposed by that Act shall be charged upon any article which is subject also to duty under any of the Acts therein referred to, and subject also to duty under any colonial law, than the amount, if any, by which the duty charged by the said Possessions Act shall exceed such other duties, and that the full amount of the duties mentioned in the said

Possessions Act, whether on account of such former Acts, or on account of such colonial law, or on account of the said Possessions Act, should be levied and recovered and received under the regulations and by the means and powers of the said Possessions Act, have been understood and acted on in divers different senses in the several British possessions in America and the Mauritius, and in some of the aforesaid possessions certain duties have been imposed by the colonial legislatures or other authorities having the power to impose duties, which duties have been expressly directed by the colonial Acts or ordinances imposing the same, to be in addition to or over and above the duties imposed by the said Possessions Act, and in these and others of the aforesaid possessions the duties respectively imposed upon articles by the said Possessions Act, and by the colonial Acts and ordinances in such possessions, have, notwithstanding the aforesaid provisos, been collected in full without any such abatement as in the said provisos is contemplated: And that it is expedient that such collection in full of the said imperial and colonial duties should be held to be good in law, notwithstanding the aforesaid provisos: And that doubts have been entertained whether the duties imposed upon the importation of goods, wares, or merchandize into the West Indies by the said Possessions Act are, under the provisions of that Act, leviable upon the like goods, wares, and merchandize imported into the Mauritius from the United Kingdom: and that, notwithstanding such doubts, the aforesaid duties have been levied upon goods, wares, and merchandize so imported into the Mauritius from the United Kingdom, and it is expedient that the levying of the same should be held good in law:—

It is Enacted,

XVI. That from and after the passing of this Act no personal action, suit, or other proceeding shall be prosecuted or commenced against any officer of Her Majesty's Customs, or any officer or other person authorized by the legislature or other proper authorities of any of the aforesaid British possessions, for or in respect of such officer or person having levied duties imposed by the said Possessions Act upon the importation of any article in full, without making any deduction therefrom in respect of duties imposed by any colonial law or ordinance upon the same article, or for or in respect of such officer or other person having levied duties imposed upon the importation of any article by any colonial law or ordinance in full, without making any abatement or deduction therefrom in respect of the duty imposed by the Possessions Act upon the same article; and that no personal action, suit, or other proceeding shall be prosecuted or commenced against any officer of Her Majesty's Customs, or any other officer or other person empowered by the proper authorities to collect duties in the Mauritius, for or in respect of such officer or other person having levied the like duties upon the importation of any goods, wares, or merchandize into the Mauritius from the United Kingdom as are imposed by the said Possessions Act upon the importation of goods, wares, or merchandize into the West Indies; and if any action or suit, or other proceeding whatsoever, shall be prosecuted or commenced against any officer of Customs, or other officer or person as aforesaid, by reason of anything done as aforesaid, it shall be lawful for the defendant in any such action or suit or other proceeding as aforesaid to apply to the Court in which such action shall be brought during the sitting of such Court, or to any Judge of such Court during vacation, for stay of proceedings, and such Court and such Judge respectively shall stay such proceedings accordingly; and all payments which may have been made in respect of the duties so levied in full, or without abatement or deduction as aforesaid, or in respect of such duties so levied upon the importation of goods, wares, and merchandize into the Mauritius as aforesaid, shall be held to have been good, and shall not be recoverable at law from any person or persons who may have received the same.

XVII. That in any British possession in America in which the imperial duties imposed by the said Possessions Act and the colonial duties imposed by the laws of such possession have both been customarily levied in full without making any deduction from the imperial duties in respect of the colonial duties, or from the colonial duties in respect of the imperial duties, it shall be lawful, from and after the passing of this Act, for the officers of the Customs and other officers duly authorized to continue so to levy in full such imperial and colonial duties respectively during the continuance of the said Possessions Act, anything in the said Possessions Act contained in anywise notwithstanding.

XVIII. That this Act may be amended or repealed by any Act to be passed in this present session of Parliament.

It is Enacted,

1. That it shall be lawful for the Justices of the Peace of any county, and for the mayor, aldermen, and burgesses of any borough which is within the provisions of an Act, 5 & 6 Will. 4. c. 76, intituled, 'An Act to provide for the Regulation of Municipal Corporations in England and Wales,' or of any charter granted in pursuance of that Act, or of any Act passed for the amendment thereof, to agree, by their council, jointly or severally, with the Justices of the Peace of any one or more counties, or with the mayor, aldermen, and burgesses of any one or more such boroughs by their councils respectively, for the contribution and payment of any sum of money by either or any of the parties to any such agreement towards altering, enlarging, building, rebuilding, repairing, or improving any prison to be used as a district prison under the provisions hereinafter contained, and toward the expenses of the maintenance, safe custody, and punishment of the offenders committed thereunto, including their committal, prosecution, and conveyance to and from prison, and toward the expenses of providing and maintaining a court house and necessary buildings, and defraying the other charges of the court at which they shall be tried, including all salaries to be paid by either or any of the contracting parties; and it shall be lawful for any Justice of the Peace acting within his jurisdiction for any county or borough which is one of the parties to the agreement to commit to such prison all persons who shall be by law liable to be committed to prison for any act or omission done or omitted, or charged to be done or omitted, within the district set out or any borough specified in the agreement; and every person committed to any such prison may be tried, sentenced, and punished in like manner as if such prison were a gaol belonging to the county or borough from which such person was committed; and all the provisions of 5 Geo. 4. c. 85, as amended by 6 & 7 Will. 4. c. 106, shall extend, as nearly as may be, to all such agreements, and to the trial and punishment of such offenders, and to all acts necessary for such trial, or consequent thereon, subject to the provisions hereinafter contained.

II. That so much of any Act as enacts that any such agreement shall be made by the council of any borough at a quarterly meeting of the council shall be repealed: Provided always, that nothing in this Act shall affect any contract entered into before the passing of this Act between any Justices and the council of any borough.

III. That all monies to be paid under any agreement authorized by this Act, for building, rebuilding, repairing, or enlarging any gaol, house of correction, court house, or other necessary buildings as aforesaid, shall be raised in the same manner and subject to the same conditions as monies to be raised by any Justices, or by the council of any borough, for building, rebuilding, or enlarging any gaol or house of correction under their management respectively; and all monies to be paid toward the current annual expenses of such gaol, house of correction, court house, or other necessary buildings as aforesaid, and toward defraying all other charges incurred by the contracting parties, or either or any of them, in carrying such agreement into effect, shall be raised in the same manner and subject to the same conditions as monies to be raised by the Justices of any county, or the council of any borough, for defraying the ordinary current expenditure of their several gaols and houses of correction.

IV. That it shall be lawful for the Justices of the Peace of any county in General or Quarter Sessions assembled, due notice having been previously given according to the practice of the said sessions, to take into consideration the expediency of making any such agreement as aforesaid with any of such parties aforesaid, and, if the Justices then and there assembled shall resolve that it is expedient that such agreement should be made, to appoint not less than three and not more than five Justices for the said county to be a committee for treating with any committee appointed by any other of the parties aforesaid, for the purposes aforesaid, and from time to time, at such Quarter Sessions, or at any adjournment thereof, to fill up any vacancy in the said committee by death, resignation, or otherwise; and every Justice so appointed shall continue to be a member of the said committee for the period hereinafter specified, provided that he so long continue a Justice of the Peace for such county.

V. That it shall be lawful for the council of any such borough, at a special meeting to be called for that purpose, to take into consideration the expediency of making any such agreement as aforesaid with any of such parties as aforesaid, and, if the council shall resolve that it is expedient that such agreement should be made, to appoint not less than three and not more than five Justices for such borough to be a committee for treating with any committee appointed by any other of the parties aforesaid for the purposes aforesaid, and from time to time at a quarterly meeting of the council to fill up any vacancy in the committee by death or resignation or otherwise; and every Justice so appointed shall continue to be a member of such committee for the period hereinafter specified, provided that he shall so long continue a Justice of the Peace for such borough.

VI. That the committees so appointed shall be deemed to represent severally each of the contracting parties, and shall meet forthwith and form one joint committee for the despatch of business, and, due consideration being had of the relative position of the parties, the population, the amount of crime, the distance from any existing gaol, and all other matters bearing upon the subject of inquiry, shall set out the district or districts of such county or counties which it would be in their judgment expedient to unite together, or to any one or more such boroughs, for all or any of the purposes of this Act, and shall draw up an agreement touching the same, which shall distinctly set forth the extent to which the contracting parties intend to carry into execution the purposes aforesaid, or any of them, which agreement, when subscribed by the greater number of the Justices severally representing each of the contracting parties, and approved and confirmed as hereinafter directed, shall be binding upon all the said parties to all intents and purposes.

VII. That every such agreement shall specify the place where such prison and other buildings are or are to be situated, and the district of the county or counties which it shall be proposed to unite with any other similar district, or with any one or more boroughs, for the purposes of this Act, the limits of such district being defined, and the area and population of the same, as well as of the several boroughs, being set forth as well as the same may be known; and such agreement shall further specify the number of prisoners for which it is proposed that accommodation should be provided, distinguishing between the numbers to be provided for in the common gaol, in the debtors ward, and in the house of correction respectively; and such agreement shall further specify the proportion in which the expenses of purchasing the site, and of building, finishing, and fitting such prison and such other buildings (if requisite), or of rebuilding or enlarging any such prison or buildings, as the same may be, shall be borne by each of the contracting parties.

VIII. That such agreement shall further state the amount of salaries proposed to be paid annually to the governor, chaplain, and assistant chaplain or assistant chaplains, or medical officers, matron, and such other officers and assistants as may be therein specified; and such agreement may further state the sum (over and above the outlay for ordinary repairs and expenditure) which the committee will recommend that the contracting parties should put annually at the disposal of the committee, as a reserve fund for internal improvements or to meet extraordinary emergencies; and such agreement shall further state the proportion in which such salaries, such reserve fund, and such expenses as may be incurred in respect of the ordinary repairs of the said prisons and other buildings, and the government and discipline of the said prison, the maintenance, management, and custody of prisoners, and all other ordinary and current expenses of the said prison, shall be apportioned on each of the contracting parties, also the period of time, not less than three years, for which the first agreement for this last-mentioned proportion shall endure: Provided always, that at the expiration of such period the agreement shall nevertheless continue in force until altered and renewed upon such terms and in such manner as is hereinafter directed.

IX. That wherever any agreement shall have been so entered into and signed, the joint committee shall report the agreement for approval to the General or Quarter Session of the Peace of every such county holden next after the making thereof, and to a special meeting of the council of every such borough to be convened for the purpose, and shall deliver to the court and the council respectively a duplicate of the agreement, to be filed by the clerk of the peace and by the town clerk of each of the said parties respectively, to be by them kept with the records of the several parties aforesaid: Provided always, that no such agreement shall be valid until the same shall have been approved by the said several parties in manner aforesaid, and until the same shall have been confirmed by Her Majesty as hereinafter directed: Provided also, that if such agreement be not so approved it shall be lawful for the said contracting parties severally to refer the same back for re-consideration to the said joint committee, after which the same shall be again reported, until finally approved and confirmed as aforesaid, or until any of the parties shall break off the agreement.

x. That each of the said parties shall forthwith cause such agreement, if by them approved, to be laid before one of Her Majesty's principal Secretaries of State; and in all cases in which the prisoners, or any part thereof, committed to the said prison, are to be sent forthwith before the Recorder of any borough, such borough being one of the contracting parties, the agreement shall also set forth the sum which, in the judgment of the joint committee, ought to be paid by every such county to the Recorder as an additional salary in respect of the additional duties thereby imposed on him; and the Justices of the said county, if the agreement shall be approved by them, shall forthwith cause an undertaking on the part of the said county to pay the same to the Recorder in that behalf, to be laid, with such agreement, before the Secretary of State; and it shall be lawful for Her Majesty, if she shall think fit, by the advice of her Privy Council, to approve and confirm such agreement by order in council, and to appoint that such prison, when certified by one of Her Majesty's principal Secretaries of State as fit for the reception of prisoners, shall thenceforth be used as a common gaol for such debtors as shall have been in the said agreement specified, and as a common gaol and house of correction for persons duly confined therein in respect of any offence committed within such district or borough aforesaid.

xi. That as soon as any such agreement shall have been approved by all the contracting parties, and confirmed by Her Majesty, with the advice aforesaid, the said joint committee shall re-assemble forthwith for the purpose of carrying the said agreement into execution, and shall elect a chairman, who in all cases of an equality of voices shall have a casting vote, and shall make regulations with respect to their future meetings, and the mode of convening the same, and shall appoint a fit person to act as clerk to the said committee, and shall fix the salary of the said clerk, such salary, until the first meeting of the court of gaol session hereinafter provided, to be paid out of and to be reckoned part of the capital provided for building, rebuilding, or enlarging the prison, and afterwards to be paid and reckoned as part of the current expenditure: Provided always, that such salary shall in no case exceed the sum by the said agreement fixed as the salary of the clerk of gaol sessions: Provided also, that it shall not be lawful for such committee to do any act unless there shall be present at such meeting at least one Justice representing each of the contracting parties.

xii. That all powers given by the said recited Acts, 4 Geo. 4. and 5 Geo. 4. for purchasing, selling, conveying, and taking lands and other premises for the purposes therein specified, and for ascertaining the value, and for the conveyance, and for the application of the compensation for the same, and all other provisions of the said Acts relating thereunto, shall, as far as may not be inconsistent with the provisions of this Act, extend to all purchases to be made under and by virtue of the same; and all things by either of the said last-recited Acts directed to be done at any General or Quarter Session of the Peace, in relation to any of the matters hereinbefore last mentioned, may be done, in respect of any purchases to be made under or by virtue of this Act, by the said joint committee, at special meetings to be called for the purpose, subject to the provisions of this Act; and all powers which the Justices of any county possess by virtue of the said last-recited Acts, or by any other Act relating to any of the matters aforesaid, may, in respect of the like matters in relation to the said prison, be exercised by the Justices constituting such committee, in the same manner and with the same authority as if the said last-mentioned Justices were empowered to act generally in the commission of the peace for the county or borough in which such powers may be required.

xiii. That the said committee shall contract with proper persons for the execution of such works as aforesaid, and shall superintend the due performance of the same: Provided always, that before any such works shall be begun, or any contract finally made for executing the same, the plan of such works, together with the estimates of the expense of completing the same, shall be submitted by the committee to the several contracting parties, and also to one of Her Majesty's Principal Secretaries of State, and shall have been approved by the several parties in General or Quarter Session, or in special council, and by the Secretary of State.

xiv. That the expenses of purchasing the said land or other premises, and of executing such works as aforesaid, shall be from time to time rendered in account by the said committee, and shall be duly audited and certified to the several contracting parties in General or Quarter Session, or in special council, by such auditor or auditors as shall be for that purpose appointed by the several contracting parties.

xv. That the said committee shall appoint for the said prison a governor, a chaplain, being a clergyman in priest's orders not having any other cure of souls, also an assistant chaplain or assistant chaplains if it shall be so provided in the original agreement, a surgeon or medical officer, a matron, and such other officers, assistants, and servants as may be necessary for the service and discipline of the said prison, and may suspend or dismiss all or any of them, and, in all those cases in which the salaries to be paid to any of the said officers of the prison shall not have been fixed by the agreement, shall fix the same as shall seem best in their discretion.

xvi. That when any prison, or a sufficient part thereof, shall have been fitted and completed for the reception of prisoners, and proper officers shall have been appointed for the management thereof, the committee shall certify, by writing under the hands of three or more of them, to one of Her Majesty's principal Secretaries of State, that such prison, or a sufficient part thereof, is so fitted and completed, and that such officers have been appointed; and upon such certificate it shall be lawful for the said secretary, by an order in writing addressed to the several clerks of the peace of every county and of every borough, being one of the contracting parties, and to the clerk of the said committee, to direct that the prison may thenceforth be used as a prison under this Act, and that all such debtors as are specified in the said agreement, and all prisoners at that time confined in the common gaol or house of correction of any borough, being one of the contracting parties, may (if requisite) be forthwith removed by the keeper of such gaol or house of correction to the said prison; and all prisoners who, if originally committed to the said prison, might have been tried and sentenced at the sessions for any such borough, under the provisions of this Act, may be removed from any gaol in which they may be then confined to the said prison, for the purpose of such trial and such sentence as aforesaid.

xvii. That the Justices constituting such joint committee shall from time to time hold a court of gaol sessions for every such prison, and such court shall possess and exercise all the powers and authority respecting such prison, and all matters relating thereto, which by any Act are vested in the Court of General or Quarter Sessions of the Peace for any county with respect to any gaol or house of correction belonging to such county; and where by any Act anything is ordered to be done at any General or Quarter Session, or at an adjournment thereof, respecting any gaol or house of correction therein specified, then such things may be done with respect to such prison at such gaol session, or at any adjournment thereof, or at one or more subsequent gaol sessions, in such ways and with such public notices as in the said Acts they are ordered or directed to be done by the General or Quarter Sessions, or at an adjournment thereof: Provided always, that nothing herein contained shall be deemed to authorize any such court of gaol sessions, or such Justices of the Peace, to do any act or make any order touching the building, rebuilding, enlarging, or altering such prison, or the borrowing or the levying of any sum of money by rate or otherwise, the granting of any annuity, or fixing any salaries, or the creating any offices, except as to all the above specified matters in such cases as are herein especially provided for, or to exercise any authority whatever in the government or management of the said prison contrary to the provisions of this Act.

XVIII. That in the case of every prison built, rebuilt, or enlarged in pursuance of any such agreement, such prison and place in which the court of gaol sessions shall be holden as herein provided shall, for all purposes relative to the jurisdiction of such gaol sessions, and of the Justices of the Peace empowered to act in the government of the said prison, be deemed to be within the county and borough to which the ordinary powers of such Justices respectively extend.

That as soon as the clerk of the said committee shall have received the order in writing of the Secretary of State as aforesaid, he shall summon the members of the committee to meet in gaol session, as soon as conveniently may be, at some place in or near to such prison, and the clerk of the said committee shall act as clerk of the court of gaol sessions.

XX. That the clerk of the gaol sessions, on receiving a precept commanding him so to do, signed by any two of the said committee, shall summon the committee to meet in a court of gaol sessions, by a notice to be published at least twice in some public newspaper usually circulated throughout the district in which such prison shall be situated, and also by notice in writing to be sent to each member of the committee, which notice shall declare the day, hour, and place at which such court is to be holden; and if the court of gaol sessions shall be dissolved without adjournment, or shall adjourn for a longer time than three calendar months, the clerk shall, by a like notice to be issued of his proper authority without any precept in that behalf, summon a court of gaol sessions to be holden within three calendar months next after such dissolution or last adjournment.

XXI. That at every such court of gaol sessions the Justices therein assembled shall appoint the place for holding the gaol session then next ensuing, and in case of no such appointment having been made, the session then next ensuing shall be holden at the same place as the session last immediately preceding, but no such session shall be holden at a greater distance than one mile from the said prison.

XXII. That at the first court of gaol sessions to be holden as aforesaid, and at some ensuing court of gaol sessions, once at least in every quarter of a year, the said committee shall nominate for each of the contracting parties one Justice who shall consent thereunto, being a Justice acting for the county or borough for which he is appointed, and, if a county Justice, residing within the district set out in the agreement aforesaid, and the Justices so appointed shall be visitors of such prison; and the committee shall report the names and places of abode of such visiting Justices to one of Her Majesty's Principal Secretaries of State; and such visiting Justices shall discharge the same duties and exercise the same power and authority in respect of such prison, and all matters relating thereto, as may now be discharged or executed by any visiting Justices appointed in respect of the gaol of any county, save that, instead of reporting to the General Quarter Sessions of the Peace, they shall report to the court of gaol sessions aforesaid.

XXIII. That the said committee shall appoint a treasurer, who shall not be the clerk of the committee; and the treasurer shall receive and pay all monies to be received by or to be disbursed by order of the committee, either in building, rebuilding, or enlarging the prison, or when sitting as a court of gaol sessions, and shall give discharges for the monies received, and apply the same as by the said committee shall be directed, and shall keep a distinct account of such monies received and paid, and shall from time to time, when called upon by the said committee, account, upon oath if required, for all monies so by him received, and deliver in all vouchers respecting the same; and such treasurer shall give such security for faithful performance of his duty as the committee shall direct, and shall receive such salary as shall be directed in the agreement, or, in default thereof, as the committee shall direct.

XXIV. That the accounts kept by the said treasurer, and all other accounts relating to the said prison, except such as are herein otherwise provided for, shall, together with all receipts and vouchers for the same, be examined from time to time by the said committee, and shall be verified, on oath if required, by the several parties keeping and rendering the same, and, if duly allowed by the said committee, shall be signed by the chairman; and the said committee shall cause a balance sheet, setting forth the current expenditure incurred in respect of the said prison, and all other matters authorized by the original agreement between the parties and by the provisions of this Act, to be made out once in every quarter of a year; and the clerk of such gaol sessions shall cause a copy of the said balance sheet, signed by the chairman of the committee, to be forthwith sent to the clerk of the peace of every county, and to the town clerk of every borough, being one of the contracting parties; and every such clerk of the peace and town clerk shall cause the same to be laid before the then next ensuing General or Quarter Sessions of the Peace for the said county and the then next ensuing quarterly meeting of the council of the borough; and such balance sheets, having been so submitted for inspection, shall be filed amongst their respective records by every such clerk of the peace and town clerk respectively.

XXV. That the committee from time to time shall estimate, as correctly as may be, what sum of money will be required for payment of the expenses then already incurred or to be incurred in carrying into effect the provisions of this Act, and shall make an order accordingly; and their clerk shall forthwith send a copy of such order, signed by the chairman, mentioning the sum of money to be paid by virtue thereof, according to the proportions defined by the agreement then in force by each county or borough, being severally contracting parties as aforesaid, to the treasurers of the said parties respectively, which treasurers shall forthwith, out of the monies in their hands, or if those monies shall be insufficient, then so soon as sufficient monies shall come to their hands, pay the sum required to the treasurer of the said committee, and take his receipt for the same, and the receipt of the treasurer of the said committee shall be a sufficient discharge to the treasurer of such county or borough respectively.

XXVI. That it shall be lawful for the Justices of the Peace of any county, and for the council of any borough, being parties so contracting as aforesaid, by their several committees appointed by them in General or Quarter Session or quarterly meeting respectively for that purpose, to inspect at the said prison all books, papers, accounts, vouchers, and other documents relating to the prison, and to the government and management thereof.

XXVII. That all reports and statements directed by the said recited Acts of 4 & 5 Geo. 4, to be made to the General or Quarter Sessions shall be transmitted, on or before the first days of January, April, July, and October, to the clerk of the said gaol sessions, and be by him laid before the Court at the gaol session then next ensuing.

XXVIII. That the chairman of every court of gaol sessions holden next after the 1st of October in each year shall, within fourteen days after the determination of such sessions, or any adjournment thereof, sent to one of Her Majesty's Principal Secretaries of State such account of proceedings, and such copies of rules and regulations, as in and by the said last-mentioned Acts are ordered to be transmitted by the chairman of the Michaelmas Quarter Sessions, and shall at the same time, or within three calendar months afterwards, transmit such plans as in the said Acts are mentioned.

XXIX. That the return by any statute at any time in force directed to be made by the keeper of every county prison shall be made by the governor of every prison built, rebuilt, or enlarged under any agreement authorized by this Act, and shall be delivered to the clerk of the said gaol sessions two weeks at least before the 1st of October in each year; and such clerk shall, on the said 1st of October, prepare a general report, founded on the report of the visiting Justices and of the chaplain, and on the certificates and reports of the governor and other officers of the said prison, and on any other report or document respecting the said prison, and shall lay the same before the next court of gaol sessions; and such report, when approved by such court, shall be signed by the chairman thereof; and the said clerk of gaol sessions shall forthwith cause true copies thereof, and of the said return, to be made, and shall send forthwith a copy of each to the clerk of the peace of every contracting party, whether county or borough, to be by such clerk of the peace laid before the next Court of Quarter Sessions of the Peace holden for their county or borough, and shall send like copies to the town clerk of every borough, being a contracting party, to be by him laid before the next meeting of the council, and shall also send like copies to one of Her Majesty's Principal Secretaries of State.

XXX. That if anything be done respecting any prison built, rebuilt, or enlarged under any agreement made by authority of this Act, for which any fine, penalty, or forfeiture would have been incurred under the last-recited Acts or either of them if done respecting any gaol or house of correction to which such Acts or either of them extend, and would by virtue thereof have been payable to the county treasurer, all forfeitures, fines, and penalties for such matter or thing, when done respecting such prison, shall be paid to the treasurer of the gaol sessions for the purposes of defraying the expenses of the said prison.

XXXI. That on the termination of the time limited by the agreement touching the proportion to be contributed by each of the contracting parties towards the current annual expenditure aforesaid, as fixed by the original agreement aforesaid, the committees representing the several contracting parties, and jointly constituting the joint committee, may severally proceed to propose such revised proportion to the court of gaol sessions, and also the period, being not less than seven years, for which such revised proportion shall endure, and the court of gaol sessions shall take every such proposal into consideration: Provided always, that no such proposal shall be made unless the intention of proposing such alteration shall be expressed in the notice whereby the said Court is summoned, and unless such notice shall be published for one calendar month at least before the holding of the Court at which such alteration shall be so taken into consideration.

XXXII. That when the court of gaol sessions shall resolve that any such alteration ought to be made, or shall not adopt a proposal for making any such alteration, and any of the contracting parties shall be dissatisfied with such resolution, it shall be lawful for the clerk of the Peace of any county, and for the town clerk of any borough, such county or borough being one of the parties so contracting, and such clerk being thereunto authorized respectively by an order from the Court of Quarter Sessions of such county, or from the town council of such borough in special council assembled, as hereinbefore provided, to apply to one of the prison inspectors appointed by the Secretary of State to visit that prison; and such inspector shall have power to arbitrate between the said parties; and the said arbitrator shall summon the several clerks of the peace, and the town clerks of the several parties so contracting as aforesaid, the clerk of such gaol sessions, the governor of the said prison, and such other persons as he may require, to appear before him at a time to be by him appointed, and there to give evidence on oath, which such arbitrator shall be empowered to administer, and to produce all information touching the matter in dispute; and such arbitrator may, if he shall see fit, adjourn the hearing from time to time, and require all such further information to be afforded by either of the parties as shall appear to him necessary, and shall by his award in writing determine the matters in dispute, and his award shall be final and conclusive between the parties for seven years, and until a proposal for further revision shall be made after the end of such term of seven years as aforesaid; and such arbitrators shall assess the costs of the arbitration, and shall direct by whom and out of what fund the same shall be paid.

XXXIII. That if it shall at any time appear to the said committee that the said prison or other buildings should be rebuilt or enlarged, or undergo such alterations as do not come within the description of ordinary arrangement or ordinary repair, or that it may be desirable to increase or reduce any of the salaries set forth in the existing agreement, or to grant any annuity to a retired officer of the establishment, or to make any other special provision in furtherance of the objects of this Act, it shall be lawful for the said committee to make a special report thereon to each of the parties so contracting as aforesaid, to be laid before the Justices in Quarter Session and before the council of the borough respectively; and if on taking the same into consideration, with due notice thereof, as is required upon making the first agreement, such report be approved by the contracting parties, it shall be lawful for such parties to direct the said committee to draw up the necessary agreement, and upon the approval and confirmation of such agreement, in the same manner as upon making the first agreement, to carry into execution.

ation such matters as shall have been mutually agreed on, in the same manner, and with the same powers, and subject to the same provisions as in the first building, rebuilding, or enlarging such prison or other buildings, as hereinbefore specified.

XXXIV. That on the 9th of November next after the completion of twelve calendar months from the day of holding the first court of gaol sessions as aforesaid, and on the 9th of November in every succeeding year, the committee constituting such court of gaol sessions shall go out of office; and the Justices of every county, being a party so contracting as aforesaid, shall at the Court of Quarter Sessions next immediately preceding the said 9th of November, and the town council of every borough, being a party so contracting, shall, at the quarterly meeting of the council to be holden on the said 9th of November, appoint fit persons to perform the duties of such committee; and such appointment shall be made from amongst the like persons and in the same manner, and subject to the like conditions, as are hereinbefore provided for the first appointment of the said committee: Provided always, that any member of the said committee so going out of office shall be capable forthwith of being re-appointed if then duly qualified.

And after reciting that by the said recited Act of the 4 Geo. 4, provision was made for the sale, in certain cases, of the sites of old prisons no longer necessary: and that by an Act, 7 Geo. 4. c. 18, intituled, 'An Act for the Disposal of unnecessary Prisons in England,' provision was made for extending the same power to other cases:—

It is Enacted,

XXXV. That all the powers contained in the two last-recited Acts touching such sale and such other matters relating thereunto as are therein specified, shall be vested in the several councils of the boroughs, being contracting parties to any such agreement as aforesaid, in respect to the sale of any similar property in such boroughs, and to any other matters relating therewith; and all acts directed in the said recited Acts to be done at any Court of Quarter Sessions, touching such sales and such other matters aforesaid, may be done in respect to the sale of any similar property in such boroughs, and to any other matters relating thereunto, at a special meeting of such council to be holden for the purpose: Provided always, that in all such boroughs, unless there be a provision in the agreement for accommodating all the borough debtors in the district gaol, a portion of the old prison shall be fitted up as a debtors prison or debtors ward.

XXXVI. That one court shall be holden for the united district of such borough and the district of the county with which it shall be so joined, and the jurisdiction of the court of such borough shall extend over the whole of such united district; and the Recorder of that borough shall be the Recorder for the united district, and shall hold Courts of Sessions of the Peace for the united district; and the clerk of the peace of such borough shall, for all the purposes of this Act, be the clerk of the peace for the united district; and all depositions, recognizances, and other documents relating to prisoners committed to such district prison shall be returned to the clerk of the peace acting for the united district.

XXXVII. That in every such case the hundreds, parishes, townships, or other districts so united with the borough, for the purpose of holding such district court therein, shall be taken to be within the provisions of an Act, 6 Geo. 4. c. 50, intituled, 'An Act for consolidating and amending the Laws relative to Jurors and Juries;' and the persons therein residing, and qualified to serve on juries under the last-recited Act, shall be liable to serve as jurors at the sessions holden for such borough and united district, and shall be returned in the jury lists to the high constable, and by him to the clerk of the peace of the county in which such district is situated.

XXXVIII. That the clerk of the peace for such county shall send a copy of the lists of jurors which he shall receive, relating to the said hundreds, parishes, townships, or other districts, to the clerk of the peace for such borough, and the jurors named in the said lists shall be taken to be within the provisions of an Act, 5 & 6 Will. 4. c. 76, intituled, 'An Act to provide for the Regulation of Municipal Corporations in England and Wales,' with regard to persons liable to serve upon juries at Quarter Sessions of the Peace within such borough.

XXXIX. That the clerk of the peace for the borough shall include the names so sent to him, with the names of the burgesses liable to serve on juries at the Court of Quarter Sessions for the said borough, in one alphabetical list, which shall be the jurors book for the said borough and adjacent district so united with it, for the purpose of the said court; and the number to be summoned to attend any such court shall be such as the Recorder shall think necessary for the business of the court, not being in any case less than thirty-six; and the clerk of the peace for the borough shall have the same powers for summoning jurors from the portion of the county comprised in the united district as are by law vested in the sheriff for the county for the like purpose.

XL. That the clerk of the peace for such borough shall, within twenty days after the close of each district session holden in that borough, make out and transmit to the clerk of the peace of the said county a list of such men who shall be summoned from such hundreds, parishes, townships, or districts, and who shall attend or serve on any grand jury or petty jury at such borough session, with their respective places of abode, and additions, and the date of their services; and every man so summoned, and having duly served or attended until discharged by the Court, shall be entitled, on application, before he shall depart from the borough, and upon payment of 1s., to receive a certificate thereof from the clerk of the peace of such borough, and shall be entitled to the same exemptions from being summoned to attend at any future session to be holden either for the borough or for the county, and shall be in every respect on the same footing and enjoy the same privileges as if he had been summoned and had attended and served at any session of the peace for the said county.

XLI. That in every case in which more than one borough having a Court of Sessions of the Peace shall be a party to the agreement aforesaid, the district so united as aforesaid shall be divided into as many divisions as there shall be boroughs included in such agreement; and to each of such boroughs shall be apportioned such a division of the said district as shall be more immediately adjacent thereunto, and shall be set forth in the agreement, regard being had to the amount of population in the whole district, and the other circumstances of the case; and all prisoners committed to the said prison for any offence committed within any division aforesaid shall be sent for trial to the sessions of the peace holden for that borough to which such division shall have been apportioned, and the provisions hereinbefore contained with respect to jurors, and the return of convictions, depositions, recognizances, and other documents for the united district, shall apply in each case to the division apportioned to each borough.

And in order to provide for the mode of defraying the expenses of the said district courts as hereinbefore authorized,—

It is Enacted,

XLII. That the said Court shall be empowered to order the treasurer of the said committee to defray, out of any monies in his hands as such treasurer, the expenses incurred in holding the said courts, and also to pay such costs, charges, and expenses as to the Court shall seem reasonable, to prosecutors, witnesses, and others before the said Court, in such and the like cases as the Court of Sessions of the Peace holden for any county is empowered to make orders on the treasurer of the county for payment of the like costs, charges, and expenses upon prosecutions or trials before such last-mentioned Court; and the treasurer of the committee, or some person authorized by him, shall attend the said district courts, and shall pay such costs, charges and expenses accordingly.

XLIII. Declared and enacted, That neither the Recorder for such united district, nor any barrister-at-law appointed by Her Majesty to hold any Court of General Sessions of the Peace or gaol delivery for any borough, district, or place, shall be empowered at any court holden by him to try any person or persons for any treason or felony which by an Act, 5 & 6 Vict. c. 38, intitled, 'An Act to define the Jurisdiction of Justices in General and Quarter Sessions of the Peace,' the Recorder of any borough is restrained from trying at any session of the peace.

XLIV. XLVI. That this Act shall commence and take effect from the 1st of September in the year 1842.

XLVII. That this Act may be amended or repealed by any Act to be passed in this present session of Parliament.

By this Act,

After reciting that by 6 & 7 Will. 4. c. 71, it was among other things enacted, that no Commissioner or assistant Commissioner, secretary, or assistant secretary, or other officer or person appointed under the said Act should hold his office for a longer period than five years next after the day of the passing of the said Act, and thenceforth until the end of the then next session of Parliament; and that after the expiration of the said period of five years and of the then next session of Parliament so much of the said Act as authorizes any such appointments should cease: And that by 5 Vict. c. 7, it was among other things provided that so much of the last-recited Act as is hereinbefore recited should be repealed, and that no Commissioner or assistant Commissioner, secretary, assistant secretary, or other officer or person so to be appointed, should hold his office for a longer period than until the 31st of July 1842; and that after the said 31st of July so much of the last-recited Act as authorizes any such appointment should cease: And that it is expedient that the said commission be further continued:—

It is Enacted,

I. That so much of the last-recited Act as is hereinbefore recited shall be repealed, except so far as it repeals any part of the first-recited Act; and that no Commissioner or assistant Commissioner, secretary, assistant secretary, or other officer or person so appointed or to be appointed shall hold his office for a longer period than the 31st of July 1847, and to the end of the then next session of Parliament.

And after reciting that by the first-recited Act power is given to the land owners and tithe owners of any parish to make and execute an agreement for the commutation of the tithes of that parish as therein specified; and power is also given to the said Commissioners after the 1st of October in the year 1838, to make compulsory awards for the commutation of tithes in any parish in which no such agreement shall have been made as aforesaid, and confirmed by the said Commissioners; And that doubts have been entertained whether, pending the proceedings toward a compulsory award, the land owners and tithe owners can make and execute a voluntary agreement which, if confirmed by the said Commissioners, shall be valid, and it is expedient that such doubts be removed:—

It is Declared and Enacted,

II. That a parochial agreement for the payment of a rent-charge instead of tithes, as provided by the said Act, may be made in the manner therein specified, at any time before the confirmation of any award for the commutation of the tithes of the same parish; and such agreement may contain provisions for declaring how the expenses of the parties, or any of them, shall be defrayed, which shall have been incurred in contesting the award; and every such agreement, whether made before or after the passing of this Act, if confirmed by the Commissioners, shall be as valid as if made and executed before any proceedings had been taken toward making a compulsory award, and shall have the effect of making null and void all the proceedings toward such compulsory award, or incident thereunto, except so far as the same shall be adopted in such agreement.

III. That in all cases where no time is fixed by any award or agreement commuting the tithes of a parish for the commencement of the rent-charge or rent-charges therein awarded or agreed upon, it shall be lawful, notwithstanding that the apportionment of the said rent-charge or rent-charges may have been confirmed, for the land owners and tithe owners, having such an interest in the land and tithes of the parish as is required for making a parochial agreement, to enter into a supplemental agreement for fixing the period at which the rent-charge or rent-charges to be paid under such award or agreement shall commence: Provided always, that such supplemental agreement shall be of no force or effect unless the same shall be confirmed by the said Commissioners under their hands and seal; and a copy of every such supplemental agreement shall be deposited with the registrar of the diocese, and in the parish, in like manner as instruments of apportionment are deposited under the said first-recited Act.

And after reciting that by the first-recited Act power is given to the said Commissioners to make awards in cases reserved for special adjudication, having regard to the average rate which shall be awarded in respect of lands of the like description and similarly situated in the neighbouring parishes: And that it sometimes happens that voluntary agreements for the commutation of tithes have been made in the greater part of such neighbouring parishes:—

It is Enacted,

IV. That, in awarding the rent-charge in any case so reserved, the Commissioners shall be empowered to have regard to the average rate of commutation in respect of lands of the like description and similarly situated, not only in the neighbouring parishes in which there has been an award by the Commissioners, but also in those in which there has been a parochial agreement for the commutation of tithes.

And after reciting that it will be beneficial to both tithe owners and land owners if the Tithe Commissioners are empowered to define the glebe lands in those cases in which the quantity of glebe is known, but cannot be identified, and also to exchange the glebe lands or part thereof for other land:—

It is Enacted,

V. That for the purpose of defining and settling the glebe lands of any benefice, on the application of the spiritual person to whom the same belongs in right of such benefice, and with the consent of the land owner or land owners having or claiming title to the land so defined as glebe, and being in possession thereof, the Tithe Commissioners shall, during the continuance of the commission, as well before as after the completion of any commutation, have the same powers which they have for ascertaining, drawing, and defining the boundaries of the lands of any land owners on their application; and also upon the like application of any spiritual person the said Commissioners shall have power to exchange the glebe lands, or any part thereof, for other land within the same or any adjoining parish, or otherwise conveniently situated, with the consent of the ordinary and patron of the benefice and of the land owner or land owners having or claiming title to the land so to be given in exchange for the glebe lands, and being in actual possession thereof as aforesaid, such consent to be testified as their consent under the first-recited Act is testified to any thing for which their consent is therein required; and in every such case the Tithe Commissioners shall make an award in like manner as awards are made under the first-recited Act, setting forth the contents, description, and boundary of the glebe lands as finally settled by them, and of the lands awarded to the several parties to whom any lands theretofore part or reputed part of the glebe lands are to be awarded; and every such award shall have all the incidents of an agreement confirmed by the said Commissioners for giving land instead of tithes, and in every case of exchange shall operate as a conveyance of the lands theretofore part or reputed part of the glebe lands to the several persons to whom the same shall be awarded, and to their heirs and successors, executors and administrators, as the case may be; and such lands shall thereupon be holden by the same tenure, and upon the like uses and trusts, and subject to the like incidents, as the land awarded as glebe in exchange for the same was formerly holden; and the expense of so defining, exchanging, and settling any glebe lands shall be borne in such manner as the Tithe Commissioners shall think just.

And after reciting that the power of giving land instead of tithes has been found beneficial to both tithe owners and land owners, but such power has been inoperative in a great degree by reason that the land owners by giving land instead of vicarial tithe cannot free their lands from the liability to rectorial tithe, and the converse:—

vi. That it shall be lawful for any tithe owner, with the consent of the patron and ordinary in the case of spiritual tithes, to be testified as their consent under the first-recited Act is testified to anything for which their consent is therein required, and subject in that case to the limitation of quantity of land provided by the first-recited Act, and subject to the approval of the Tithe Commissioners, to agree for the assignment to any other owner of tithes issuing out of the same lands of so much of his tithes arising within the same parish, or of the rent-charge agreed or awarded to be paid instead of such tithes, as shall be an equivalent for the tithes belonging to such other tithe owner issuing out of the same lands, or for the rent-charge agreed or awarded to be paid instead thereof, for the purpose of enabling any land owner who shall be desirous of giving land instead of tithes to free his lands, or any part thereof, from both rectorial and vicarial tithes, and from the payment of any rent-charge in respect thereof; and every such agreement shall be carried into effect by means of an award or supplemental award, to be made by the said Commissioners either before or after the confirmation of the apportionment, in like manner as awards or supplemental awards are made by them pursuant to the powers vested in them before the passing of this Act.

vii. That where any agreement shall have been made before the passing of the first-recited Act for giving land or money, or both, instead of tithes or glebe or commonable or other rights or easements, which is not of legal validity, and such lands or money, or both, shall appear to the Commissioners to be a fair equivalent for the said tithes or glebe, or rights or easements, they shall be empowered to confirm and render valid such agreement; and in case the same shall not appear to be a fair equivalent, the said Commissioners shall nevertheless be empowered to confirm such agreement, and also to make an award for such rent-charge, which with the said land or money, or both, will be a fair equivalent for the said tithes or glebe, or rights or easements, and, subject to such confirmation and award, to extinguish the right of the tithe owners to the perception of the said tithes, or his title to the said glebe rights or easements, or to the receipt of any rent-charge instead thereof, other than the rent-charge awarded over and above the lands or money, or both, so confirmed to them.

viii. That in every case in which any spiritual person shall have died or vacated his benefice before exercising the powers vested in him of borrowing money for the purpose of defraying so much of the expenses of commutation as is to be defrayed by him, and of charging the rent-charge with the repayment of the money borrowed, it shall be lawful for the Tithe Commissioners, with the consent of the ordinary, to borrow money for that purpose, and to charge the repayment thereof upon the rent-charge, or so much thereof as they, with the like consent, shall think just, with interest thereupon, and for that purpose to assign the rent-charge in like manner as such spiritual person, if living or in possession of his benefice, could himself have done; and the person in whose favour such charge shall have been made, and his assigns, shall have the like remedies for enforcing payment of the principal and interest of the money so borrowed, in case of any arrear in payment of the said charge, as if such charge had been made by the person so dying or vacating his benefice.

ix. That in all cases, whether the tithes of any parish have been commuted or not, where any question as to the liability of any lands to the render of tithes, or as to the existence of any modus or composition real, or prescriptive or customary payment, or any claim of exemption from or non-liability to the payment of tithes in respect of any lands, shall have been heard and determined by the said Commissioners, or by any assistant Commissioner under their direction, it shall be lawful for the said Commissioners or any assistant Commissioner, after the time for appeal to a court of law from the said determination has elapsed, or in case there has been such appeal, after the judgment of the Court on such appeal, to make an award, founded on the decision of the said Commissioners or assistant Commissioner, or the judgment of any court of law to which appeal shall have been made from the decision of the said Commissioners or assistant Commissioner, for the determination of all questions of arrears of tithes claimed in any suit which may be pending in any court of equity for the purpose of trying, as to the same lands, such liability, or the legality of such claim, modus, composition, or customary payment, and of the liability of any of the parties to payment of the costs of the proceedings in such suit, for which purpose they respectively shall have all the powers which under the said recited Acts or any of them they have for ascertaining the value of the tithes of such lands; and such award shall have the effect of the verdict of a jury, on an issue directed by the Court of Chancery satisfactory to the Judge or Court directing the same, and shall be received by the Court of Chancery as conclusive evidence of the liability or non-liability of such lands, and of the amount of such arrears, and of the liability of the several parties to the payment of costs in such suit; and any order of the Court of Chancery made thereon shall be binding on all parties, and no appeal to any other Judge or Court shall be brought against such order.

x. That where any question is or shall be brought for the decision of the Tithe Commissioners or any assistant Commissioner, relative to any of the matters mentioned in an Act, 2 & 3 Will. 4. c. 100, intituled 'An Act for shortening the Time required in Claims of Modus decimandi, or Exemption from or Discharge of Tithes,' as to which any such suit shall have been commenced and shall be pending as would have prevented the operation of the said recited Act, such recited Act shall not have any operation as to any award or decision respecting such question to be made by the said Tithe Commissioners or any assistant Commissioner.

XI. That in any parish where any rent-charge has been agreed or awarded to be paid instead of tithes, and security has been given for payment of such rent-charge, and the lands in such parish have been discharged from payment or render of tithes or composition, or rent in the nature thereof, instead of tithes, before the apportionment of such rent-charge, it shall be lawful for the Tithe Commissioners, by a declaration in writing under the hands of any two of them, and their seal of office, to fix the same half-yearly days of payment of the whole rent-charge after apportionment thereof; and in consideration that the payment of some sums will be thereby accelerated, and the payment of other sums will be thereby deferred and retarded, to make such alterations and allowances in the payments to be made in the first year after the apportionment, both by way of interest for every sum of which payment will be thereby deferred, and by way of discount to be allowed for every sum of which payment will be thereby accelerated, as to the Commissioners shall seem just.

XII. That it shall be lawful for any owner of rent-charge, having taken possession of any land for non-payment of the rent-charge under the provisions of the first recited Act, from time to time during the continuance of such possession to let such land, or any part thereof, for any period not exceeding one year in possession, at such rent as can be reasonably obtained for the same; and the restitution of such land, on payment or satisfaction of the rent-charge, costs, and expenses, shall be subject and without prejudice to any such tenancy.

XIII. That it shall be lawful for any board of guardians of any parish or union, with the consent of the Poor Law Commissioners, and subject to such conditions as the said Poor Law Commissioners may prescribe, to pay out of the rates of any parish any portion of the cost of making or providing any map or plan which shall have been confirmed under the hands and seal of the Tithe Commissioners, or any other sum of money by way of consideration for the use of the said map or plan, for the purpose of estimating the net annual value of property in respect of which rates may be assessed for the relief of the poor; and after the Tithe Commissioners shall have certified in writing that such money has been paid, the overseers of the parish, or any person authorized by them in writing, or any officer of the said board of guardians, or any person authorized by them in writing, shall at all reasonable times have access to the copy of the said map or plan deposited with the incumbent and church or chapel wardens of the parish or other persons approved by the said Tithe Commissioners, and may inspect and make copies or extracts from the said copy, without paying anything for such access or inspection, or for making such copies or extracts.

And after reciting that by the first recited Act power is given for altering apportionments of rent-charge by the Commissioners of Land Tax, on the application of the owner of the lands charged therewith, and it is expedient that the power thereby given should be extended, and also that during the continuance of the Tithe Commission the like power should be vested in the Tithe Commissioners:—

It is Enacted,

XIV. That if at any time after the confirmation of any instrument of apportionment it shall appear that the lands charged with one entire rent-charge belong to or have become vested in several owners, and that any of the owners of such lands shall be desirous that the apportionment thereof should be altered, it shall be lawful for the Commissioners of Land Tax for the county or place where the said lands are situated, or any three of them, to appoint, by notice under their hands, a time and place for hearing the parties to such application, and all other parties interested therein; and upon satisfactory proof of such notice having been served on all parties interested full twenty-one days before the day of hearing, to proceed to alter the apportionment in such manner and in such proportion amongst the said lands as to them shall seem just, subject nevertheless to the consent of two Justices of the Peace, as in the said first recited Act provided; and further, that upon such application being made to the said Tithe Commissioners, they shall have the same power of making such alteration as by the said first recited Act and by this Act is vested in the Commissioners of Land Tax, and that without any such consent of two Justices of the Peace; provided, that no alteration of any apportionment shall be made under the first recited Act or this Act whereby any rent-charge shall be subdivided, so that any subdivision thereof shall be less than 5s.

And after reciting that it is expedient to make further provision for recording all such alterations of apportionment:—

It is Enacted,

XV. That the registrar of every diocese, as soon as conveniently may be after the passing of this Act, shall cause to be made and sent to the office of the Tithe Commissioners a copy, certified under his hand, of every instrument of altered apportionment in his custody which was made before the passing of this Act, the reasonable cost of making and sending which copy shall be defrayed by the Tithe Commissioners as part of the expense of putting in execution the Acts for the commutation of tithes; and after the passing of this Act three counterparts shall be made of every instrument of altered apportionment at the expense of the land owner desiring the alteration; and two of the said counterparts shall be sent as provided by the first recited Act, and the third shall be sent to or deposited in the office of the Tithe Commissioners, or, after the expiration of the Tithe Commission, shall be sent to and kept by the person having custody of the records and papers of the said commission, and shall be annexed to the instrument of apportionment in the custody of the said Commissioners, or the person having the custody of their records and papers.

XVI. That in case any land charged with one amount of rent-charge shall belong to two or more land owners in several portions, and the owner of any one of such portions, or his tenant, shall have paid the whole of such rent-charge, or any portion thereof greater than shall appear to him to be his just proportion, and contribution thereto shall have been refused or neglected to be made by any other of the said land owners, or his tenant, after a demand in writing made on them, or either of them, for that purpose, it shall be lawful for any Justice of the Peace acting for the county or other jurisdiction in which the land is situated, upon the complaint of any such land owner, or his tenant or agent, to summon the owner so refusing or neglecting to make contribution, or his tenant, to appear before any two or more such Justices of the Peace, who, upon proof of the demand and of service of the summons, as hereinafter provided, whether or not the party summoned shall appear, shall examine into the merits of the complaint, and determine the just proportion of the rent-charge so paid as aforesaid which ought to be contributed by the land owner of such other portion of the said land, and by order under their hands and seals shall direct the payment by him of what shall in their judgment be due and payable in respect of such liability to contribution, with the reasonable costs and charges of such proceedings, to be ascertained by such Justices; and thereupon it shall be lawful for the complainant to take the like proceedings for enforcing payment of the said amount of contribution and costs, and with the like restriction as to the arrears recoverable, as are given to the owner of the rent-charge by the said first-mentioned Act or this Act for enforcing payment of the rent-charge.

XVII. That service of the said demand in writing, and summons, or of any notice to distrain, or copy of writ to assess the arrears of rent-charge, or notice of the execution thereof under the said first recited Act, or the several Acts to amend the same, or this Act, upon any person occupying or residing on the land chargeable with the rent-charge, or in case no person shall be found thereon, then affixing the same in some conspicuous place on the land, shall be deemed good service of any such summons, notice, writ, or other proceeding.

XVIII. That it shall be lawful for all defendants in replevin, brought on any distress for rent-charge payable under the said first recited Act, or the several Acts to amend the same, or this Act, to avow or make cognizance generally that the lands and tenements whereon such distress was made were chargeable with or liable to the payment of a certain yearly amount of rent-charge under the provisions of the statutes for the commutation of tithes in England and Wales, which rent-charge, or some part thereof, was in arrear and unpaid for the space of twenty-one days next after some half-yearly day of payment thereof, and after ten days notice in writing, as required by the said Acts, and that a certain amount of such rent-charge, according to the prices of corn, as directed by the said Acts, was at the time of the said distress due to the person entitled to the rent-charge.

XIX. That where any distress shall be made for any rent-charge payable under the said recited Acts or any of them, or this Act, and justly due, and any irregularity or unlawful act shall be afterwards done by the party distraining, or his agent, in the conduct, sale, or disposition of the distress, the distress itself shall not be therefore deemed to be unlawful, nor the party making it deemed a trespasser from the beginning, but the party aggrieved by such unlawful act or irregularity may recover full satisfaction for the special damage in an action upon the case; provided nevertheless, that no plaintiff shall recover in any action for any such unlawful act or irregularity, if ten days notice in writing shall not have been given to the defendant by the plaintiff of his intention to bring such action before the commencement thereof, or if tender of sufficient amends has been made by the party distraining, or his agent, before such action brought, or if after action brought a sufficient sum of money shall have been paid into court, with costs, by or on behalf of the defendant.

XX. That this Act shall be construed with and as part of the first recited Act, as amended by the several Acts passed for the amendment thereof and by this Act; and that all provisions in any of the said Acts relating to land of copyhold tenure shall apply to land of customary tenure, or any other tenure subject to arbitrary fine; and that all provisions in the said Acts or in this Act relating to glebe land shall apply to all land holden by any spiritual person in right of his benefice.

XXI. That this Act may be amended or repealed by any Act to be passed in this session of Parliament.

By this Act,

After reciting that by 3 & 4 Vict. c. 97, provision was made for the supervision of railways: and that it is expedient for the safety of the public to make further provision for that purpose;—

It is Enacted,

I. That this Act shall come into operation on the passing thereof.

II. That the provisions of the said recited Act and of this Act shall be construed together as one Act, except so far as the provisions of the said recited Act are hereby repealed, or shall be inconsistent with the provisions of this Act.

And after reciting that by the said recited Act it is enacted, that after two months from the passing of the said recited Act no railway, or portion of any railway, shall be opened for the public conveyance of passengers or goods until one calendar month after notice in writing of the intention of opening the same shall have been given, by the company to whom such railway shall belong, to the Lords of the Committee of Her Majesty's Privy Council appointed for trade and foreign plantations: And that by the said recited Act it is also enacted, that if any railway or portion of any railway shall be opened without due notice as aforesaid, the company to whom such railway shall belong shall forfeit to Her Majesty the sum of 20*l.* for every day during which the same shall continue open, until the expiration of one calendar month after the company shall have given the like notice as is hereinbefore required before the opening of the railway, and any such penalty may be recovered in any of Her Majesty's courts of record:—

It is Enacted,

III. That the said recited provisions of the said Act shall be and they are hereby repealed.

IV. That no railway or portion of any railway shall be opened for the public conveyance of passengers until one calendar month after notice in writing of the intention of opening the same shall have been given, by the company to whom such railway shall belong, to the Lords of the Committee of Her Majesty's Privy Council appointed for trade and foreign plantations, and until ten days after notice in writing shall have been given by the said company to the Lords of the said Committee of the time when the said railway or portion of railway will be, in their opinion, sufficiently completed for the safe conveyance of passengers, and ready for inspection.

V. That if any railway or portion of any railway shall be opened without such notice as aforesaid, the company to whom such railway shall belong shall forfeit to Her Majesty the sum of 20*l.* for every day during which the same shall continue open until the said notices shall have been duly given and shall have expired; and every such penalty may be recovered in any of Her Majesty's courts of record, or in the Court of Session or in any of the sheriffs courts in Scotland.

VI. That if the officer or officers appointed by the Lords of the said Committee to inspect any such railway or portion of railway shall, after inspection thereof, report in writing to the Lords of the said Committee that, in his or their opinion, the opening of the same would be attended with danger to the public using the same, by reason of the incompleteness of the works or permanent way, or the insufficiency of the establishment for working such railway, together with the grounds of such opinion, it shall be lawful for the Lords of the said Committee, and so from time to time, as often as such officers shall after further inspection thereof so report, to order and direct the company to whom such railway shall belong to postpone such opening for any period not exceeding one calendar month at any one time, until it shall appear to the Lords of the said Committee that such opening may take place without danger to the public; and if any such railway, or any portion thereof, shall be opened contrary to any such order and direction of the Lords of the said Committee, the company to whom such railway shall belong shall forfeit to Her Majesty the sum of 20*l.* for every day during which the same shall continue open contrary to such order and direction; and any such penalty may be recovered in any of Her Majesty's courts of record, or in the Court of Session or in any of the sheriffs courts in Scotland: Provided always, that no such order as aforesaid shall be binding upon any railway company unless therewith shall be delivered to the said company a copy of the report of the officer or officers on which such order shall be founded.

VII. That every railway company shall, within forty-eight hours after the occurrence upon the railway belonging to such company of any accident attended with serious personal injury to the public using the same, give notice thereof to the Lords of the said Committee; and if any company shall wilfully omit to give such notice every such company shall forfeit to Her Majesty the sum of 5*l.* for every day during which the omission to give the same shall continue; and every such penalty may be recovered in any of Her Majesty's courts of record, or in the Court of Session or in any of the sheriffs courts in Scotland.

VIII. That the Lords of the said Committee may order and direct any railway company to make up and deliver to them returns of serious accidents occurring in the course of the public traffic upon the railway belonging to such company, whether attended with personal injury or not, in such form and manner as the Lords of the said Committee shall deem necessary and require for their information, with a view to the public safety; and if any such returns shall not be so delivered within fourteen days after the same shall have been required, every such company shall forfeit to Her Majesty the sum of 5*l.* for every day during which the said company shall neglect to deliver the same; and every such penalty may be recovered in any of Her Majesty's courts of record, or in the Courts of Session or in any of the sheriffs courts in Scotland: Provided always, that all such returns shall be privileged communications, and shall not be evidence in any court whatsoever.

And after reciting that by 2 & 3 Vict. c. 45, it was enacted, that whenever a railway crosses or shall hereafter cross any turnpike road, or any other highway or statute labour road for carts or carriages in Great Britain, the proprietors or directors of the said railway shall make and maintain good and sufficient gates across each end of such turnpike or other road at each end of the said crossings, and shall employ good and proper persons to open and shut such gates, so that the persons, carts, or carriages passing along such turnpike or other road shall not be exposed to any danger or damage by the passing of any carriages or engines along the said railway: And that by the Acts relating to certain railways it is provided that such gates shall be kept constantly closed across the railway, except during the time when carriages or engines passing along the railway shall have to cross such turnpike or other road: And that experience has shewn that it is more conducive to safety that such gates should be kept closed across the turnpike or other road instead of across the railway:—

It is Enacted,

IX. That, notwithstanding anything to the contrary contained in any Act of Parliament heretofore passed, such gates shall be kept constantly closed across each end of such turnpike or other roads, in lieu of across the railway, except during the time when horses, cattle, carts, or carriages passing along such turnpike or other road shall have to cross such railway; and such gates shall be of such dimensions and so constructed as, when closed across the ends of such turnpike or other roads, to fence in the railway, and prevent cattle or horses passing along the road from entering upon the railway while the gates are closed: Provided always, that it shall be lawful for the Lords of the said Committee, in any case in which they are satisfied that it will be more conducive for the public safety that the gates at any level crossing over any such turnpike or other road should be kept closed across the railway, to order and direct that such gates shall be kept so closed, instead of across the road; and such order of the Lords of the said Committee shall be a sufficient authority for the directors or proprietors of any railway company to whom such order is addressed for keeping such gates closed, in the manner directed by the Lords of the said Committee.

And after reciting that it is expedient that further provision be made for the safety of the public in respect of the fences of railways:—

It is Enacted,

X. That all railway companies shall be under the same liability of obligation to erect, and to maintain and repair, good and sufficient fences throughout the whole of their respective lines, as they would have been if every part of such fences had been originally ordered to be made under an order of Justices by virtue of the provisions to that effect in the Acts of Parliament relating to such railways respectively.

XI. That where two or more railway companies whose railways have a common terminus or a portion of the same line of rails in common, or which form separate portions of one continued line of railway communication, shall not be able to agree upon arrangements for conducting at such common terminus, or at the point of junction between them, their joint traffic with safety to the public, it shall be lawful for the Lords of the said Committee, upon the application of either of the parties, to decide the questions in dispute between them, so far as the same relate to the safety of the public, and to order and determine whether the whole or what proportion of the expenses attending on such arrangements shall be borne by either of the parties respectively; and if any railway company shall refuse or wilfully neglect to obey any such order made upon or against such company by the Lords of the said Committee pursuant to this provision, such company shall forfeit to Her Majesty the sum of 20*l.* per day for every day during which such refusal or neglect shall continue; and every such penalty may be recovered in any of Her Majesty's courts of record, or in the Court of Session or in any of the sheriffs courts in Scotland.

And after reciting that powers of laying down branch lines opening into the ledges or flanches of main lines of railway, and of entering upon and passing along such main lines with carriages and waggons drawn by locomotive engines, or by other mechanical or animal power, and also powers to form roads or railways across existing railways on a level, have been given by various Acts relative to railways to the owners or occupiers of lands adjoining the railway, and to other persons with their consent: And that experience has shewn that the exercise of such powers without limitation would in many cases be attended with danger to the public using such railway:—

It is Enacted,

XII. That if, in the case of any railway on which passengers are conveyed by steam or other mechanical power, it shall appear to the Lords of the said Committee that such power as aforesaid cannot be so exercised without seriously endangering the public safety, and that an arrangement may be made with a due regard to existing rights of property, it shall be lawful for the Lords of the said Committee to order and direct that such powers shall only be exercised subject to such conditions as the Lords of the said Committee shall direct: Provided always, that no railway shall be considered a passenger railway if two-thirds or more of the gross annual revenue of such railway shall be derived from the carriage thereon of coals, ironstone, or other metals or minerals.

And after reciting that in many cases railways have been made to cross turnpike roads, highways, and private roads and tramways on the level, and the companies to whom such railways belong would in some cases be willing, at their own expense, to carry such roads and tramways over or under such railways by means of a bridge or archway for the greater safety of the public, but have no authority so to do: And that it would promote the public safety if railway companies were enabled, under the sanction and authority of the Lords of the said Committee, to substitute bridges or archways for such level crossings as aforesaid:—

It is Enacted,

XIII. That in all cases where any railway company shall be willing, at their own expense, to carry any turnpike road, highway, or private road or tramway over or under their railway by means of a bridge or arch in lieu of crossing the same on the level, it shall be lawful for the Lords of the said Committee, on the application of the said company, and after hearing the several parties interested, if it shall appear to the Lords of the said Committee that such level crossing endangers the public safety.

and that the proposal of the company does not involve any violation of existing rights or interests without adequate compensation, to give the said company full power and authority for removing the danger at their own expense, either by building a bridge, or by such other arrangement as the nature of the case shall require, subject to such conditions as the Lords of the said Committee shall direct.

And after reciting that it is essential for the public safety, and also for the proper maintenance of railways in a state of efficiency for the public service, that railway companies should have the power, in case of accidents or slips happening or being apprehended to their cuttings and embankments or other works, to enter upon the lands adjoining their respective railways, for the purpose of repairing or renewing the same, and to do such works as may be necessary for the purpose:—

It is Enacted,

xiv. That it shall be lawful for the Lords of the said Committee to empower any railway company, in case of any accident or slip happening or being apprehended to any cutting, embankment, or other work belonging to them, to enter upon any lands adjoining their railway for the purpose of repairing or preventing such accident, and to do such works as may be necessary for the purpose: Provided always, that in case of necessity it shall be lawful for any railway company to enter upon such lands and do such works as aforesaid, without having obtained the previous sanction of the Lords of the said Committee; but in every such case such railway company shall, within forty-eight hours after such entry, make a report to the Lords of the said Committee, specifying the nature of such accident or apprehended accident, and of the works necessary to be done, and such powers shall cease and determine if the Lords of the said Committee shall, after considering the said report, certify that their exercise is not necessary for the public safety: Provided also, that such works shall be as little injurious to the said adjoining lands as the nature of the accident or apprehended accident will admit of, and shall be executed with all possible despatch; and full compensation shall be made to the owners and occupiers of such lands for the loss or injury or inconvenience sustained by them respectively by reason of such works, the amount of which compensation, in case of any dispute about the same, shall be settled in the same manner as cases of disputed compensation are directed to be settled by the Acts relating to the railway on which such works may become necessary: Provided always, that no land shall be taken permanently by any railway company for such works without a certificate from the Lords of the said Committee as hereinafter described.

And after reciting that by various Acts relating to railways compulsory powers are given to railway companies of purchasing and taking lands for the construction of such railways, and it is provided that such compulsory powers shall not be exercised after the expiration of certain limited periods from the passing of the said Acts: And that it is sometimes found necessary for the public safety that additional land should be taken after the expiration of such periods for the purpose of giving increased width to the embankments and inclination to the slopes of railways, or for making approaches to bridges or archways, or for doing such works for the repair or prevention of accidents as are hereinbefore described:—

xv. That, in every case in which the Lords of the said Committee shall certify that the public safety requires additional land to be taken by any railway company for such purposes as aforesaid, the compulsory powers of purchasing and taking land contained in the Act or Acts of such railway company, together with all the clauses and provisions relative thereto, shall, as regards such portion or portions of land as are mentioned in the certificate of the Lords of the said Committee, revive and be in full force for such further period as shall be mentioned in such certificate: Provided always, that any railway company applying to the Lords of the said Committee for any such certificate shall give fourteen days notice in writing, in the manner prescribed by the Act or Acts of such company for serving notices on land owners, of their intention to make such application to all the parties interested in such lands, or such of them as shall be known to the company, and shall state in such notice the particulars of the lands required; and if any of such parties interested shall apply within the said period of fourteen days to the Lords of the said Committee, such party shall be heard by them before any such certificate is given: Provided also, that where any such application shall have been made by any railway company to the Lords of the said Committee, upon which application any such certificate shall have been refused, the directors of such railway company shall, if required by the Lords of the said Committee, repay to the party resisting such application any expenses which he or they may have incurred in resisting such application.

And after reciting that by various Acts relating to railways it is enacted, that no carriage or waggon shall carry or bear at any one time upon the railway (including the weight of such carriage) more than four tons, and experience has shewn that it is in many cases more conducive to safety to use a heavier description of carriage or waggon upon railways than was originally contemplated:—

It is Enacted,

xvi. That every provision contained in any such Act or Acts respectively limiting the weight to be carried or borne at any one time in any carriage or waggon upon any railway (including the weight of such carriage or waggon) to four tons shall be and the same is hereby repealed, and that, notwithstanding anything in any Act contained, it shall be lawful for any railway company to use and to permit to be used upon any railway carriages or waggons carrying or bearing (including the weight of such carriage) a greater weight than four tons, subject to such regulations as may from time to time be made and be in force pursuant to any Act or Acts of Parliament already or hereafter to be passed in that behalf.

And after reciting that by the said recited Act for regulating railways provision is made for the punishment of servants of railway companies guilty of misconduct, and it is expedient to extend such provision:—

xvii. That it shall be lawful for any officer or agent of any railway company, or for any special constable duly appointed, and all such persons as they may call to their assistance, to seize and detain any engine driver, waggon driver, guard, porter, servant, or other person employed by the said or by any other railway company, or by any other company or person, in conducting traffic upon the railway belonging to the said company, or in repairing and maintaining the works of the said railway, who shall be found drunk while so employed upon the said railway, who shall commit any offence against any of the bye-laws, rules, or regulations of the said company, or who shall wilfully, maliciously, or negligently do or omit to do any act whereby the life or limb of any person passing along or being upon such railway or the works thereof respectively shall be or might be injured or endangered, or whereby the passage of any engines, carriages, or trains shall be or might be obstructed or impeded, and to convey such engine driver, guard, porter, servant, or other person so offending, or any person counselling, aiding, or assisting in such offence, with all convenient despatch before some Justice of the Peace for the place within which such offence shall be committed, without any other warrant or authority than this Act; and every such person so offending, and every person counselling, aiding, or assisting therein, as aforesaid, shall, when convicted upon the oath of one or more credible witness or witnesses before such Justice as aforesaid (who is hereby authorized and required, upon complaint to him made upon oath, without information in writing, to take cognizance thereof, and to act summarily in the premises), in the discretion of such Justice, be imprisoned, with or without hard labour, for any term not exceeding two calendar months, or, in the like discretion of such Justice, shall for every such offence forfeit to Her Majesty any sum not exceeding 10*l.*, and in default of payment thereof shall be imprisoned, with or without hard labour, as aforesaid, for such period, not exceeding two calendar months, as such Justice shall appoint, such commitment to be determined on payment of the amount of the penalty; and every such penalty shall be returned to the next ensuing Court of Quarter Sessions in the usual manner.

XVIII. That in all cases in which by the present or the said recited Act for regulating railways it is provided that offenders shall be taken before one or more Justices of the Peace for the place within which the offence was committed, it shall be lawful, in case the offence is committed in Scotland, to take such offenders before the sheriff of the county, or other magistrate acting for the district within which such offence shall be committed, or where such offender shall be apprehended, without any warrant or authority other than this Act; and such sheriff or magistrate is hereby empowered and required, on the application of the railway company, to proceed in all respects as if the words "Sheriff or Magistrate" had been substituted for the word "Justice" in the said Acts, and shall be entitled summarily, and without a jury, to execute the powers thereby and hereby committed to him.

XIX. By this Act,

After reciting that by an Act, 5 & 6 Vict. c. 47, intituled, 'An Act to amend the Laws relating to the Customs,' and by Class V. of the table to the said Act annexed, certain duties of Customs are imposed upon timber and woods not otherwise charged from and after the 10th of October 1842: And that among other articles enumerated in the said class, certain duties are imposed upon wood of or from foreign countries, planed or otherwise dressed or prepared for use, and not particularly enumerated nor otherwise charged with duty: And that the said last-mentioned duties are imposed in the words following; (that is to say,) "9d. per foot of cubic contents, and further for every 100*l.* value 10*l.*; from and after the 10th of October 1842 7½*d.* per foot of cubic contents, and further for every 100*l.* value 10*l.*: And that doubts have arisen as to the time when the said duty of 7½*d.* per foot of cubic contents, and further for every 100*l.* value 10*l.*, is to commence, and it is therefore expedient to declare and explain the meaning of the said Act in that respect:—

It is Enacted,

1. That the said duty of 7½*d.* per foot of cubic contents, and further of 10*l.* for every 100*l.* value, shall commence and be payable to Her Majesty, her heirs and successors, from and after the 10th of October 1843, and not from and after the 10th of October 1842; and that the said duty of 9*d.* per foot of cubic contents, and further of 10*l.* for every 100*l.* value, shall be payable to Her Majesty, her heirs and successors, from and after the 10th of October 1842 only until and on the 10th of October 1843.

It is Enacted,

11. That the said Act and table shall be construed, and the said duties on ore of copper of the several qualities so described as aforesaid shall be chargeable and leviable, as if the words following, (namely,) "in the hundred parts of ore," were inserted immediately after the words "parts of copper" in each of the several phrases hereinbefore set forth.

It is Enacted,

IV. That the said Act and table shall be construed, and the duties of 10*s.* and 10*l.* for every 100*l.* value respectively shall be chargeable and leviable, upon pearls unset and set respectively, as if the said parenthesis had terminated immediately after the word diamonds, and as if the words "and pearls" had not been included therein or in the said exception.

And after reciting that under the said Act minerals illustrative of natural history are exempted from duty, and it is expedient that the like exemption should be extended to other specimens illustrative of natural history :—

It is Enacted,

v. That all specimens, whether animal or vegetable, illustrative of natural history, and whether of or from foreign countries, or of and from British possessions, may be imported into the United Kingdom duty free, anything in the said Act contained in anywise notwithstanding.

And after reciting that by the said Act a duty of 6d. per hundred weight is imposed upon cement stone, the produce or manufacture of the United Kingdom, exported from the United Kingdom to foreign countries, and it is expedient to repeal the same :—

It is Enacted,

vii. That from and after the passing of this Act the said duty on cement stone shall be repealed.

And after reciting that by the said Act for amending the laws relating to the Customs certain provisions are made respecting the conditions of bonds to be given upon the exportation of beef and pork from the warehouse, and also respecting the declaration from the master of the vessel in which the same is about to be exported and respecting certain penalties upon such masters : And that it is expedient to postpone the operation of the said provisions :—

It is Enacted,

ix. That from and after the passing of this Act no copper ore shall be delivered from the warehouse for the purpose of being smelted : Provided always, that any copper ore which shall be imported in a foreign ship of any country of which it is not the produce, on or before the 1st of March 1843, may be permitted to be entered and delivered for home consumption upon payment of the duty due by law upon copper ore.

It is Enacted,

XV. That no Justice of the Peace shall be disabled from acting as such Justice at any petty or special or general or quarter Sessions in any matter merely on the ground that such Justice of the Peace is an ex officio member of any board of guardians complaining, interested, or concerned in such matter, or has acted as such at any meeting of such board of guardians.

XVI. That it shall be lawful for every board of guardians constituted under the said first-recited Act to accept, take, and hold, on behalf of the union or parish respectively for which they may act, any lands, buildings, goods, effects, or other property as a corporation, and in all cases to sue and be sued in their corporate name.

XVII. That wherever a board of guardians is empowered to make any order, or to prefer any complaint, claim, or application, before Justices or otherwise, if any such board resolve to make such order, or to prefer such complaint, claim, or application, a copy of the minute of such resolution, signed by the presiding chairman of such board, and sealed with their seal, and countersigned by their clerk or person acting as their clerk, shall be deemed and taken to be sufficient proof of the making of such order, or of the preferring of such complaint, claim, application, or otherwise, as the case may be; and that whenever, either for the purpose of making an order for the removal of a pauper, or on the trial of an appeal against such order, or for any other purpose, it shall be necessary to prove to what parish a pauper has become chargeable, (if in such parish the laws for the relief of the poor shall be administered by a board of guardians or a district board,) a certificate of such pauper having so become chargeable, signed, sealed, and countersigned as aforesaid, shall be sufficient proof to what parish and at what time such pauper became and was chargeable, unless the contrary shall be proved by other legal evidence; and that in all cases in which the guardians of any parish or union are or may hereafter be empowered to make any application or complaint, or to take any proceedings before any Justices at petty or special or general or quarter Sessions, it shall be lawful for any officer of such guardians empowered by any board of such guardians, by an order in writing, under the hand of the presiding chairman of such board, and sealed with the common seal of such guardians, to make such application or complaint, or to take such proceedings on behalf of such guardians, as effectually to all intents and purposes as if the same were made or taken by such guardians, or any of them, in person.

It is Enacted,

- i. That the said Acts shall be repealed.
- ii. Provided and enacted, That all laws and ordinances heretofore passed under the authority and in pursuance of the said recited Acts or either of them, and that all things heretofore lawfully done in virtue of the said Acts or of either of them, shall hereafter be of the same validity as if the said Acts had not been repealed (save only so far as respects any such laws, ordinances, or things relating to the future appropriation of the revenue of the said colony, or such casual or territorial revenue as may accrue to Her Majesty within the same, or the future liability of such revenues to any charges to which the same may have been made subject).
- iii. That any suits or actions heretofore brought or hereafter to be brought by or against the Colonization Commissioners for South Australia, in respect of anything done before the passing of this Act, may, notwithstanding the repeal of the said Acts, be prosecuted and proceeded with in the same manner in every respect as if the said Acts had not been repealed; and that in respect of anything done before the repeal of the said Acts, the said Commissioners shall be competent to sue, and be liable to be sued, in the same manner in all respects as if the said Acts had not been repealed.
- iv. That no person or persons convicted in any court of justice in Great Britain or Ireland, or elsewhere, shall at any time or under any circumstances, be transported as a convict to any place within the said province.
- v. That it shall be lawful for Her Majesty, by any commission or commissions to be by Her Majesty from time to time issued under the Great Seal of the United Kingdom, or by any instructions under Her Majesty's signet and sign manual, to be from time to time issued with the advice of Her Majesty's Privy Council, to constitute within the said colony a Legislative Council, consisting of the governor and of seven other persons at the least, which Legislative Council shall be authorized to make laws for the peace, order, and good government of the said colony; and it shall be lawful for Her Majesty, by any such commission or commissions or instructions as aforesaid, either to appoint such councillors by name, or otherwise to provide for the selection and appointment of them, as to Her Majesty shall seem meet; and it shall also be lawful for Her Majesty, in manner aforesaid to prescribe all such rules and orders as to Her Majesty shall seem meet respecting the tenure of the offices of such councillors, and respecting the course and manner of proceeding to be by the said Legislative Council observed in the enactment of laws, and respecting the transmission of such laws for the confirmation or disallowance of Her Majesty, or the reservation of them for the signification of Her Majesty's pleasure, and respecting the effect of any such disallowance or reservation, all which rules and orders shall, within the said colony, have the force and effect of law, until the same shall have been revoked or altered by Her Majesty in manner aforesaid.
- vi. That it shall be lawful for Her Majesty, by any such commission or commissions or instructions as aforesaid, to convene a General Assembly, to be elected by the freeholders and other inhabitants of the said colony, in such and the same manner as if this Act and the said recited Acts had not been passed, and to authorize the governor for the time being of the said colony, with the advice and consent of the said General Assembly, and of a Legislative Council, to be by Her Majesty for that purpose appointed, to make laws for the peace, order and good government of the said colony, or it shall be lawful for Her Majesty, in manner aforesaid, to constitute a General Assembly, for the purposes aforesaid, consisting of a single house of General Assembly alone, which one house of General Assembly shall be composed, in such proportions as to Her Majesty may seem meet, of members to be nominated by Her Majesty, and of other members to be elected by such freeholders or other inhabitants: and it shall be lawful for Her Majesty, by any such commission or commissions or instructions as aforesaid, to establish such rules and orders as to Her Majesty shall seem meet for the nomination or election of the members of the said General Assembly, as the case may be, and to determine how and where such election shall be holden, and for that purpose to divide or to provide for the division of the said colony into electoral districts, and to determine what shall be the qualification of the persons so to be elected, and of the voters at any such elections, and to regulate all other things for which it may be expedient to provide, in order to the meeting of any such General Assembly; and it shall also be lawful for Her Majesty, by any such commission or instructions as aforesaid, to reserve to the governor of the said colony the exclusive right of initiating all votes of public money in such General Assembly, and to establish all such rules and orders in reference to any laws to be made by the said General Assembly as are hereinbefore mentioned in reference to any laws to be made by the said Legislative Council.

And after reciting that by the hereinbefore recited Acts the Colonization Commissioners for South Australia were authorized and empowered, for defraying the necessary costs, charges, and expenses of founding the said intended colony, and for providing for the expenses of the said Commissioners, and for defraying all costs, charges, and expenses incurred in carrying the said

Acts into execution, and in applying for and obtaining the same from time to time to borrow and take up at interest, not exceeding 10*l*. per centum per annum, any sum or sums of money, not exceeding in the whole 200,000*l*., by granting or issuing to any person or persons willing to advance such monies, bonds or obligatory writings, under their hands and seals, to be termed "South Australia Colonial Revenue Securities," or by selling or granting perpetual annuities, or annuities for any life or lives, or for any term or terms of years, on such terms as to the said Commissioners should appear to be reasonable; and it was further provided and declared, that all such sum or sums of money so borrowed or taken up, and all such annuities to be granted as aforesaid, should be a charge upon the ordinary revenue or produce of all rates, duties, and taxes to be levied and collected within the said province, and should be deemed and taken to be a public debt owing by the said province; and it was also provided, that it should be lawful for the said Commissioners at any time to borrow or take up any sum or sums of money for the said purposes at a lower rate of interest than any security or securities previously given by them might bear, and therewith to pay off and discharge such previously existing security or securities bearing a higher rate of interest, and likewise to repurchase and redeem the said annuities so often as it should appear that the charge created thereby could be reduced: And that in pursuance of the said powers, the said Commissioners did from time to time borrow and take up several sums of money, at the said yearly rate of interest of 10*l*. by the hundred, and did grant certain annuities, with power to redeem the same, by payment at the rate of 100*l*. for every 6*l*. of such annuities, and did give or grant certain bonds or writings obligatory for the sums so borrowed or taken up, or for securing the said annuities, which said bonds are still outstanding and unpaid: And that the holders of the said bonds or writings obligatory have signified in writing their consent to receive, instead of the said rates of interest or annuity, one uniform yearly rate of 3*l*. 10*s*. by the hundred upon the principal sums secured by the said bonds, or payable in redemption of the said annuities, provided the regular payment of the said reduced rate of interest or annuity be duly assured to them; and it is expedient that such assurance should be given, and that provision should be made for the due and regular payment of the said reduced interest or annuities:—

It is Enacted,

vii. That from and after the passing of this Act the holders of the said bonds or writings obligatory shall be entitled to receive interest or annuities, on the several sums so secured or covenanted to be paid as aforesaid, and which said sums amount in all to 85,800*l*., at one uniform yearly rate of 3*l*. 10*s*. by the hundred only.

And for the better and more perfect assurance of the due payment of the said interest or annuities,— viii. That it shall be lawful for the Lord High Treasurer or the Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland for the time being, or any three or more of them, if he or they shall be satisfied that the general revenue of the said province of South Australia is insufficient (after defraying the necessary costs and charges of the civil government, and of the due administration of justice, and the maintenance of peace, order, and good government therein, for the payment of the interest or annuities upon the said sums secured or covenanted to be paid by the said bonds or writings obligatory, or any part thereof, to authorize and direct the issue out of the Consolidated Fund of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, or out of the growing produce of the said fund, to such person or persons as they shall appoint, of such sum or sums as shall be required for paying such interest or annuities as above mentioned, at the several respective rates at which the same are now payable, as shall have accrued or become due previously to the passing of this Act, and shall not have been paid, or that may hereafter accrue and become due at the reduced rate before mentioned, or for paying any part thereof: Provided always, that the several principal sums secured by the said bonds or writings obligatory shall remain and be a charge on the revenues of the said colony, and nothing herein contained shall be taken to relieve the said revenues from the said charge, or from the charge of the interest or annuities due or that may hereafter become due in respect thereof, or of any portion or portions of such interest or annuities as shall be paid out of the Consolidated Fund of the United Kingdom in the manner before mentioned, or from repaying to the said Consolidated Fund, under such regulations as may be from time to time made in that respect by the said Lord High Treasurer or Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury, such sums as may have been from time to time paid out of the said Consolidated Fund on account thereof.

And after reciting that from the insufficiency or failure of the means provided by the said before-recited Acts for defraying the costs, charges, and expenses of founding the said colony, and of providing for the government thereof, and for the other expenses, costs, and charges mentioned in the said first-recited Act, it became necessary that further aid should be granted for that purpose; and by 4 & 5 Vict. c. 13, the Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury were empowered to advance and lend to the Colonization Commissioners for South Australia for the time being, out of the Consolidated Fund of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, any sum or sums of money, not exceeding 155,000*l*. in the whole, at such rate of interest as the said Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury should direct, the same to be applied for the payment of bills drawn and expenses incurred on account of the colony of South Australia; and it was further enacted, that the repayment of all advances so made, with the interest accruing thereon, should be secured in such manner as might be provided by any Act passed for that purpose in the then session of Parliament: and that in pursuance of the said Act certain advances have been made for the purposes therein mentioned, but it is not expedient that any further claim should be made upon the said Colonization Commissioners, or upon the revenues of the said province in respect of such advances, or of any interest thereon:—

It is Enacted,

ix. That the said sum of 155,000*l*. shall be taken to have been granted in aid of the revenues of South Australia, and that all further claim for the repayment thereof, or for interest thereon, shall be abandoned.

And after reciting that certain other debts and engagements have been incurred and contracted in respect of the said colony, under the powers of the said recited Acts, and it is necessary to make provision for the liquidation thereof, and for payment of interest thereon in the meantime:—

It is Enacted,

x. That it shall be lawful for the governor of the colony of South Australia, by and with the consent of the Lord High Treasurer, or of any three or more of the Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury, to make out and issue, in satisfaction of the said debts, or of any claims arising from or in respect thereof, debentures, to be charged upon and payable from the revenues of the said colony, and to bear interest in the meantime at a yearly rate not exceeding 5*l.* by the hundred, to be in like manner payable from the said revenues: Provided always, that nothing herein contained shall be taken to relieve from responsibility any party or parties who may have become or shall hereafter become accountable for the application of any portion or portions of the said sums so raised, or of any other sums raised under the said recited Acts, or any of them, or in respect of any of the said debts or engagements remaining to be liquidated.
